St. Croix's public schools are shaping up, as promised by Gov. Schneider.

During an unannounced visit yesterday to Alfredo Andrews Elementary School, the governor, Public Works Commissioner Ann Abramson and their entourage examined first-hand the progress being made by contracted maintenance crews.

Beefed up maintenance staffs are repairing roofs, painting inside and outside, fixing plumbing and electrical problems in all St. Croix public schools.

"It shows the young people that we're totally committed to them," Schneider said. "Like most things, if you're totally committed, you'll get it done."

V.I. executive branch officials have just begun their survey of maintenance work being done in local schools.

"I think it's going great," said Lt. Gov. Mapp, on his way to join the governor on the Alfredo Andrews tour. "We're following our commitment."

Alfredo Andrews' paint crew said they expect to be finished inside the school by the first day of classes, though outside work may continue during the very beginning of the school year if certain jobs are delayed due to rainy weather.

Abramson, who was described by an employee as foreman of the territory's entire school maintenance effort, talked with craftsmen who gave advice, shared insights and problems. Discussing the repair of an auditorium door, the commissioner offered Public Works' assistance in repairing such things.

"We're doing the best we can to make the schools look pre-

Senate C'ttee Told Govt Attorneys Working For Peanuts

Acting Attorney General Alva Swan defended the territorial Justice Department's budget at a finance committee meeting yesterday.

Swan had been turned away from an earlier July 17 hearing by finance chair Sen. Alicia Hansen because he had served over 180 days — and the office was, technically, without a supervising attorney general.

But following an appeal from Gov. Schneider, Hansen accepted Swan's credentials as the supervisor of the office.

Nevertheless, Swan took a pass on answering questions on policy, referring those to Julio Brady, who was nominated for the position of chief Attorney General July 25. Brady was not present at yesterday's hearing.

At the hearing, Hansen called several budget items from last year into question. Two firms employed by contract — Roche Biomedical Laboratories and the law firm of Ballard, Sphar, Andrews and Ingersoll — apparently do not have business licenses in the Virgin Islands. Roche charged $50,000 to the government last year, and the law firm charged nearly $400,000.

Sen. Hansen also referred to ongoing problems at the attorney general's office, particularly the loss of experienced attorneys to private or federal practice. Hansen said the loss could be attributed to low salaries — and Swan wholeheartedly agreed.

"All the assistant attorneys general are underpaid. In some cases I would say grossly underpaid," Swan said. "Salary increases would solve many of the problems in the office."

"Nevertheless, the reality is that the money is not there," Swan said.

Schneider Scraps Plan For Mile Long Steel Bridge In STT

Special to the AVIS

Plans for a mile long steel and concrete bridge above Estate Thomas were scrapped once and for all Wednesday afternoon when Gov. Schneider accepted alternative proposals from two engineering firms in a two hour meeting that focused on solutions to downtown traffic problems and critical repairs to the waterfront bulkhead.

Schneider, Public Works commissioner Ann Abramson, PWD strategic planner Tyronne Martin and engineers from Parsons Brinckhoff of Florida and Kimball Chase of New Hampshire reviewed technical drawings, artist renderings, site planning maps, traffic flow studies and historic presrvation recommendations in hammering our alternative proposals to redirect the funding from the now defunct hill bypass project.

Features of the engineering proposals that will result in reducing the traffic problems in downtown Charlotte Amalie included re-routing of short portions of Veterans Drive, relocation and enhancement of the cruise ship tender dock and relocation of the U.S. Coast Guard Marine Facility. Also presented were plans for a landscaped pedestrian promenade.

Schneider noted that 18 million from the Raphune Hill Bypass project will fund the downtown project as well as a plan to ease traffic congestion from Raphune Hill to Fort Mylner. The V.I. Government is seeking the federal government's assistance in transferring the funds for the two projects.

He said after the meeting that there exists a need to effect critical repairs to the waterfront bulkhead and the administration has decided that while those repairs are underway, additional traffic lanes will be added to ease the downtown traffic problems that have plagued residents for years. "We plan a two fold approach to this

Former President Carter Brings Safe Water Crusade To Southern Sudan

By EILEEN ALT POWELL

NYAMINI, Sudan (AP) — The water that sustains the people in this tiny farming hamlet in southern Sudan has also brought them sickness and death.

So they lined up outside their thatch-roofed huts to cheer as Jimmy Carter arrived, thanking the former president for a cease-fire he negotiated that opened the way for health care and water treatment they had never before received.

Since the cease-fire began March 28, aid workers backed by the Carter Center in Atlanta have moved into villages like Nyamini to try to eradicate Guinea worm disease and other waterborne illnesses and to vaccinate children.

Carter was on tour not only to promote better health care but to press the Khartoum government and southern rebels, who have fought each other for 12 years, to extend the 3 1/2-month cease-fire and begin peace talks.

He spent Thursday and Friday visiting villages in the bush, and today and Sunday was meeting with government and rebel leaders in hopes of ensuring that fighting would not again block his campaign against disease.

Ridding the world of Guinea worm — a parasite picked up from unclean water — has been a Carter crusade since the late 1980s. The remote tropical villages in southern Sudan are among its last bastions.

Getting to Nyamini was part of the battle for Carter, his wife Rosalynn and their son, Chip. It took a 3 1/2-hour flight from the capital Khartoum to Juba, 720 miles south, then a bone-jarring hour west on a winding dirt road.

Along the road people walked barefoot, with their belongings balanced on their heads. Electricity and telephones are unknown. Firewood is so precious a family makes do with four small tree branches a day.

In Nyamini, a village of 400, Carter grimaced as he watched a health worker try to pull out a yard-long Guinea worm from the leg of farmer Luka Deng.

"It is very painful," the 24-year-old Deng told Carter. "I cannot stand. I cannot keep my cattle."

To Carter, who has made improving the lot of the Third World his mission since leaving the White House in 1981, the visit symbolized a brighter future.

"Today is a day I will never forget," he told the villagers. "I will ... never forget those who will never again know Guinea worm and never again know river blindness and the children who will never again have polio and measles."

Carter said he was very pleased with what was accomplished during the cease-fire: 2,336 villages identified by health workers as infested with Guinea worm, 150,000 nylon water filters distributed, 40,000 people treated for river blindness, more than 95,000 children vaccinated.

Sudan is rife with disease. Health Minister Galwak Deng estimates that one-quarter of the nation's 27 million people catch malaria every year. One-third of the world's 160,000 annual Guinea worm cases are in Sudan, mainly in the south. Diarrhea is rampant, and often fatal.

The civil war has made matters worse. More than 1.3 million people have died in the conflict and resulting famines.

The rebels, mostly Christian or of tribal religions, want autonomy from the Islamic north. Carter said he had access to rebel leaders Riak Machar and John Garang, as well as Sudanese President Lt. Gen. Omar el-Bashir.

In the past, he used such access to help pacify Haiti and bring North Korea to negotiations. But Carter also sees a strong link between humanitarian work and peacekeeping, with success in his health programs "giving me credibility" with combatants on both sides.

Underscoring his neutrality, Carter not only visited government-held Nyamini but also Tambura, a village of several thousand near the Central African Republic that is held by the rebel Sudanese Peoples Liberation Army.

In Tambura, as men of the Zandi tribe beat hollow logs and women swayed in skirts of fresh-cut leaves, Carter visited a hospital struggling to combat river blindness.

The disease, carried by black flies, can be contained with an annual dose of the medicine ivermectin. Yet in some villages, nearly half the people suffer from its itchy scales and many of the adults are blind.

The United Nation's Operation Lifeline Sudan, the World Health Organization, CARE and the California-based International Medical Corps are all working with the Carter Center on the Sudan health project.

"This campaign has brought a lot of hope, a lot of enthusiasm," Carter said. "But there is so much more to be done."

Friends Of Former Resident Angela Smith Horrified Over Murders Of Her Two Daughters By Her Ex-Lover

By LAUNCE RAKE
Avis Staff Writer

The deaths of two teenaged daughters of former St. Croix resident Angela Smith at the hands of an estranged boyfriend has shocked Smith's friends here.

The news of their deaths come as yet another reminder of the terrible cost of domestic violence for island residents, who recently saw the murder of Trinidad-born Carol Sampson, allegedly at the hands of her estranged husband, also from Trinidad.

The shocking killings prompted friends of the family to start a special fund for contributions to Smith and her family.

Hikedo, 15, and Ann Marie Smith, 14, were killed in a house explosion when police rushed in to save them from Trinidad-born Steven Joseph, also a former St. Croix resident.

Joseph, 32, held the two girls hostage with a can of gasoline, police in Plantation, Florida told the Associated Press yesterday. The explosion occurred after two police officers — both critically injured in the blast — broke through a door to rescue the girls.

Angela Smith, 42, is well known on the island. She served as the director of the blood bank at the Juan F. Luis Hospital and Medical Center, and reportedly worked at the Hess Oil Virgin Islands Corporation medical center as well.

Joseph, a native of Trinidad, was Smith's former fiance and a former student of Central High School.

Newspaper reports from Miami said that Joseph faced sexual molestation charges with minors but the matters were dropped after the victims were urged by their mother not to testify against the accused.

Joseph died along with his two stepdaughters whom he held hostage. He lit a can of gasolene when two officers attempted to enter the room through a backdoor. The officers were also critically hurt in the blast.

Mary Mingus, co-director of the St. Croix Women's Coalition, said she is a personal friend of Angela Smith. While saying she did not speak of Smith as a client — clients' identities are confidential — Mingus said Smith's experience was an example of the horror of domestic violence.

"She did everything right," Mingus said, including leaving the abusive relationship, relocating and getting a restraining order against Joseph.

"Angela is an example of a domestic violence victim that did everything possible to protect herself," Mingus said. "We live in a society where they say 'Why doesn't the woman leave (an abusive relationship)?' It puts all the blame on the victim."

Mingus said she personally and others working with the Women's Coalition were shaken by the deaths of the two girls. She said these killings, along with the murder of Carol Sampson two months ago, has meant that three people known to the coalition have been killed in as many months.

"She is a wonderful woman and a dedicated mother to her children," Mingus said. "I feel devastated to learn of what happened to her and hope she recovers from her tragedy."

Contributions have started to come in to the special account started by anonymous friends of the family in Florida.

Those wishing to contribute should send checks or money orders to the Angela Smith Funeral Donation Fund, Terra Bank N.P., 3191 Coral Pent House One, Miami, Florida 33145, attention: Karen Garcia-Vazquez. People with additional questions can contact Garcia-Vazquez at (305) 448-4898.

Montserratians Wary Of Volcano; Hundreds Fleeing Tiny Island

By CHRISTOPHER PFAU

Although volcanic activity in Montserrat remains at the orange alert, hundreds of her citizens have been evacuating and heading for neighboring Caribbean islands.

Many of the evacuees are children and elderly, said Keith Greaves, information and media liaison for the country's Emergency and Operations Center. Greaves said at least 200 people have evacuated recently, however, he said that was a "conservative estimate."

"People are saying we're still in a high state of alert and the parents of younger children feel it's a good time to get them out the way in the event of a worst case scenario, which is a major eruption," Greaves said. "It's precautionary, to ease the mind."

Local airlines have been booked and increasing flights off the island.

LIAT airline said it was "very booked" and increased flights.

The volcanic activity is in the Langs Soufriere, which is in the Soufriere Hill Range on the south part of the island.

On July 18, residents reported rumblings like fleets of jet planes, unpleasant smells of sulfur and a light ash fall.

On July 19, the 7-by-11 mile island experienced its first recorded volcanic earthquake. No ash fall has been reported since Saturday.

The seismic team continues to monitor the earthquakes 24-hours-a-day, officials said. Equipment that monitors sulfur dioxide and other gases in the atmosphere had been expected to arrive yesterday.

The scientific team said the situation does not warrant any change in the level of alertness and there's no need to go beyond the current stage of response.

A war ship was expected yesterday to arrive back on the island for evacuation purposes in case of emergency, officials said.

The U.S. Office of Foreign Disaster Service arrived on the island Wednesday, officials said. Trinidad's Seismic Research Service brought in more equipment Saturday

The team of French, American and Caribbean experts on the island said Wednesday night there have been no significant temperature changes, and the magnitude within the shallow earthquakes swarms have not exceeded the 3.7 level on the Richter scale.

Since July 18, the government's Emergency Operation Center has been holding briefings with district chairmen, who have been briefed on evacuation procedures.

Sensitive seismic equipment has been placed on different areas of the island.

Montserrat native and Virgin Island resident Eddie Donoghue said he will cancel the Caribbean Domino Tournament that was to take place Aug. 10-14 during the Pilgrimage Festival. A full refund will be given, and can be obtained by calling 774-1882 or by going to Percya's Bus Stop in St. Thomas at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Hansen: It Costs $28,000 A Year To Keep Prisoner In Jail

By LAUNCE RAKE
Avis Staff Writer

Assistant Attorney General Elwood York (also director of the Bureau of Corrections) presented his proposal for funding for next year.

While most departments are looking at a freeze or a reduction from the previous year's funding level, Corrections is requesting a 10.5 percent increase — much of which is slated for capital improvements.

Sen. Alicia Hansen, chair of the Finance Committee, took the opportunity to praise York's rehabilitation efforts, including innovations like the use of prisoners in community works projects.

Pointing out that it costs about $5,000 to educate a student a year, versus a yearly outlay of $28,000 to incarcerate a prisoner here, Hansen said York's emphasis on rehabilitation was a positive direction for the territory.

"What we need to do is train our people," Hansen said. "We need to make sure we give them the skills for survival, so they don't need to steal or worse to survive."

"You must be commended for your new vision," Hansen said.

York referred to several new programs at the bureau.

"We are aggressively pursuing federal allocation for a 'boot camp' system," York said. In the boot camp model, low risk prisoners with less than one year terms would serve a shorter, physically intensive term in a camp with military style discipline. The controversial correctional technique has been tried in several states on the mainland with varying degrees of success.

York said the bureau was looking to the federal government for a $50,000 planning grant for the boot camp.

York also referred to more intensive training and testing of prisoners to teach vocational skills, grant high school equivalency diplomas and eventually college degrees.

York said costs incurred from other departments — including a $400,000 bill coming from the territory's hospitals for taking care of prisoners — could be paid off by volunteer prisoners who were, at the same time, learning a trade.

Without an aggressive educational and vocational training program, York warned, "We are going to have a revolving door" of prisoners returning to crime upon their release. He said later only about 10 percent of prisoners were serving life sentences, meaning nearly all will eventually return to the community.

"Our goal is to facilitate rehabilitation," York said later.

In a related topic for York and Senators David Jones and Hansen was prison overcrowding. Currently, the corrections system on St. Croix has about 700 inmates.

"The predicament were faced with is that we have to release people to provide room for new inmates," York said. In comments made after the formal hearing, York said he wished to avoid a law suit for overcrowding.

"It's really prevention, in a way," he said. He pointed out that there were now more than 150 people in the St. Thomas prison in space originally designed for 51.

As at least a partial solution, the budget submitted for Senate approval yesterday called for a capital appropriation for 500 new beds and space for prisoners.

However, York emphasized he was not simply "warehousing" prisoners. He said the space for prisoners would not only be in maximum security lock ups, but would be distributed among half-way houses, minimum and maximum security facilities on the island.

Judge Denies Subpoena Request For Filmmaker

By Estes Thompson

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) - The detective who found the bloody glove on O.J. Simpson's estate used racial epithets in taped interviews during the past decade, a screenwriter testified yesterday, contradicting his testimony at Simpson's murder trial.

But a judge rejected a bid by Simpson's lawyers to force the screenwriter to hand over the tapes and order her to testify in Los Angeles. Judge William Z. Wood said he considered the screenwriter's work fiction and said Detective Mark Fuhrman's was helping her in her project.

"The fact that this lady was writing a work of fiction...she wasn't sure if the views expressed were Detective Fuhrman's or general views," Woos said following his hearing.

Simpson's lead attorney, Johnnie Cochran Jr., said he would appeal the decision.

Fuhrman's attorney praised the ruling and said Fuhrman was happy.

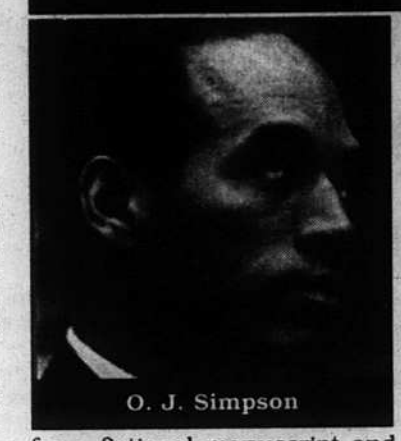

Cochran asked North Carolina screenwriter Laura Hart McKinny several times whether Fuhrman used the word "nigger." McKinny who interviewed Los Angeles police officers for a screenplay, said he did.

Tapes of the interviews conducted from 1985 to 1994 also showed that, according to Fuhrman, police officers would occasionally rip up a black person's driver's license, then charge the person with driving without a license.

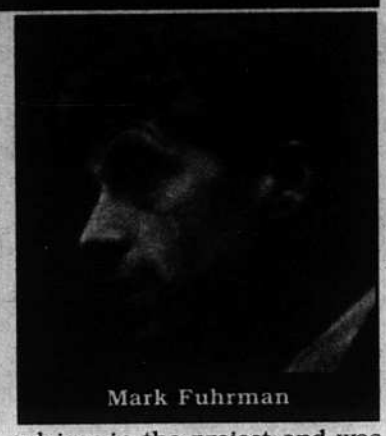

Cochran said it was critical to Simpson's defense to have the tapes and McKinny's testimony at the Los Angeles trial, where Fuhrman denied under oath that he had used the epithet in referring to blacks during the past 10 years.

McKinny made the tapes from confidential interviews with Los Angeles police officers that she used as background for a fictional manuscript and screenplay titled "Men Against Women." She fought the subpoena, claiming she was acting as a journalist and they were irrelevant to Simpson's case.

Wood said he considered McKinny's work fiction. He also said Fuhrman was a technical adviser in the project and was helping the professor with dialogue and character development.

"The issue in this case is the guilt or innocence of Mr. Simpson, and whether or not he committed certain acts," the judge said.

Wood called the material "collateral." The tapes were considered critical by Simpson's attorneys to their claim that Fuhrman is a racist who planted evidence in an attempt to frame the black ex-football star in the murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Fuhrman's attorney, Robert Tourtelot, said that if Fuhrman used the epithet in the interviews, it was done in "trying to give the author a sense of what a fictionalized cop might say or do."

"His reaction is that he was pleased that the judge followed the law. He was absolutely right," Tourtelot said.

"I've said it over and over and over again, that it's outrageous to suggest that Mark Fuhrman is a racist," Tourtelot said. "The defense has no defense. They're desperate defense lawyers with no case and the only thing they have to play is the race card."

Smith Gets 30 Years For Drowning Two Sons

By Christopher Sullivan

UNION S.C. (AP) - A jury swiftly rejected the death penalty for Susan Smith, sentencing her to life in prison yesterday after her lawyer argued she is tormented enough in her own "lake of fire" for drowning her two young sons.

Ms. Smith gasped as the unanimous verdict was read after just two hours of deliberations and cried as she was led from the courtroom after a hug from her attorneys. The boys' father, David Smith, sat stone-faced.

Circuit Judge William Howard told jurors afterwards their choice was "the toughest moral decision anyone has to make." Ms. Smith will be eligible for parole in 30 years.

The 23-year-old mother didn't testify during her trial and declined to make a statement to jurors before their deliberations began after emotional closing arguments earlier in the day.

David Smith, who said he wanted his ex-wife executed, said after the verdict, "I do have some sort of starting point now where I can start to rest easier and have somewhat more peace of mind."

He said he could not imagine visiting Ms. Smith in jail, and was thinking of moving away from Union to escape the memories.

The jury of nine men and three women had taken the same amount of time July 23 to convict Ms. Smith of murder.

Ms. Smith's lawyer, David Bruck, said in his closing argument that her grief, remorse and memories while serving life behind bars would be torment enough. A psychiatrist had said earlier that Ms. Smith was suicidal.

"This young woman is in a lake of fire," Bruck said. "That's her punishment."

Prosecutor Tommy Pope told jurors Ms. Smith's remorse for rolling her only children into a lake as they remained strapped in their car seats was meaningless.

"She may be sorry - now," he said, his voice rising. "But was she sorry when she dropped that hand brake down?"

Pope laid photographs of 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex on the jury box rail and said they were "those same little boys who were happily riding in their car seats that night."

But Bruck, holding a Bible, read a story from the Gospel of John about a woman who committed adultery - an offense punishable by stoning to death.

"He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her," Bruck read.

"You have a choice, and you can make a better choice than what she made," he told the jury. "Her judgment was impaired, but yours is not."

Public opinion in Union, a town of 10,000 people, had been strongly in favor of the death sentence shortly after the crime. But many people became more sympathetic to Ms. Smith after learning about her troubled history, including sexual abuse by her stepfather.

The divisions remained in the crowd that gathered in front of the courthouse to hear the verdict.

"She's crying out for help. She just needs help. If they'd given Susan the death chair it wouldn't bring those boys back," said Christine Bird, 56.

Another woman in the crowd, Holly Tator, said the death sentence would have been more just. "What she did was wrong and she planned it all along. She was pleading to the whole nation and lying all along," Tator said.

Bruck argued during the trial that Ms. Smith snapped under unbearable personal pressures and mental illness. Ms. Smith's father, Harry Vaughan, killed himself when she was 6; defense lawyers contended Ms. Smith suffered from the same serious mental illness.

The prosecutor claimed she killed her only children to remove them as obstacles to a love affair with a wealthy boyfriend who once told her he wasn't ready to be father.

The jury convicted Ms. Smith July 23 of popping the safety brake on her car Oct. 25 and rolling it down a ramp into a lake with the boys still strapped inside.

For nine days, she stuck to her story about a black carjacker who commandeered the car as she drove on a dark and empty back road. Friends and relatives joined a panicky search, until she confessed to killing them Nov. 3.

"Susan Smith chose to drive to the lake. She chose to send Michael and Alex down that ramp," Pope said. "She chose to lie about it; she chose to run away from it; she chose to blame others for it"

Pope reminded jurors of television interviews in which Ms. Smith repeated her hoax over and over again.

"I'm begging you to review those videos," he said. "This is the most heinous crime that you can imagine. This is the type of crime that is envisioned by the death penalty."

Bruck also asked jurors to remember Smith's wrenching testimony and his former wife's sob as he spoke. "David's testimony was not so much about her punishment as it was part of her punishment," Bruck said.

Even if Ms. Smith had told investigators the truth right away, it would have been too late to save the boys, Bruck told the jury. He referred to a videotaped reenactment that prosecutors used to show jurors that it took Ms. Smith's car six minutes to sink with the boys strapped inside.

"Those six minutes are awful to contemplate, but they do not mean she could have saved those boys," Bruck said.

Panel Studies Cyberspace Money System Of The Future

By DAVE SKIDMORE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Michael Castle displayed a bulky yellow flashlight to a momentarily puzzled audience at a hearing on the future of money.

It was, he said, a symbol of the future — not because of built-in gizmos including a radio and a siren, but because a constituent had purchased it over the Internet, the global web of interlinked computers.

"I'm not sure I'd want this flashlight," Castle, R-Del., said Tuesday, demonstrating the siren for members of his House Banking monetary policy subcommittee.

But it proved handy, at least, to illustrate his point that technology is rapidly transforming the monetary system and challenging old notions of what money is, how it is exchanged and how its flow is monitored and controlled.

More than 25,000 merchants in 150 countries are already on the Internet, selling or advertising products and services to 20 million users, a figure that will grow to 100 million within five years, according to MasterCard International.

It is time, Castle said, for lawmakers to start grappling with the implications of "an entirely new monetary system in cyberspace, one that transcends national governments and national boundaries."

For instance, how will the Federal Reserve Board measure the amount and velocity of money flowing through the Internet? How will the Internal Revenue Service audit transactions conducted anonymously without paper records? What laws apply when a U.S. consumer orders a product from a business overseas and the goods never arrive?

"On the Internet ... it is difficult to tell if a transaction has taken place since there is no central authority to track and report it," said David M. Van Lear, chief executive of Electronic Payment Services Inc., a 2 1/2-year-old joint venture of four banks.

The lawmakers received seemingly conflicting advice from Van Lear and the other experts.

They were told that government will be crucial to fostering stability of the new electronic monetary system and public trust in it, but that premature or too much regulation could stifle innovation.

The new technology, the experts said, will both open new avenues for fraud and offer new protections and safeguards. The system, some said, needs to be fully auditable so tax and criminal authorities can reconstruct a series of transactions, but it also should protect Americans' privacy.

David Chaum, chairman of DigiCash Inc., said his version of electronic cash, or e-cash, would provide the same privacy protection and anonymity in small transactions as traditional cash.

Using encrypted codes and special software that offer much more security than the current unprotected transfer of credit card information via the Internet, consumers could download cash into the hard drive of their personal computers.

They would spend it by transferring it to merchants via computer, Chaum said. Or they could store the cash on "smart cards" equipped with a computer chip capable of storing far more information than the magnetic strips now on credit and debit cards.

The cards then would function like pocket money and could be used in vending machines, parking meters and subway turnstiles equipped to receive them.

MasterCard and Visa are developing similar smart cards but, unlike Chaum's, theirs would generate an audit trail that could help law enforcement officials combatting tax evasion, counterfeiting and money laundering.

Rosalind L. Fisher, executive vice president of Visa U.S.A., a consortium of financial institutions, urged Congress to maintain public confidence in new forms of electronic payment by allowing them to be offered only through institutions subject to supervision by banking regulators. But she added that additional regulation would stifle innovation.

Castle, who plans at least one more hearing on the future of money this fall, agreed that Congress should hold off on legislating for now but should be prepared to move quickly if problems develop.

ICC Approves $4B Burlington Northern-Santa Fe Merger

By TOM STRONG

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its biggest and perhaps last merger decision, the Interstate Commerce Commission agreed to create the country's largest rail network through the $4 billion marriage of Burlington Northern Inc. and Santa Fe Pacific Corp.

The 4-0 vote by the ICC on Thursday continues the consolidation of the railroad industry. The regulatory agency has approved five other mergers among major railways since 1980, including Union Pacific-Chicago and North Western earlier this year.

"There's a lot of concern, I think, out there about whether there's going to be additional discussion of future mergers," said the ICC's chairwoman, Linda J. Morgan. "Interestingly enough, you may see more combinations among smaller railroads."

But Congress is moving to kill the 108-year-old ICC, possibly by year's end, and the Justice Department could get authority over mergers.

"I do not consider this the end of consolidation," said analyst Mark Altherr of Salomon Brothers Inc., but approval could be tougher with a move to the Justice Department.

The ICC will put the decision in writing by Aug. 23, and the companies could complete the merger by the end of September, said Rob Krebs, Santa Fe's chairman.

The new rail network would stretch from Canada to Mexico, with 33,000 miles of track in the Midwest, West and Southeast. It would have about $7 billion in annual revenue.

The railroads plan to eliminate 2,750 jobs and save $450 million while speeding the flow of goods across the country.

The companies and analysts foresee benefits for automakers, farmers and other shippers, although some critics worry about harm to competition.

Network operations probably will be in Fort Worth, Texas, where Burlington Northern has its headquarters, Krebs said. The companies have not decided on their corporate base. Santa Fe's home is the Chicago suburb of Schaumburg, Ill.

The merger combines Burlington Northern's specialty in hauling grain, coal, autos and timber with Santa Fe's pioneering use of intermodal transportation — carrying semitrailers on flat-bed rail cars.

Another benefit is the enhanced opportunity to ship goods over long distances without switching carriers.

The ICC rejected most complaints about potential competitive harm. Commissioners noted that Burlington Northern and Santa Fe had negotiated agreements with its chief rivals, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, and other lines to ensure continued competition on routes under scrutiny by regulators.

EDITORIAL:

Turning Trash Into A Cash Commodity

Before turning the page on the month of July 1995, we take note of an event which took place a month ago which delivered an important message on something Virgin Islanders deal with every day, and will be dealing with for years to come: trash.

The second annual Solid Waste Conference certainly provided "food for thought" for territorial residents and government officials. The message to both groups was essentially the same: the challenge of solid waste is upon us, and if not dealt with properly, can literally overwhelm and undermine all of the time, energy and infrastructure we put forth to improve our quality of life.

From an overflowing landfill which frequently catches fire, to garbage pans overflowing, to litter lining the streets of all towns on all islands, trash is with us as a visible source of a dilemma which won't go away. What can be done?

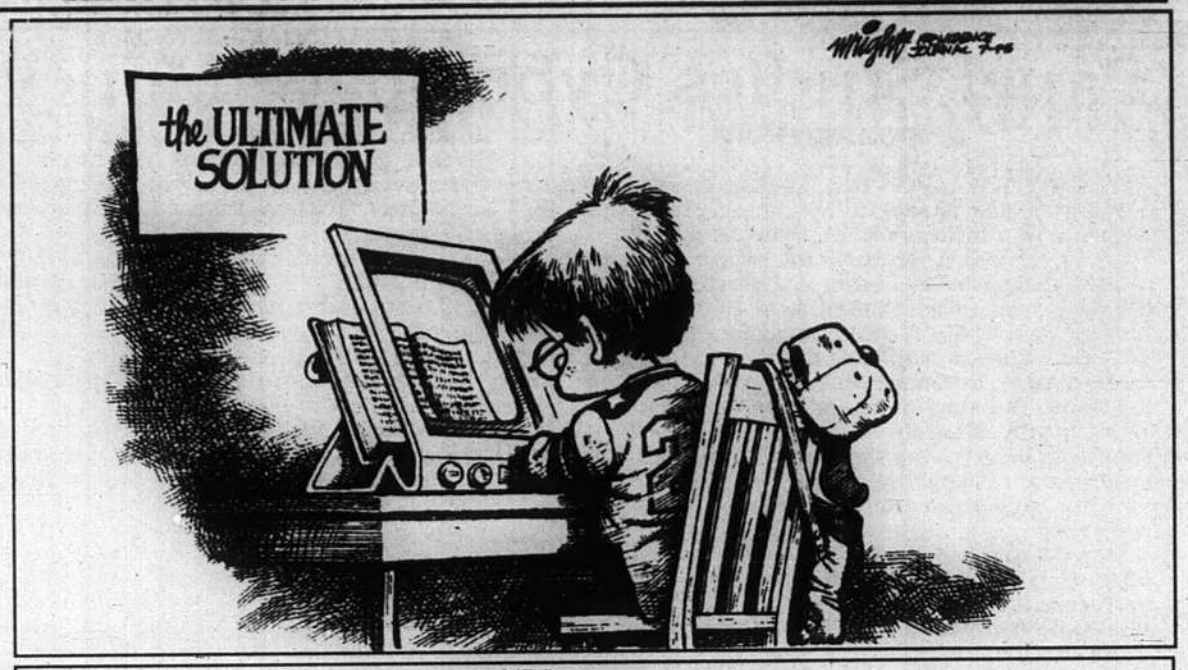

The conference sessions over two days delved into trash with hearts and minds, figuratively speaking. Proposed were ways to lessen the amount of trash being generated by all consumers — called "source reduction" — and methods to turn the actual trash output into an asset by making it pay for itself (or something else, such as cooling or heating costs) or simply recycling.

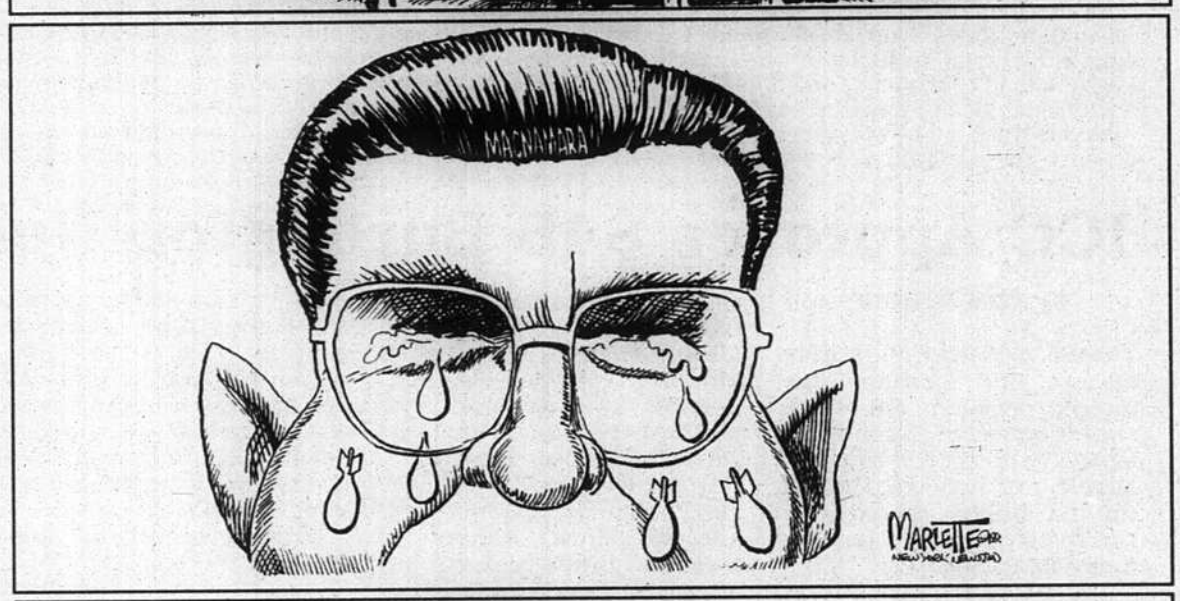

Such initiatives as the "pay as you throw" method, a fee-based garbage collection levy, certainly may cut down on the amount of trash, but more likely would promote a clandestine method among many to simply dump the trash in the broad expanses of bush.

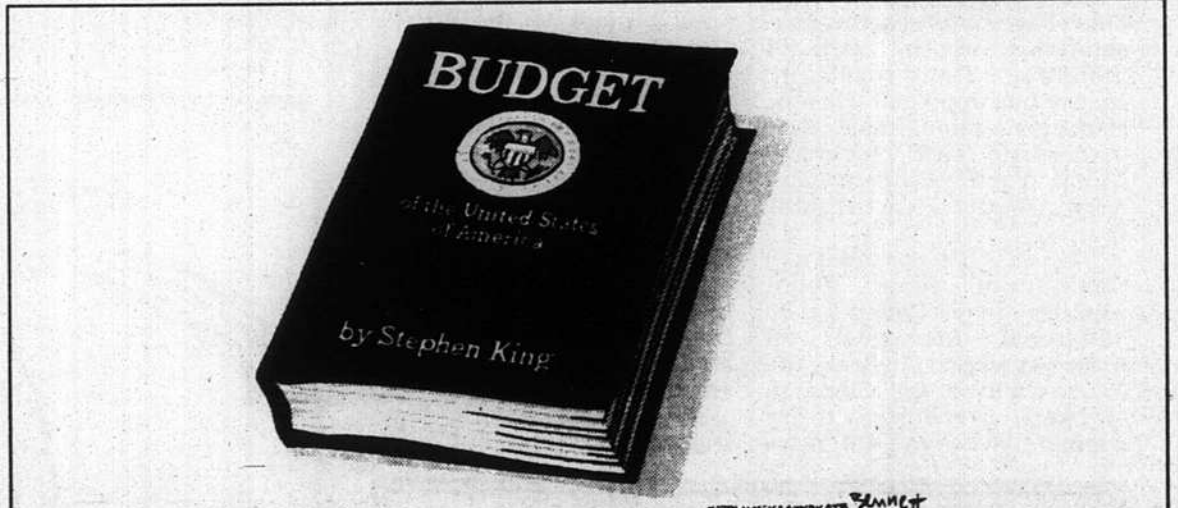

With the territory paying an estimated $6.7 million annually to put more than 193,000 tons of trash into landfills already filled to the max, we're only throwing good money where it can do no good, no more, and taking up precious land area.

Alternate suggestions for trash disposal involved modern-day enterprise: establishment of composting plants; expanded recycling to include plastics, scrap metal or even old bedding; even waste-to-energy desalination plants, which in effect would kill two birds with one stone by getting rid of an eyesore for something we can always use, clean water.

The Solid Waste Conference was a fountain of good ideas, and the next step is to move those ideas from concept to concrete realities. Otherwise solid waste, which will always be with us, becomes a permanent blight.

Life, Death And Tobacco Profits

BY JULIANNE MALVEAUX

WASHINGTON—The relatively unregulated multi-million-dollar tobacco industry has been challenged by medical experts on the relationship between smoking and cancer. After reviewing 30 years' worth of internal documents from Brown and Williamson, a company that produces several brands of cigarettes, the American Medical Association (AMA) has charged "coverup," saying there is "detailed and damning evidence" that the industry covered up the addictive and cancer-causing impact of cigarettes for three decades.

AMA president Lonnie Bristow said that the federal government should eliminate all forms of tobacco advertising, block exports of cigarettes, and more strictly enforce laws that prohibit minors from buying cigarettes "to prevent the tobacco industry from recruiting replacements for the thousands of people dying each year from smoking-related diseases."

In a series of articles in the most recent edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, the AMA provides details, including quotes from tobacco executives, about the link between smoking and cancer. They conclude that the American people have been "duped" by the tobacco industry. "We should all be outraged, and we should force the removal of this scourge from our nation ... and by so doing set an example for the world," an AMA spokesman said at a press conference reviewing findings from its "first scientific review" of Brown and Williamson documents.

The AMA wouldn't ban smoking, but it might support making cigarettes a prescription drug. They are acutely aware of the imputations of their findings and recommendations. Said a spokesman, "We recognize the serious consequences of this ambition, but the health of our nation is more important than the profits of any single industry."

Profit is the magic word. So is the way tobacco advertising has infiltrated into so many of society' s good causes. There' s the Virginia Sums tennis tournament that supposedly advances the status of women in tennis. There's the Kool Achiever's Award that highlights community service. There are the dozens of ads in magazines that pitch their editorial content toward minorities and women. And there are ads in the commemorative program journals of civil rights and women's organization conventions.

One might note that since women and people of color smoke, these ads are nothing more than an appropriate recognition of committed customers.

But sometimes the ads may entice new customers. The fastest growing group of smokers is young women, especially young women of color. Do the magazines and organizations that say they want to uplift these women actually shake hands with those who kill their constituents?

Few eschew tobacco advertising, but those who do seem to manage. The San Diego-based African-American Women on Tours has grown from an annual three-day extravaganza of African-American women' s vitality to a five city, 15-day traveling celebration. Founder and Chief Executive Officer Maria Carothers diliberately avoids tobacco sponsorship, preferring the support of companies that promote a more holistic lifestyle. Her underwriters include Reebok, Honda, JC Penny, Allstate Insurance, HealthQuest Magazine and the African-American Tobacco Education Network

Carothers has been firmly committed to a course that many are reluctant to risk. Perhaps the unwillingness to create distance from tobacco has been a function of ignorance about the risks from smoking. After all, that surgeon general' s warning on the side of a cigarette pack is about as effective a deterrent as the wagging finger of a highly-moral elder aunt.

Now, the American Medical Association findings offer more ammunition.

Smoking causes cancer. Cancer causes death. Smoking generates profit. Profit supports (some) life.

The nation's largest medical association says we need to understand the link between smoking and death. Is there any reason to support the link between smoking and tobacco industry profits?

In Recognition Of Vietnam - And Men Like John McCain

BY CHRISTOPHER MATTHEWS

VIEWPOINT

WASHINGTON - On Oct. 22, 1967, I walked in the march on the Pentagon, that great anti-Vietnam war rally Norman Mailer celebrated in "Armies of the Night."

What stays with me, more that the friskiness of that long-ago autumn Saturday, is the memory of unexpected passions stirred by such events. Somewhere in a cardboard box lies the split set of instructions: for those who wished to commit civil disobedience by blocking the Defense Department doorways and for those who did not. Somewhere in my soul, I harbor a nastier souvenir: a remembered rage at the rush of young American troops deployed coldly and aggressively against their own people.

Four days later, Lt. Cmdr. John McCain took off from an American aircraft carrier for a bombing run over Hanoi. Hit by a surface-to-air missile, he ejected himself from his Skyhawk, breaking both his arms in the escape. His right knee was already smashed by the impact of the missile.

Author and fellow Vietnam vet Robert Timberg describes what happened to McCain next in his stirring new book, "The Nightingale's Song." Landing in a Hanoi lake, the young Navy flier realized that his arms were useless. To inflate his life vest, he had to pull the toggle with his teeth. After some North Vietnamese soldiers pulled McCain to shore, an angry crowd stripped him to his underwear, kicked and spat on him. He was then bayoneted in his ankle and groin and had his shoulder smashed by a rifle butt.

On Tuesday, the same John McCain stood behind President Bill Clinton as Clinton granted formal U.S. recognition to the government in Hanoi. McCain's presence, along with other Vietnam war veterans now holding high elective office, gave undeniable authority to the occasion. If John McCain, who suffered the horrors of the war, said it was OK to recognize the former enemy, that meant something.

McCain knows things about the Vietnam war its critics don't: what it means to be denied adequate medical attention because of what his captors called a "bad attitude"; what it means to spend five years in North Vietnamese hell knowing that the war you were fighting was being challenged, in the streets by graduate students like me who had deferments and on the air waves by celebrity critics such as Jane Fonda and Dr. Spock. McCain was able to survive this physical and mental torture because he and other POWs kept their wits about them while in captivity.

One basic exercise at the "Hanoi Hilton" was to keep count of every name you heard of every American who had been captured. There were up to 6,000 of them, and the prisoners made a ferocious effort to remember every one of them. According to Timberg's book, at night McCain would go to sleep counting names instead of sheep.

The POWs had other uses for their brains. Orson Swindle, who would later manage Ross Perot's presidential campaign, mastered 6,000 words of German thanks to a fellow POW. Together, McCain and Swindle taught a course in English and American literature. The curriculum, which featured Melville, Kipling, Hemingway, Fitzgerald and Maughan, had a "Classics Comics" flavor to it, highlighting those big scenes the two POW teachers were able to conjure up from memory.

For prime-time entertainment, McCain and his buddies organized nightly "movies.' For an hour, one of them would sit in front of rows of guys dressed in black pajamas and shoes made with tire treads re-enacting a movie seen long ago. There was "Monday Night at the Movies," "Tuesday Night at the Movies" ...

John McCain performed more than 100 movies this way. Through it all, he kept a positive attitude toward the divided democracy back home.

"I had a lot of time to think over there, and came to the conclusion that one of the most important things in life - along with a man's family - is to make some contribution to his country."

McCain made part of that contribution Tuesday afternoon as he stood in the East Room of the White House. The decision to recognize Vietnam belongs to those who fought there. It is good that the president made his decision to recognize Vietnam with the backing of such men as John McCain, U.S. senator from Arizona.

Mitterrand, Eye On History, Exits As France's Elected Monarch

By MORT ROSENBLUM

PARIS (AP) — Francois Mitterrand, 78 and dying, undimmed by scandals that clouded his 14-year reign, has left the Elysee Palace with all of the grandeur befitting France's last elected monarch.

In a manner recalling Louis XIV's remark, "After me, the flood," he has let it be known that he regards his successor for his job as a mere politician in a different sort of France.

A new president was chosen May 7, and inherited the presidential powers defined by Charles de Gaulle, who meant to shape the Fifth Republic as a civilizing force in a benighted world.

From the night in 1981 when Frenchmen danced in the streets, waving the Socialist Party rose, Mitterrand has incarnated France. Electoral defeats, economic crisis and scandal passed below him.

With hauteur and sphinx-like silence, he eluded charges that tainted his office: insider trading, illegal campaign funds, a dubious loan that led to a prime minister's suicide.

Early on, French agents sank the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior, killing a crewman. Evidence implicated the Elysee. A decade later, no one has determined what the president knew.

After his re-election in 1988, prosecutors accused a close friend of enriching himself and other Mitterrand intimates in a stock market scam. The man died and not much more was revealed.

Then the courts investigated dummy companies set up to allow improper contributions to finance the 1988 Socialist campaign. The clouds passed, leaving behind mystery.

Voters punished the Socialists in 1993, giving conservatives 80 percent of the seats in Parliament. Mitterrand dropped in popularity. He took little note, talking of grander things, such as France's role in Europe.

More recently, he shrugged off an expose that he held a job in the Nazi-backed Vichy government during World War II; and later maintained a close friendship with a former Vichy police chief.

When the news magazine Paris Match revealed that he had a 20-year-old daughter, born to a mistress, he embraced her with no apologies. That was his personal business, he said.

He remained silent when Bernard Tapie, a flamboyant politician and entrepreneur he championed, was led off in handcuffs on fraud charges. Tapie also is on trial for fixing a football match.

Periodically, Mitterrand confounded his enemies and allies alike, suddenly changing the national tone with a grand gesture.

When negotiators squabbled over Bosnia, he flew to Sarajevo, a frail symbol in an outsized flak jacket. When Bill Clinton vilified Fidel Castro's new opening in Cuba, Mitterrand had Castro to lunch.

Detractors called his style Florentine, hinting of Machiavelli. The president preferred to think of himself as Venetian, skilled at statecraft and political subtleties without the daggers or poison.

Through it all, his nickname was "Tonton," an affectionate word for uncle. French papers often referred to him as "Dieu" — God. As his mandate ends, he is again high in popularity polls. "I am the Frenchmen's punching bag," he remarked once, when social troubles and economic woes unsettled France. "But it is well-known in that sport that the boxer tires before the bag."

Mitterrand, in pain from prostate cancer, is now fading fast. Despite Socialist Party pleas for more active campaign support, he has directed flagging energies to defining his place in history.

Three months ago, he inaugurated the National Library of France, the most ambitious of four pharaonic projects, which included the refurbishment of the Louvre, the old royal residence in Paris.

The library, with a cost approaching $2 billion, has its own transplanted forest of 127 half-century-old pine trees.

For hours each week, Mitterrand tapes interviews with journalist Jean-Pierre Elkabach, to be broadcast only after his death.

On a program with the literary icon Bernard Pivot, he described his legacy and his concern for a France without him. The grand projects were built for the glory of his nation, he said.

"Yes, I love history, to place myself in history," he said. "One barely recalls Tutankhamen. What will be said of General de Gaulle, Pompidou, Giscard, myself and those who follow during the next few thousand years?"

The presidents he mentioned, once in office, filled the role of elected monarch. But de Gaulle and Valery Giscard d'Estaing were voted out of office. Georges Pompidou died before the test. Some people believe the new president, once equipped with the power and the glory, at least will aspire to a kingly status.

"Frenchmen love a papa figure, they expect it," said Alain Vagh, a ceramic artist and businessman. "Once a successful candidate puts on the king's habit, he transforms."

Recent polls confirm that thesis: a clear majority in France wants a strong leader who personifies their self-image.

But Vagh is also dubious that anyone can pull it off in a nation soured by a 12 percent unemployment rate, growing homelessness, skewed wealth and repeated corruption scandals.

"Politicians!" he snorted, when asked about the candidates. He voted for Mitterrand, with high hopes, but now is bitter that the president left France in a worse condition than he found it.

Nicolas Maileander, who grows fruit trees in Provence, is disillusioned by leaders who he says have lost touch with the people. "The old glory and grandeur are gone."

Christine Ockrant, a popular journalist, summed up the broad national mood in a special edition of L'Express magazine.

"With his reign, an epoch ends," she wrote. "Whether we loved him or detested him, whether we applauded or sneered ... when he walks away, a solitary figure on his path, we will feel a little alone.

"And we will change centuries."

Lego King Danish Kirk Christiansen Dead At 75

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Godtfred Kirk Christiansen, who built his father's Lego company into an international toy empire, has died. He was 75.

The exact cause of death was not given, but Lego spokesman Peter Ambeck-Madsen said Christiansen has been in poor health for several years and "he was worn down."

Christiansen died Thursday at his home in Billund in central Denmark. Christiansen took over the company in 1957 after the death of his father, Ole Kirk, who created the wooden toy blocks known as Lego — a contraction of the Danish words "leg godt" which mean "play well" in English.

Christiansen felt ordinary toys in the 1950s lacked variation. He converted the wooden interlocking blocks to colorful plastic and marketed the toy line around the world.

In 1968, Christiansen established the Legoland amusement park in Billund, one of the largest tourist attractions in Denmark. The company plans to build similar parks in Europe and the United States, full of roller coasters and merry-go-rounds resembling Lego toys. In 1979 Christiansen's son, Kjeld Kirk Kristiansen, said to be one of Denmark's richest men, became Lego's managing director. Lego is the world's fifth largest toy company, valued at $5.407 billion.

Funeral services will be held Monday at the Church of Billund Center. Besides his son Kjeld, Christiansen is survived by his wife Edith, sister Gunhild Johansen and six grandchildren.

Focus On The Family: Why Some Marriages Fail

It is remarkable that while there are licensing and certification requirements to be a skilled craftsman or professional of any sort, for the most fundamental institution of society, marriage and the raising of a family, there is none.

Even to become a licensed driver has a greater training requirement than we make of any prospective parent or spouse. Is it any wonder that with the prevailing liberalism and self-gratification that so dominates modern society, at least in the Western cultures, that 50 percent of marriages fail and the institution of the family is in a crisis?

It is for this reason that we focus on the family as our first priority in expounding upon spiritual principles requisite to solving our socio economic problems.

The purpose of the family can be understood only in the light of God's purpose for mankind as a whole. It is the task of marriage partners to foster harmony and unity and to bring forth children so that successive generations fulfill God's purpose for humankind. The family assists and promotes the development of each member in the personal process of learning to know and love God. That is accomplished through adherence to the laws and teachings of religion. Christ said, "What then of the man who hears these words of mine and acts upon them? He is like the man who had the sense to build his house on rock."

The Baha'i writings liken the family and marriage to a fortress for well-being. They further, warn, "Baha'is must, through rigid adherence to the Baha'i laws and teachings, combat those corrosive forces which are so rapidly destroying home life and the beauty of family relationships, and tearing down the moral structure of society. "Good advice for us all." Religious laws and teachings constitute a bedrock upon which secure and strong families can be established.

The family is community in the microcosm. The skills and virtues which are required to foster communal cooperation and fellowship - equality, freedom from prejudice, justice, forbearance, forgiveness, cooperation, consultation, etc. - are learned in the family. In the family we first begin to practice the fundamental teaching of all religions: to love one another as we love ourselves. Within the family as in the community is diversity of sex, age, experience, talent, capacity and increasingly, race and culture. There is also a diversity of rights and responsibilities: the father, mother and children each have their own particular ones.

The foundation of the family in all the religious traditions is marriage. In describing the purpose of marriage, Baha'u'llah states: "When He (God) desired to manifest grace and beneficence to men, and to set the world in order, He revealed observances and created laws; among them He established the law of marriage, made it as a fortress for well-being and salvation, and enjoined it upon us in that which was sent down out of the heaven of sanctity in His Most Holy Book. He saith, great is His glory: Marry, O people, that from you many appear he who will remember Me amongst Me servants; this is one of My commandments unto you; obey it as an assistance to yourselves!"

The modern prevalence of single heads of households and raising families outside of marriage is contrary to the divine intent. The essence of marriage is the making of a strong covenant in the sight of God where all verily abide by the Will of God. The promise to abide by the Will of God establishes the family upon the bedrock of God's immutable purpose for humanity. The thoughts and action of the individual family should not be directed merely to the selfish advancement of the individuals which comprise it but rather towards the betterment of humankind as a whole.

The family that is firmly grounded in the principles of religion - founded upon a strong marriage, unified amongst its members, deepened in the knowledge of God and His creation, and advancing both materially and spiritually - will of its own volition seek expression of itself through service to society. Out station is that of a servant and our family life should equip us to fulfill this station even from childhood. In next Saturday's column, we'll address more specifically principles of parenting that achieve that objective.

Always seek the best so that the good does not escape you.

Carambola Sponsors Junior Golf Program

By STEVE BULLOCK
Avis Sports Writer

If Dave Alexander gets his way, St. Croix should be producing some of the next century's most celebrated golfers. And, to help set the stage for such a time, the assistant Golf Pro at the Carambola Golf Club is directing the daily routines of a two-week golf clinic, presently taking place at the Carambola facilities.

The annual training session, now in its eighth year, brings together youngsters from all over the world, who want to either improve their game, or who have an interest in learning the fundamentals of golf. This year, close to 30 youths are participating in the daily sessions, which run from around 9:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. "This year, we have participants from St. Croix, St. Thomas, St. Kitts, Atlanta, Georgia and California", stated Dave Alexander, who has been coaching golf for the past eight years. "The youngsters are really learning fast, and I am heartened to see the level of discipline and dedication, which they are applying to their practice."

Alexander described the two-week session as a structured one. According to him, the first week which ended yesterday was used to cover the fundamentals, from a theoretical standpoint. The participants were taught the rules of the sport, followed by practical demonstrations on the course, of the basic plays such as swinging, chipping and driving, as well as putting." Alexander, who is also the president of the St. Croix Junior Golf Association also stressed the importance of imparting the concept of team work and honesty in the sessions. It is for such reason, why he has sought the assistance of several individuals to help him conduct the St. Croix Junior Golf Training Program, as the session is dubbed. Working side by side with him,

Top Horses In August 6 Races

By Cherra Heyliger
Special to the AVIS

The Virgin Islands Jockey Club will sponsor a six race card on Sunday Aug. 6 at Randall James Racetrack, St. Croix will meet some tough colts and geldings in a one-mile showdown.

Proud Sager who has been showing tremendous improvement over his past races is in top form and ready to visit the winner's circle. The other day one of the handlers from Invisible Image stable hailed out that his horse will be the one to beat in the one-mile run.

According to the entry forms Prince North will be coming across the channel to run in the one mile feature race. Run For The Wire, a horse which carries a tremendous ability to run in the stretch will go off as the early favorite to win the mile feature.

Prince North just edges out Yard Apart as the second choice. Invisible Image and Proud Sager will be paying the most if they score.

Racing fans love to see the sprint races. Bold Florence is still the queen of the sprint on St. Croix. When the gates fly open its always "They're Off!" The next call is always, Bold Florence with Christian (Doolington) in the saddle takes the lead." Getting to the pole in front has been Bold Florence's problem over the last couple races. But Randy Knight always has the fleet dark bay mare in top form or she never steps on the track.

A new one called Ruascot, is said to be full of speed, will test Bold Florence and others over six furlongs. Ms. Quen, also reputed to be a speed burner, is in that six furlongs sprint. Jamaica Pride stepping out for the first time at the Doc James track is also highly rated. The late Albert Neltropp used to say that the two toughest tests for thoroughbreds are the six furlongs and the one mile. In the six furlongs test Nelthropp said that it was necessary for the horse to have good speed early yet show stamina as the race closed. The one mile test is also considered to be just an intermediate race for most experts in the United States.

At one mile most horses must get out and stay with the pack or close to the pack or they will be out of the prize money at the end. Four other races are on the upcoming racing program scheduled for Sunday August 6 at the Doc James Racetrack, Estate Mannings Bay.

Baha'i Sunday Class Update

Since there is a 5th Sunday in July, the Baha'i community on St. Croix will hold its monthly prayer breakfast at the F'sted Baha'i Center at 9 a.m. on July 30th.

Study of the Book of Certitude, Baha'u'llah's expanding on progressive revelation and mankind's regular failure to recognize God's prophets or manifestation when they come will resume for adults on Aug 6 and 13. Children will continue study of Ruhi Institute materials at the regular class time, 10:30 a.m. - noon at the F'sted Baha'i Center. A unity feast will be held on Sunday Aug. 20.

TAURUS
(April 20 to May 20)

You're in no mood to socialize due to the thoughtless actions of a friend. The answers you need about a work concern aren't forthcoming. Divert your attention elsewhere.

GEMINI
(May 21 to June 20)

A matter at a distance is not resolved to your satisfaction. However, in romance you just can't lose. Avoid a tendency to brood and worry during the latter part of the day.

CANCER
(June 21 to July 22)

You're saying one thing and your significant other is hearing something else — which leads to frustration on both sides. It's not a good time to seek feedback for ideas.

LEO
(July 23 to Aug. 22)

You're concerned about finances, but don't let that ruin your whole day. If you approach your problem sensibly and work things out on paper, you'll achieve the desired results.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)

You are hit with extra projects at work and find yourself putting in extra hours to the neglect of domestic concerns. Family members pitch in. Revise evening social plans.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)

A co-worker isn't pulling his or her weight, and you find yourself making up the slack. Straighten things out by having a heart-to-heart chat with your associate.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)

Avoid the social scene. Instead, tend to your personal interests. A situation concerning a child is uppermost on your mind. Avoid an unpredictable friend.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)

You're caught up with extra responsibilities on the home front. Reconsider something that you've planned for your career. What seem to be harmless expenditures easily add up.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)

Those around you are trying to tell you something, but you're too wrapped up with your own thoughts. Pay attention! You've been missing out on valuable advice.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)

Your powers of concentration are poor, and you have a tendency to lose things. Shopping isn't favored, since you could misplace a credit card. Unexpected news arrives.

PISCES
(Feb. 19 to March 20)

You're shutting people out because you're preoccupied with a situation that you can't change. If you do not move on, you risk alienating loved ones.

Dear Abby

Exercise Sense of Community Along With Your Muscles

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1995 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: If my great-grandparents weren't already in their graves, they would die laughing if they could see the modern "fitness centers."

Scores of able-bodied people climbing stairs to nowhere, biking furiously in place, lifting heavy things that don't actually need to be moved. Our forebears got more than enough exercise just taking care of the business of living.

Of course, our desk-bound generation needs exercise, but it seems silly to burn up all that energy for nothing. There are other ways to get exercise that will benefit the community. Pick up litter during a walk — it doesn't have to slow us down; we can still walk briskly. Or how about doing yard work for an elderly neighbor? Our muscles will ache just as much, and we can get two kinds of satisfaction.

PEGGY K. IN DALLAS

DEAR PEGGY K.: You make a good point, and for those who exercise during the daylight hours (and on weekends), your suggestions will be well-received. But not everyone feels safe getting his or her exercise on the streets these days — particularly those who exercise after work, and after dark a large portion of the year.

DEAR ABBY: You have been a loyal supporter of wildlife for years. I wanted to share with you and your readers some of the answers we got to the question, "Why save endangered species?" at the Los Angeles "Eco-Expo" last April. They came from kids and adults alike, and they're real gems:

— "All living things are connected — to lose one could be to lose all!"

— "One day, you'll be endangered, too!"

— "Because they're part of our lives. If we didn't have them, it would not be a complete world."

— "Because they were here first!"

— "Only fires should be extinguished!"

— "Because we can."

Amid a lot of debate about endangered species, Abby, the simplest voices are often the clearest.

DAVID KLINGER, U.S. FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE

DEAR DAVID: Thank you for writing and sharing the thought-provoking slogans with me and my readers. They carry an important message.

There are approximately 1.4 million known species on Earth, and evolutionary biologists believe that this is fewer than 10 percent of the number that actually exist right now. According to the Endangered Species Coalition, of the more than 25,000 species of flowering plants in the world, only 5 percent have been studied enough to determine their medicinal value. In the United States, 77 percent of the 150 most-prescribed medicines originate from natural sources.

The world is experiencing one of the greatest "extinction spasms" in its history. Conservative estimates suggest that the vanishing rain forests around the globe doom 27,000 species to extinction every year.

Viewed from the "top downward" — once these species go, can man be far behind?

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

And the seventy returned again with joy, saying. Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name. And he said unto them. I behold Satan as lighting fall from heaven. Behold I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy; and nothing shall by any means hurt you. Not withstanding in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven.

ST. JOHN CHAPTER 10 verse 9
I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved. And shall go in and out, and find pasture. The thief cometh not, but for to steal and to kill and to destroy; I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

PSALM 103
1. Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name.
2. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits;
3. Who forgiveth all thine iniquities: who healeth all thy diseases;
4. Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies;
5. Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.
6. The Lord executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed.
7. He made known his ways unto Moses, his acts unto the children of Israel.
8. The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.
9. He will not always chide: neither will he keep his anger for ever.
10. He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.
11. For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him.
12. As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us.
13. Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him.
14. For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust.
15. As for man, his days are as grass; as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.
16. For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more.
17. But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children;
18. To such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them.
19. The Lord hath prepared his throne in the heavens; and his kingdom ruleth over all.
20. Bless the Lord, ye his angels, that excel in strength, that do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word.
21. Bless ye the Lord, all ye his hosts; ye ministers of his, that do his pleasure.
22. Bless the Lord, all his works in all places of his dominion; bless the Lord, O my soul.

Bitterness imprisons life:

Bitterness paralyzes life:
love empowers it.
Bitterness sickens life:
love heals it.
Bitterness blinds life:
love anoints its eyes.

Swan still defended the quality of legal services the attorney general's office is providing, saying that despite the salary problems — attorney at the U.S. Department of Justice can make nearly twice what they bring in from the territory — the quality of representation has improved.

Sen. David Jones (the only other senator to attend yesterday's hearing for the Justice Department and office of Legal Services) asked if the attorney general's office would continue to lose attorneys.

"Senator, I sweat bullets over this every day," Swan responded. "The reality is that we need to raise salaries. However, the money is just not there."

Swan referred to the general "belt tightening" occurring throughout the administration as legislators and the governor attempt to balance the deficit ridden budget.

Hansen also referred to the physical condition that the government attorneys work in, particularly at the Toro Building in Golden Rock. The attorney general's budget request $1 million in capital investment at the Toro Building.

"The Toro Building is a miserable place to work," Swan agreed, adding that the positive aspects were that the rent was free (it is a government owned building) and that it is large enough for their St. Croix office.

"We have a genuine concern and interest in improving the condition," he added.

The total requested budget for the Justice Department is $21,308,746. The department also expects to receive $3,460,217 in federal funding, for a total budget of $24,786,963.

sentable," said Lionel Smith, paint crew foreman at Alfredo Andrews.

Painter Bernard Philpot thought of his future children attending a St. Croix public school and said, "We would like them to have a good facility to go to school in."

Philpot said he hopes the children will appreciate what the maintenance crews have done for them. He asked students to respect their schools and not mark up the walls or purposely damage the facilities in any way.

Lionel Jacobs, head of school rehabilitation projects on St. Croix, guided Schneider and Abramson through numerous facilities, where busy staffs of maintenance workers showed off their accomplishments.

"They're practically rebuilding the whole school, repairing everything that needs to be done," said Elroy Robert, maintenance engineer for Elena Christian Junior High, moments before the governor arrived.

School renovations on St. Croix alone will cost more than $3 million, according to Gov. Schneider, who is using money from the government's General Fund to finance the projects. The governor projected that $5 to $6 million will be spent on physical rehabilitation of all the territory's public schools by the beginning of the 1995-96 school year.

"Friends, we intend to keep our promise to the people of the Virgin Islands," Schneider said. "I have asked everyone to work overtime to make sure that all of the schools will be fixed."

St. Croix's Juanita Gardine Elementary School, a severely dilapidated facility with monstrous physical plant problems, was the focus of attention among government and education officials who agreed that the school environment was not conducive to learning.

Juanita Gardine will open for classes in the fall, but students will be housed in the old Elena Christian Annex, where extensive renovations are currently underway.

The governor said he plans to privatize the Education Department's maintenance division.

"We are now contracting out the maintenance of the schools for the new year to make sure that we do not [continue to] have the deterioration that I found in the schools in the Virgin Islands," said Schneider.

The governor said it would be more cost-effective to rebuild some schools rather than renovate the deteriorated buildings. For example, it would cost more than $14 million to renovate Charlotte Amalie and Ivanna Eudora Kean High Schools.

"I think it would make [more] sense, financially, to get about $4 to $5 million and build a new school than repair older schools for tremendous amounts of money," said Schneider.

Acting on past promises, the gymnasiums of St. Croix Central High and Ivanna Eudora Kean High Schools are being equipped with air conditioning, according to the governor, who did not give a specific date but said the work is "ongoing" and "should be completed by the time the schools are open."

is Robert Luke a local radio personality and comedic instructor, Luke, who is himself learning to play the sport, sees a special significance in learning with the youngsters. "They realize that it is okay to make mistakes, because their coaches and instructors are doing the same. The idea of role-playing, which is as old as human civilization, is of definite importance, even in the sport, as the youths try to emulate the instructors and the pros," Luke said.

But, Luke isn't the only person helping out in the training sessions.

Greg McCullough, the club's Golf Pro, is working behind the scenes to ensue the success of the program. Tyrone Seals, a local Department of Education official, is serving as a mentor and instructor for the youngsters. Marvin Jones and Raffic Hosein are also serving as instructors to the youths Jeff Fisk and Omar Diaz are also volunteering their time in the area of mentorship for young golf aspirants.

And how about the participants? Well, you could bet that they are having the time of their life. "It gives me a very special feeling, to learn to play golf with my peers, and learn from the experts", said Oniera Willie, a participant from St. Croix. Marvin George, another participant described the sessions in therapeutic terms. "The game of golf is a calm game, which calms you down of stress. It also clears your mind." Sheldon Hendrickson, another local attendee, has dreams of "playing in a tournament" and representing St. Croix one of these days. On that point, Dave Alexander stated that many of the participants do have the potential of making it big in the world of golf. For example, the assistant golf pro singled out Alisha Jones, who hails from Atlanta, Georgia as having a very bright future in golf. "Alisha has participated in several of the annual sessions, and certainly shows a lot of promise of becoming a tournament player", Alexander said.

The sessions are opened to youngsters between the ages of eight and 16 and is still open to further enrollment for the final week, beginning Monday. Alexander is encouraging parents and all interested individuals to call him at the Carambola Golf Club for information on registration. The telephone number is 778-5638.

problem: to repair the bulkhead and traffic congestion and to provide an asthecially pleasing setting for residents and visitors alike."

The plans for the downtown area will have no impact on the appearance of the Charlotte Amalie harbor, the governor observed Wednesday afternoon.

The chief executive said he made certain adjustments to the firms' proposals and set a meeting for next month when he will review their newest recommendations.

After completing the meeting, the governor and the contingent of engineers and pulic works officials toured historic Fort Christian in downtown St. Thomas. After visiting the facility with curator Dolores Jowers, the chief executive expressed dismay at the level of deterioation he witnessed at a site that is a monument of Virgin Islands history. The governor said he will attempt to identify federal funds that can assist in the much needed renovation of Fort Christian.

Schneider immediately identified the paving of the road leading to the Fort Christian museum as a priority along with the painting of the building's exterior and providing adequate lighting outside the facility.

TWO MINUTES WITH THE BIBLE

BY CORNELIUS R. STAM, FOUNDER
BEREAN BIBLE SOCIETY
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60635

"UNDERSTANDEST THOU WHAT THOU READEST?"

This was the question Philip asked of the Ethiopian prince as he sat reading from Isaiah's prophecy (Acts 8:30), and it is a question which we should continually keep asking ourselves as we read the holy Scriptures.

There are always those among God's people who do not much care whether or not they understand what they read, if only it warms their hearts! To them the Bible is little more than a fetish. Taking only those Scriptures which appeal to them, and leaving the rest, they actually feel themselves quite spiritual and often talk about believing the Bible whether they understand it or not!

But such "spirituality" is far from genuine, and such "faith" is blind and superstitious at best.

While it is true that the Bible teaches many truths which we believe, although they are beyond our comprehension (such as its opening verse!), yet how can we believe what the Bible says unless we understand what it says? God would have us understand what we read and believe it intelligently. Indeed, true faith will want to know and understand more and more of God's Word. One who does not care whether or not he understands what God has said is not interested in knowing what God has said at all. His faith is based on his own will rather than on God's Word, for regardless of the meaning of Scripture, he will take any passage that suits his fancy and use it as he wishes.

How great an emphasis God Himself puts upon the importance of understanding His Word! On one occasion, when our Lord saw the multitudes, He "was moved with compassion toward them because they were as sheep not having a shepherd: and He began to teach them many things" (Mark 6:34).

And now that the secret of God's great plan has been made known, how much more reason there is to study the Scriptures with a view to understanding them! How Paul, by the Spirit, emphasizes this as he writes of his prayers for the saints: "THAT the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him: the eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling. . ." (Eph. 1:17,18).

By Cherra Heyliger
Special to the AVIS

The Virgin Islands Olympic Committee will met Saturday August 12 on the St. Croix Campus of the University of the Virgin Islands to prepare for the 1996 Olympic Games to be held in Atlanta, Georgia.

In other related news the Virgin Islands Golf Federation has formally applied for membership in the VIOC. The by-laws from the Golf Federation was still pending. Jodie Lawaetz-Mays will again chair the VIOC Golf Tournament Committee. Caribbean Health and Racquet Club will again be a "Gold Sponsor". Another well known corporation has again agreed to be a "Silver Sponsor". The VIOC raises important funds from the golf event.

Just in case you are planning to be at the Olympic Games in Atlanta just a year from now the dates are July 19 through Aug. 4, 1996. Thousands of athletes from all over the world will be in Atlanta for the games next year.

More local sports on Page 10.

The Virgin Islands will again be represented. The Track & Field Federation which is headed by Ronald Russell has about six athletes in training. The Boxing Federation headed by Angel Corniero also has fighters on training hoping to make it to the Olympic Games and bring home some medals.

In recent times former boxing champ, Livingstone Bramble, has motivated lots of amateur fighters on St. Croix and is determined to get some of the youngsters to the Olympic Games.

Bramble did not make it to the Olympic Games when he was an amateur but he is highly motivated in the preparation and recruiting of talented boxers on St. Croix.

The Olympic Games are considered to be the world's foremost amateur sports competition. The games were started in ancient Greece in 776 B.C. The games were originally held every four years in Greece and in recent times some orthodox followers of the Olympic Games have been vainly calling for Greece to again become the permanent site of the games.

The modern day Olympics is awarded under highly charged situations. Cities and countries of the world vie for the event because of its drawing card as a tourist attraction, along with thousands of athletes from around the world there will be hundreds of people comprising delegations from hundreds of countries of the world.

The games will attract millions of fans to Atlanta. Footracing was the first event of the ancient Olympic Games. Boxing, javelin throw, chariot racing, long jump and other events were later added to the ancient games. The ancient games came to a halt around 373 A.D. What is referred to as the "modern Olympics" was organized in the 19th century through the efforts of Baron Pierre de Coubertin of France. The Olympic Games have grown so big that there is now "The Winter Olympics" and the "Summer Olympics." The summer Olympics is by far the greater of the two because of many more sports which are played by many more countries of the world. The Virgin Islands Olympic Committee is comprised of approximately 20 federations and it is still growing.

Crackdown On Salvadoran Death Squad Brings Threat Of Bloodshed

By EDITH BELTRAN

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A death squad accused of killing at least 20 people has threatened a bloodbath because of a government crackdown, the first apparent prosecution of a killing squad in Salvadoran history.

Sixteen members of the so-called Black Shadow organization were arrested Thursday by police in the eastern province of San Miguel. The group's existence became known last year, and it has been accused of murdering gang members and suspected criminals.

Few details, however, have emerged since the arrests. Coverage of the case in local newspapers and broadcast stations has been limited by what some reporters admit is fear. Police have been silent on the case and haven't released the charges.

The Salvadoran equivalent of arraignment was scheduled for Wednesday. The group has claimed responsibility for only a few of the murders.

An unpublished statement sent Monday to the daily newspaper Prensa Grafica threatened to "make blood run throughout El Salvador" if police pursue the case. A message on Saturday warned reporters not to print police allegations.

Such threats are not taken lightly in El Salvador, where at least 75,000 people were killed in the country's 12-year civil war, many of them by death squads. Most of the victims were suspected leftists. The death squads were at the center of a controversy over U.S. funding of El Salvador's right-wing military. The war ended in 1992.

Officials never prosecuted death squad cases from the civil war era. Military officials, prominent businessmen and politicians were often accused of links to the squads.

The 16 people arrested in connection with the Black Shadow case include three members of a new civilian police force, a Protestant pastor and a prominent local businessman who belonged to an army counterinsurgency brigade during the civil war. All have maintained their innocence.

The governor of San Miguel province, Mario Bettaglio, on Monday called Black Shadow a "Robin Hood" type organization which was helping stamp out crime.

Others, however, have accused the government of using the case to divert attention from the bloodier death squads of the recent past or of seeking to protect more powerful forces they suspect are involved.

An opposition politician, Kirio Salgado, said Tuesday that the 16 were "sacrificial lambs with which (officials) want to raise a smoke screen to divert investigations from those really involved," referring to top government officials.

Security Minister Hugo Barrera has vowed that his office with be "implacable" in fighting such crimes, but said it would be cautious in releasing information.
