POLICE DEPARTMENT,

Municipality of St. Croix, V. I., U. S.
October 29, 1921,

Police Notice.

THE following excerpt from paragraph 37, Police Regulations for St. Croix, is hereby brought to public notice for the information of all concerned:

"The police are entitled to take up dogs found without a dog stamp, and if no one redeems them within three times 24 hours, the Police can order them to be killed. The same applies to dogs roaming about the streets from 10.00 p. m. to 6.00 a. m., and also to bitches in rutting time."

Beginning Monday, November 7, 1921, the above regulation in regards to dogs will be rigidly enforced and all dogs found unlawfully on the streets will be taken over by the Police.

Dog stamps can be procured at any time from the Police Headquarters.

C. ESPERSEN,
Acting Director of Police.

PARAMOUNT PICTURE

DOUGLAS FAIRBANK'S TOP-NOTCHER

"The Knickerbocker Buckaroo"

Teddy Drake, the part played by Douglas Fairbanks, belongs to the class of fortunate young chaps who waste their time and money in the clubs and on the night life of New York. His playful habit of leaping over the tables and other articles of furniture in the aristocratic club that is honored by having his name on its roll and being general upsetter for the organization, ends by his being expelled.

The matter is serious enough to make even Teddy take it seriously and he arrives at the conclusion that his thoughtlessness comes of thinking only on himself, so he resolves to give the other fellow a thought and try to make him happy. No sooner is this great idea born than he starts to put it into practice. Selecting a spot on the map by shutting his eyes.....

Teddy's gallantry was undertaken before he had finished dressing and he is minus a shirt and a collar? His attempts to beg, borrow or steal a shirt from the passengers meet with no success until he runs into a Mexican bandit, and then,

THE RACE IS ON
