"Carmel Myers" in "A Daughter Of The Law".

A Thrilling Story of Desperate Deeds after Dark—And of a Beautiful Woman's Daring Adventures.

She Used Her Beauty to Lure the Most Desperate Gang of Criminals in New York to Justice.

Back in the days when girls wore ears and lacquered their faces in private, the spectacle of a young miss who dressed herself up as an immoral woman and mingled with bums and gangsters to save her brother from the toils of a band of crooks, would hardly be accepted as plausible enough to be even the heroine of a melodrama. Nowadays such a character is looked upon as realism, for melodrama.

Carmel Myers, as the star of "A Daughter of the Law", play just such a self-determined young lady and because such a person is accepted the onlooker can sit back with no pettifogging criticism popping into his mind and enjoy what develops into a rapid, exciting and genuine melodrama, with plenty of the "melo".

Show concluded with:

"His Unlucky Birth"

1 REEL COMEDY.

Dear Mr. Editor,

If Mr. Jiggs will put the plural to "Factory," and add "Ginnery" he will have the answer to his first two questions.

Asking such, as the first two questions, in print, Mr. Jiggs is quite unable to grasp any explanation, or answer to the two last.

Thanking you Mr. Editor,
