STRUCTURE: Type of, and composition: Semi-circular earthwork with dry stone retaining walls.

Physical Description: Lind Point Fort is a semi-circular earthwork located near the tip of Lind Point at an elevation of about 120 feet above sea level. The level gun platform, that measures 60 feet across, is unpaved. On the seaward sides dry stone retaining walls support the earth embankment and the low and now eroded earth parapets. Built as a battery to control the entrance to Cruz Bay Harbor it commands the Bay as well as Pillsbury Sound. It was constructed by the British during their second occupation of the Danish Virgin Islands 1807-1815 in the Napoleonic wars and it is the physical evidence in the Virgin Islands of an era of conflict that kept the western world in turmoil for more than two decades and changed the course of world history.
