More blackouts coming in 1992

says Bruno-Vega

By J.F. McCARTHY
Avis Staff Writer

The Virgin Islands Water and Power Authority's electricity-generating plant at Estate Richmond will be responsible for about 50 days of power outages on St. Croix in 1992, WAPA Executive Director Alberto Bruno-Vega said yesterday.

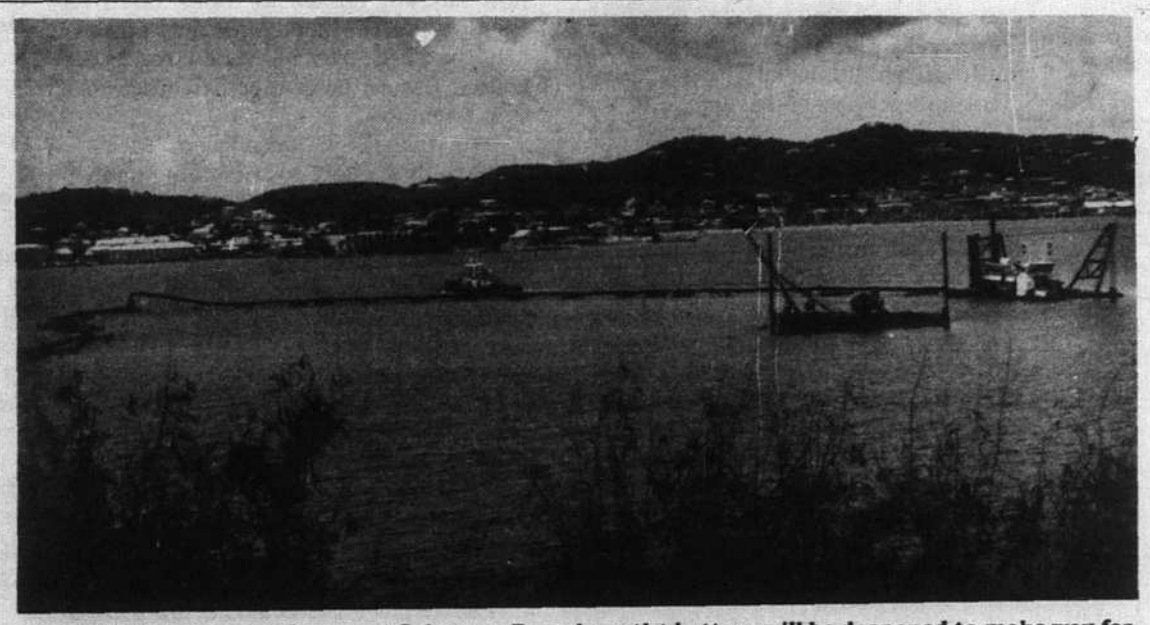

By comparison, if you are living anywhere in the mainland United States with an average utility, you could expect to be affected by a plant-related outage once in 10 years, Bruno-Vega said.

"We are 500 times worse than the hypothetical average utility in the states," he said in remarks before about 20 St. Croix Chamber of Commerce members at the Cormorant Beach Hotel yesterday.

But by 1993, WAPA hopes to reduce the number of days with outages six times to seven days per year by installing two 22-megawatt gas turbines at the utility's South Shore site between Hess Oil and the Virgin Islands Alumina Corp. (VIALCO), Bruno-Vega said. The two turbines, which should be installed and working by the end of 1992, cost $14.7 million together and are contracted to be delivered by General Electric Co. by May 1992.

"If we want to decrease it even further we will have to work out an agreement with Hess Oil," he said in an interview after the speech. "If we can do that then we will be able to lower the loss of load probability index even further to make us comparable

Violence feared over beach closures

By BILLY VAUGHN
Avis Staff Writer

A former enforcement officer with the Virgin Islands Department of Parks and Recreation said Thursday because his successors aren't keeping beaches open to the public, violence is sure to erupt.

An officer from the agency, however, cited a lack of manpower and defective equipment as the source of the problem.

Otto Tranberg, who retired from the agency in 1986, said he was outraged to learn that beaches in Judith's Fancy and Spratt Hall have been closed to the public in recent weeks.

"I was the conservation officer and when I was working, I patrolled these areas and made it my business to make sure the beaches were kept open," he said. "When I was working, it was just me and another man working and we kept the beaches open. Today, they have seven people in that office, but some of the beaches are closed because they aren't doing their jobs."

Tranberg said closing beaches, even short stretches, can - and will - breed violence.

"I know my people and someone is going to get hurt," he said. "I hate to say it, but whenever you back blacks in a corner, they get violent and that's just what's going to happen."

Tranberg explained that from 50 feet beyond the point vegetation begins is a public area. He said one of the main problems is that property owners often find that beach goers cross their land en route to the surf.

Bryan: Drug Czar failing on job

By LYNDA LOHR
St. Thomas Bureau

A discussion on the Narcotic Strike Force's $1.3 million budget generated sparks when Sen. Adelbert Bryan attacked drug czar Gaylord Sprauve for what he said was his failure to do the job.

"There's a state of decadence in the narcotics operation," claimed Bryan, speaking as the Senate Finance Committee began its third day of hearings on Gov. Alexander Farrelly's $450.3 million 1992 budget.

He complained that Sprauve hired 22-year resident Helene Smollett, who is white, to fill the post of deputy drug policy advisor at $54,500.

"Have you tried to locate a Virgin Islander with a degree in criminal justice?" thundered Bryan, demanding to know the salaries of Smollett, Sprauve and Financial Director Eugene Welsh.

Sprauve makes $65,000 and Walsh, $35,000.

Sprauve said he hired people who get the job done, regardless of where they were born. He said Smollett came with him when he was transferred from the Department of Education.

Bryan also criticized him for failing to advertise off-island so transplanted Virgin Islanders can come home to take $23,000-a-year NSF agent jobs.

When Sprauve said there were sufficient applicants here, but many did not pan out because they could not pass the background check, Bryan demanded to know if he had investigated Smollett's background.

"I'm not going to respond to you," said a testy Sprauve, who took the same stand when Bryan grilled him on personnel issues involving NSF agents.

He told him they could discuss it privately.

Sen. Malcolm Callender took Sprauve to task for what he saw as a failure to demand that the NSF agents get paid better.

"Don't you believe you should be vigorously advocating for an increase?" asked Callender.

However, Sprauve reminded him that although

Farrelly seeks safeguards to V.I. rum sales

Gov. Alexander Farrelly is concerned that the U.S.-Mexican trade pact will reduce the territory's rum sales.

In an interview with Doreen Hemlock of the San Juan Star, the governor expressed his fears that the trade agreement will slash excise rebates on rum sales to the mainland.

Here is Doreen Hemlock's interview with Gov. Farrelly published on Tuesday Sept. 3, 1991.

U.S. Virgin Islands' Gov. Alexander A. Farrelly is trying to find ways to protect the interests of this small U.S. territory as the world coalesces into large trading blocs with mightier negotiating power.

The challenges are many.

The proposed U.S.-Mexico free trade pact could mean strong competition in the U.S. market from Mexican rum and could reduce V.I. rum sales stateside. That could slash the estimated $30 million in yearly rum excise tax rebates the V.I. government counts to help finance its $450 million annual budget.

Growing tourism industries in Mexico and Cuba also pose potential competition for the U.S. Virgin Islands, which depend upon tourism as its economic lifeblood.

And with U.S.budget deficits rising and Washington's interest focused on Mexico and other large nations, the territory of 100,000 residents with a sole nonvoting member of Congress faces an uphill battle to gain Washington's ear.

In a recent interview, the 67-year-old Farrelly, a Yale-educated corporate lawyer serving his second four-year term, said his administration hopes to meet the challenge partly through alliances with Caribbean neighbors, including Puerto Rico.

"If ever there was timing for regional integration efforts, it is now," the Democratic Party governor said.

The V.I. government also is preparing a status plebiscite in hopes of gaining enhancements in its political relationship with the United States.

Gov. Alexander Farrelly

"We'd like the several benefits we now get, including the excise tax rebates on rum, to be enshrined in an agreement approved by Congress and the U.S. Department of Interior," he said.

On the home front, the administration also is placing priority on fighting crime and upgrading infrastructure on improved conditions for tourism, investment and economic development, Farrelly added.

Farrelly is worried that a decline in V.I. rum sales as a result of Mexican competition in the U.S. market could slash excise tax rebates and affect the territory's credit rating for future bond sales.

The V.I. government has earmarked future revenues from rum excise tax rebates through the year 2007 to repay government bonds already issued.

"We'll have to lobby for alternative forms of relief" from the federal government should V.I. rum excise tax revenues drop. Lobbying could include joint efforts with Puerto Rico, which now receives more than $130 million a year in rum excise tax rebates, he said.

Farrelly also is warily watching Mexico's tourism industry, although he believes Mexico's mass-market approach likely will pose little competition for the Virgin Islands' "upscale" business.

The U.S. Virgin Islands plans a status vote for Sept. 1993 to choose among three broad categories, including closer ties with the United States, continued or enhanced territorial status, or removal of U.S. sovereignty.

Farrelly backs enhanced territorial status, rejecting statehood and independence, "for economic reasons".

He believes that under statehood, the U.S. Virgin would lose more than $150 million a year it now receives in rum excise tax rebates and in U.S. income taxes, which are collected in the territory but flow into the V.I. Treasury.

"States don't hold onto collections of federal income tax," he said, noting that federal income tax account for nearly one-third of the V.I. annual budget.

Farrelly hopes enhancements would include guarantees on special benefits now enjoyed by the territory, such as exemptions from the Jones Act, a measure that requires all goods from the United States be shipped in high-cost U.S. flagships.

The Jones Act covers Puerto Rico.

Farrelly's effort to increase regional ties includes a V.I. application for associate membership in the eight-nation Organization of Eastern Caribbean States (OECS), a group of small island nations including Dominica, Grenada, St. Lucia and others.

"I view the role of the U.S. Virgin Islands vis-a-vis the Eastern Caribbean as the role of Puerto Rico vis-a-vis Latin America," he said. "We can provide trade opportunities, educational exchange opportunities...We can lead a Caribbean destination drive for the development of tourism in the area."

The Virgin Islands asked the United States more than a year ago to approve its request to apply for OECS membership, but Washington has yet to act, the governor said.

Farrelly said his top domestic priorities this term are fighting rising crime and implementing a nearly $400 million public works program, the largest capital improvements effort ever here.

To recruit more police, the government raised starting police pay from $18,000 to $23,000 a year, with salaries increasing to $24,000 a year once officers complete a probationary period, he said.

"We needed to, because we couldn't get the job spaces filled. People said I'm not going to work for $18,000 a year with all the risk involved," Farrelly said, noting the pay raises should help increase the police force by some 50 policemen to about 450 officers.

By contrast, starting pay for Puerto Rico Commonwealth police is less than $10,000 a year.

The Farrelly administration also is asking the U.S. government to boost manpower and funding to fight drug trafficking, a significant contributing factor to the rise of crime, he added.

To lay the groundwork for future economic growth, the government also is undertaking an ambitious public works program, that recently included an $80 million bond issue by the Water and Power Authority to finance new plants.

Plans also call for a $34 million educational complex on St. Croix, expected to be completed by next year; a $17 million dock in Frederiksted, St. Croix, hopefully to be finished by 1994; and a $37 million government office complex in the Donoe area of St. Thomas, expected to be started before 1994.

Farrelly said he hoped the public works program could offset recent declines in tourism, which tourism officials attribute to the Persian Gulf War and the U.S. economic downturn.

"We're in a recession, and revenues are down," Farrelly said. "If we can just stand still this year, we'll be lucky."

Protect Long Bay marine environment

By OLASEE DAVIS

The decade of the 90s is being called the "Decade of the Environment." Thus, the whole world seems to be becoming aware spiritually, mentally, physically, emotionally, and politically of the environmental destruction on our planet. Many governments worldwide are saying that it makes sense to prevent environmental degradation than to remedy it.

Some countries' economical hardships and fines imposed by their government to industries, developers, and so on have sent strong message about the importance of protecting and maintaining their natural resources.

In the Virgin Islands, an environmental awareness has yet to become apparent in the general population. The lack of concern is obvious and is reflected by the number of people in these islands who still throw trash on the streets. There is a definite need in the Virgin Islands to make people conscious of the serious environmental problems these islands face and the importance of preserving the existing natural resources.

I believe environmental education begins in grade school since these children will be the future heads of government tomorrow. One way I believe to raise environmental consciousness is to expose people to such pollution as to our ocean so they realize that waste discarded, especially in water, does come back.

Historically speaking, St. Thomas has one of the best harbors in the Caribbean or in the world. It was known for its commercial ports in the early 1700 and 1800. Today, the harbor still serves as an important part of the Virgin Islands economy especially on the island of St. Thomas.

The $94 million Long Bay proposed project by the West Indian Co. Ltd. on St. Thomas would have a major impact on the marine environment. At present, the area has too many boats which might be causing ecological degradation on the marine community. Believe me, anything that threatened the quality of the Virgin Islands' water, directly or indirectly, has threatened the Virgin Islands' economy at present and future.

If we in the islands do not get a hold of controlling ocean pollution, the Virgin Islands will lose much of the ability to attract tourists, clean industries or research projects of desirable nature. In the early 70s, the sewers serving St. Thomas harbor from Long Bay to Crown Bay area discharged an estimate of 3 million gallons of raw sewage daily. Thus, the color and odor of much of the harbor objectionable and floating waste became a problem.

In the early 1900s, the harbor of St. Thomas was polluted by human waste. The island that is called Hassel Island was once connected to the island of St. Thomas. The water between Hassel Island and St. Thomas was so polluted that they had to blast the area between St. Thomas and Hassel Island to allow the waste to float out to sea.

St. Thomas harbor is basically shaped like a swimming pool because of it surrounded islands that enclosed the harbor. Therefore, the movement of the waves are not strong to carry waste a far distance. Thus, the Long Bay area already congested by the surrounded businesses, traffic from vehicles, ships at port, residential dwelling in the area, and too many boats in the area had very little to protect the marine life.

Common sense teaches us that we can expect to get greater returns from our marine environment if we develop every area of our marine environment. How much greater and for how long would we destroy open space near our shore areas. However, we as a people of these islands can move ahead by managing marine resources in a way that recognizes they are limited and easily damaged.

Some people will say that the WICO's development will bring jobs. Jobs for whom? Are we continue to be fooled everytime there is a big development in the Virgin Islands that jobs are plentiful? Some of the time or half of the time

Improvement of STX airport not a priority in budget

By CHARLES FISHER

Executive Branch officials admitted during budget hearings yesterday that the government cannot afford to fund $429 million in Capital Improvement Projects, Senate Finance Chairman Elmo Roebuck said.

The Finance Committee budget hearings which yesterday featured the members of the Public Finance Authority, centered around the status of various bond issues made. It was also held in order to question and become informed by the PFA as to the establishment of priorities for funding $429 million of capital projects authorized by the government. (See related story on Page 4.)

When questioned by the Finance Committee Chairman Elmo D. Roebuck about the difference between total capital improvement projects and monies available, Budget Director Jose George indicated that there was a total of $429 million in projects authorized by the legislature and only $145.9 million available to fund the projects. The PFA was asked by Finance Committee Chairman Roebuck,

"Was the government in a position, as bankrupt as it is, to support Capital Improvement Projects of this magnitude with the resources available? If not, what projects can be eliminated?"

Finance Commissioner Rudolph Krigger testified that the government was not in a position, at this time, to fund the total cost of this program.

However, Budget Director George said that ll of the 50 projects that can be eliminated are: The acquisition & development of Martin Marietta; improvement and extension to the runway of Alexander Hamilton Airport on St. Croix; water lines improvement; Government Center on St. Thomas; the construction, installation, renovation, repair, electric generation, transportation and water desalination; maintenance, improvement and repairs of roads and highways; port and harbor Enighed Pond in St. John; port and harbor in Frederiksted, St. Croix; construction of the airport terminal in St. Thomas; improvement to the terminal & runway of the Alexander Hamilton Airport on St. Croix and to pay the Hurricane Hugo claims from the Hugo Insurance Claims Fund.

These projects, they continued, will be funded either by

Eight arrested in energy rebate scam

By SAM DIMEO
Avis Staff Writer

Eight Virgin Islands residents have been arrested for allegedly defrauding the Energy Office out of more than $8,000 in appliance rebates, a police investigator said yesterday.

Sgt. Elton Lewis, who heads the white-collar crime division within the Insular Investigations Office, said six St. Croix residents and two from St. Thomas were arrested following a four-month investigation.

Lewis said all eight were faced a bevy of charges including conspiracy and embezzlement and were released on unsecured bonds set by the Territorial Court. He said arraignment hearings were scheduled for Wednesday.

The arrests included those of two Energy Office workers on St. Croix — Saida D. Lynch, 22, and Muriel E. Herber, 27 — whose duties included verifying information for federal rebates for applicants who purchased energy-conserving appliances, Lewis said.

"Basically, this is a scheme," Lewis explained. "What they were doing, basically they would alter, forge or otherwise misrepresent the documentation."

Lewis said the two, along with six other associates and family members, would allegedly falsify applications to receive rebates on items that were never purchased.

He said those arrested included Royena M. Lynch, 25, Saida's sister; Elaine E. Gabriel, 44, the mother of the women; Kenneth F. Francis, 29, a St. Kitts native living here and the boyfriend of Saida; Kelton Williams, a St. Kitts-born associate Francis living on St. Thomas; Paulette Jeffers-Collins, another St. Kitts living in St. Thomas; Mattylee E. Seeley, 28, an associate of Herber living on St. Croix.

"They would falsify all the information on the application, make up a names, Social Security numbers, addresses and also alter and piece up the purchase receipt," Lewis explained.

"We went back to the suppliers and determined if in fact they had actually purchased anything," the police sergeant said. "In every instance the answer was no."

Lewis said more than a half-dozen appliance suppliers were contacted.

He also said the probe into alleged irregularities was launched in May after Energy Director Claudette Young-Hinds lodged a complaint with the department.

"We had received initial complaints from Miss Young-Hinds that there might be some impropriety in the department ... concerning the rebate on the energy-efficient appliances," Lewis said.

He said the case was turned over to the WAPA rates highest in U.S.

By J.F. McCARTHY

The Virgin Islands Water and Power Authority charges "one of the highest" rates for electricity in the country, WAPA Executive Director Alberto Bruno-Vega said yesterday. (See related story on Page 1.)

When WAPA's fees are compared to statistics for major U.S. utilities prepared by Jacksonville Electric in Florida, the Virgin Islands utility comes out with the highest rates, Bruno-Vega said.

In January 1991 when the statistics were gathered, WAPA charged $74.83 for 500 kilowatt-hours (kwh) of electricity, he said. The average residential electrical customer in the territory uses from 400 kwh to 450 kwh per month.

By comparison, Long Island Lighting in New York charged $74.07 for the same amount of electricity; Southern California Edison charged $60.59; New York City's Consolidated Edison charged $54.46; and Southern Michigan's Detroit Edison charged $47.04, according to the statistics.

Some of the cheapest rates for electricity were found in Washington state where dams and nuclear power help make for some of the most affordable power in the nation, he said. The rates for Washington state were not immediately available yesterday.

But Bruno-Vega added that the statistics were taken in January 1991 when the Persian Gulf crisis was making fuel prices the highest in several years. WAPA depends on imported fuel oil for 100 percent of its electrical production.

He made his comments in an hour-long speech before a meeting of the St. Croix Chamber of Commerce at the Cormorant Beach Hotel yesterday.

New swordfish regulations

Avis Staff

Fishermen beware!

Federal authorities has issued emergency regulations to protect and restore the declining swordfish population, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The new regulations will prohibit the sale, barter or trade or recreationally-caught swordfish which can be caught only by rod-and-wheel gear, NOAA said in a prepared release.

Recreational fishermen are now also prohibited from having gear other than rod-and-reel aboard their vessels and must comply with the minimum size limit, but are not subject to a bag limit.

The regulations, released by NOAA's National Marine and Fisheries Service, will allow a catch quota for fishermen harvesting swordfish in the Caribbean, Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico.

Professional fishermen will be allowed to catch three million pounds (dressed weight) of swordfish during each of two January to June, July to December periods, NOAA said.

For each season, drift gillnet fishermen will be limited to a 40,785-pound swordfish quota. Those fishermen using other allowable commercial gear, including longline and harpoon gear, will be limited to a 2,959,215-pound quota, according to NOAA.

The new regulations went into effect June 12, 1991.

After a quota is reached, any further possession or landing of swordfish using that gear will be prohibited except for a bycatch limit of two swordfish per trip. No bycatch is allowed for fishermen using only harpoon gear.

No more than 15 percent of the total number of swordfish landed from each trip can be less than 31 inches dressed carcass length or less than 41 pounds dressed carcass weight.

Women's group to look at child abuse

By LYNDA LOHR
St. Thomas Bureau

Twenty-six children have died here of abuse in the last 10 years - a fact which has pushed the issue to the front burner at the Women's Resource Center Inc.

And it will be the main topic of discussion at a luncheon at 12:30 p.m. tomorrow at Victor's New Hideout in Subbase.

Speakers include Dilsa Rohan Capdeville, the center's child abuse specialist and a veteran social worker, Lt. Fitzroy Williams, who heads the Police Department's Crime Prevention Program, and Assistant Attorneys General Douglas Dick and Denise Counts.

Veronic Handy Smith, who chairs the Women's Resource Center Inc. board, said the speakers will discuss the appointment of guardians who represent abused children in the legal system.

"The judge gives a lot of weight to the guardian's opinion," said Smith, noting that the guardian usually is a lawyer.

She said it is important for children to have their own attorneys so they are assured of independent representation separate from their parents.

Smith said the guardian evaluates whether an abused child can return home, which can happen if the parent has had counseling or parent effectiveness training.

"They are monitored," she stressed.

Smith said that over the years child abuse has increased in severity to the point that burnings and beatings with boards are common.

She said the death of 2-year-old Shanequan Arnett, who died in April after she was suffocated by her step-father, is a clear example of how bad things have gotten.

"And the increase in sex abuse is worse than others," noted Smith.

She said that the ages of abused children are decreasing, and it is common for the Department of Human Services to remove infants from their homes because they are abused.

While the number of reported child abuse cases rose from 35 in 1974 to 945 in 1989, Smith said there is still a stigma attached to child abuse and many people fail to report.

"But schools and neighbors are becoming more aware," said Smith.

Tomorrow's luncheon is a prelude to a conference on child and sexual abuse to be held Oct. 3 to 5 at Frenchman's Reef Beach Resort.

To make reservations for the lunch, call 776-7867. Tickets are $20.

The Woman's Resource Center Inc. operates a shelter for battered women and their children and provides counseling and court advocacy services.

Roebuck calls for reduction of expenditures in budget

By CHARLES FISHER
Avis Political Reporter

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Elmo D. Roebuck, in his opening statement during the first of a series of budget hearings slated for the next two weeks, said yesterday that he expected representatives of the various departments and agencies to remain with the budget of $450.3 million and be prepared to justify the budget as it has been submitted by the Governor.

The Office of Management and Budget Director Jose George provided an overview of the 1992 budget and revealed that a revised set of revenue projections for this proposed budget will result in a $12.8 million reduction.

George blamed the drastic downward trend on the lack of sustained revenue collections partially due to layoffs within the private sector. George was asked if taxes will be to be increased further, and he replied that he did not know.

Roebuck asked that the Executive Branch submit a revised projected revenue statement along with a specific game plan for the reduction of expenditures for $450.3 million.

However, the Finance chairman said that he will continue the budget process and deal with the problems he foresees due to the changes in the original projected revenue picture submitted in the August 31st budget.

In a related matter, Roebuck questioned the Budget Director on the Senator's discovery of a $2.9 million enhancement fee paid to Marine Midland Bank in the form of a letter of credit.

Because of a lack of answers as to the length of payment of this debt and what the agreement entails, Roebuck said that he requested that the Budget Director furnish the Finance Committee with all information pertaining to the matter.

Further questioning by Sen. Roebuck of yet another Executive Branch representative, Robert Mathes, Coordinator of the Government Improvement Projects, revealed aspects of the Capital Improvement Plan heretofore unknown.

Mathes presented the Legislature with a detailed list of active capital projects of the Government during yesterday's budget hearings. He also gave a status report on each of the projects and said that the active projects

Counseling for young questioned

The Committee on Education, chaired by Sen. Almando "Rocky" Liburd, held the first of three public hearings last night in the St. John Boulon Center.

The committee met to receive testimony from persons in the territory's school community, including teachers, principals and parents.

Sue Higgins, a concerned parent, was troubled with the quality of caring expressed by school counselors and Administrators toward students, especially the young men, a spokesperson said.

Higgins said that she felt that a little more caring should be expressed. She was in favor of a new school on St. John, and indicated that there was something good to be said about a small, "bare-bone education."

Janet Burton, Librarian at the Julius E. Sprauve and the Guy Benjamin schools, opened her testimony with strong disapproval of the statements made by Cecil Benjamin in a daily publication, highly critical of Sen. Liburd's idea of holding public hearings.

Benjamin expressed the notion that enough hearings had been held already, and what was required was more courage on the part of elected representatives.

But Burton said,"Open dialogue between our people and its elected representatives is necessary for our democratic society's function...The people don't speak often enough, or loudly enough. The time has come when we have to demand the action of our leaders, not passively or apathetically accept inaction."

Senator Liburd added,"Too often, we plan for people instead of planning with them."

The main concern at the hearing, however, was transportation for St. John students traveling to St. Thomas for school, and transportation of physically challenged students.

It was the consensus of the committee and the testifiers assembled, that a public high school be built on the island of St. John. Senator Liburd mentioned, "phasing in" a suggestion that has been tossed around for some time.

This process would mean building a 10th grade the first year, and as monies became available, continue by adding the 11th and 12th grades the following years.

Sen. Stephanie Scott-Williams suggested that parents do their best to get involved in their children's education, "Share phone numbers if you have to," she said.

Gov. Farrelly has submitted a bill to the 19th Legislature which calls for the approval of a deed exchange between the Government of the Virgin Islands and Hess Oil Virgin Islands that would reroute "Hope Road".

Gov. Farrelly said that due to the hundreds of workers crossing the very busy "Hope Road" near the construction site of the first Catalytic Cracking Unit at the Hess refinery on St. Croix—there exists a potential safety problem.

"I believe Hess has made the Governnment a generous offer that alleviates potential safety problems as well as ties in with our plans for the realignment of the Melvin H. Evans Highway.," Gov. Farrelly said.

The agreement proposed in the bill requires Hess to construct, at its expense, a new by-pass road in full compliance with Federal Highway Administration specifications.

Woodson teacher selected for presidential award for science

Prospero Lewis, a 7th and 9th grade science teacher at John H. Woodson Junior High School, has been selected for a presidential award for excellence in science and mathematics teaching, and he has also been invited to the White House next March in recognition of his contributions.

Lewis received notice of his selection on Sept. 3rd. from D. Allan Bromley, ssistant to the President for Science and Technology.

"On behalf of the President, it gives me great pleasure to inform you that you have been selected for a Presidential Award for Excellence in Science and Mathematics Teaching.

"Through your outstanding accomplishments as a teacher, you exemplify the excellence this program is designed to recognize and encourage," Bromley said.

Lewis was named a state awardee in the program on Aug. 15, 1991 which rendered him eligible to be selected later as a Presidential awardee.

Prospero Lewis, John H. Woodson Science Teacher and recipient of the Presidential Award for Excellence.

The award carries with it a $7,500 stipend. Ceremonies honoring Lewis and other state awardees were held over the summer and hosted by community groups, educational organizations and Washington area businesses.

Lewis is a resident of Kingshill, St. Croix, and has taught science for 16 years in junior and senior high schools. Lewis was judged on his ability to improve students' understanding of science, his grasp of this subject area, and his educational leadership abilities.

Recipients of the state and Presidential awards are expected to play a significant leadership role in their local schools and school districts.

Lewis is currently president of the St. Croix Science Teachers' Association and is involved as a committee member for the "Drug Free" School Program.

The Presidential Awards program has identified superior science and mathematics teachers at the state and national levels since 1983.

Each spring, the Presidential Awards program selects three science and three mathematics teachers in both elementary and secondary classrooms in each state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and in five U. S. jurisdictions and territories.

Each fall, four teachers from a group of 12 state-level awardees are selected to receive Presidential Awards. Lewis will also receive personal recognition for his efforts during his White House visit as Bromley indicated.

"You are invited to spend the week of March 10, 1992 as guest of the President, here in Washington, to participate in a series of activities designed to recognize each of you personally for your teaching contributions, and to focus public attention on the importance of science and math-

Education Board meetings should be open - Liburd

By BILLY VAUGHN
Avis Staff Writer

St. Croix Board of Education members met Thursday with Assistant Education Commissioner Rupert Ross in a meeting closed to the press despite laws declaring such gatherings open.

"The meeting today is not for public consumption," said Board Chairman Doreen Carter. "We just wanted to have an informal discussion with the newly appointed Assistant Commissioner of Education to determine how we can work together."

Carter said board members wanted to put their relationship with Ross "into perspective" and added should members of the press be present, those attending would be less likely to speak freely.

She said both board members and the assistant commissioner share one common goal: "to make sure the children get the best possible education."

"Our next general meeting is scheduled for Oct. 10 and you are welcome to attend that one," she said. "Also, there are various committee meetings that are held and we can notify you of those as well."

Acting Attorney General Richard Baker, when asked if school board meeting are supposed to be open to the public said it depends on what the topic for discussion would be.

But Senate Education Committee Chairman Almando "Rocky" Liburd was more outspoken.

"Those meetings, as far as I know, are supposed to be open to the public," Liburd said. "I think they should be open."

According to the Virgin Islands Code, "all meetings of a governmental agency or a subdivision thereof authorized to take

EDITORIAL:

TAMING OF THE KILLER HURRICANES

It seems that our hurricane supplication and thanksgiving have not been in vain.

With two weeks still remaining in the active period of the hurricane season, the worse is behind us. Of the five named tropical storms this year only Bob and Claudette have developed into powerful hurricanes. Bob, however, is the second costliest hurricane after Hugo.

Last evening the weather forecasters downgraded Danny to a wave which may sweep the Virgin Islands today while Erika and Claudette are heading eastwards to colder climes.

It may be too early to celebrate but the region has been spared the ravages of hurricanes in the likes of Hugo and Gilbert of yesteryear.

The season is virtually over and demonic storms spawned off Cape Verde to wreak havoc across the Caribbean lacked the fury this year, exactly as hurricane expert William Gray predicted.

The prediction in the wake of Hurricane Hugo two years ago was for several hurricanes in the category four class or above lashing the region over the coming years.

Dr. Gray, a noted hurricane forecaster said a few weeks ago that a below-average hurricane season was in the offing this year.

Gray and other forecasters agree that the general outlook for the 1990s and the early years of the next century is for more intense hurricanes than those of the last two decades.

"We've been through a real long period of hurricane inactivity in the '70s, '80s up until 1985, and I think we're coming out of that," said Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

Nature is defying Man and for our economic well being we trust that the experts are wrong on the forecast for more powerful storms in the future.

Whether by a quirk of nature or divine intervention, it seems that we have sailed through the season smoothly and will continue to do so in the coming years.

We have had moments of anxiety and apprehension but the storms that threatened us from the east veered north at the last moment before dumping heavy rains.

Our Hurricane Supplication and Hurricane Thanksgiving Days were not in vain.

Letters to the editor

The Gov is after the rats

Dear editor:

We all have time for habitual complaints to register our disdain as a result of personal displeasures of whatever reason, and I include myself. Many months ago, I complained bitterly regarding the atrocious conditions of the garbage containers and the lack of adherence by the responsible Agency to address and correct the problem.

Recently, I read an editorial regarding tourists and the existing garbage conditions. I can only conclude the author had its head in the sand. As I would (and did) complain, I now feel compelled to congratulate the governor for his personal involvement together with the responsible agency for the outstanding job of not only the rapid replacement of dumpsters (or garbage containers), but cleaning the immediate area of all debris.

We in the Catherines Rest area are indeed fortunate to have a gentleman (whose name I do not know) who monitored the cleanliness and speaks harshly towards the inconsiderate individuals who apparently are accustomed to unsanitary conditions and therefore refuse to toss their garbage into the containers but simply drop it carelessly alongside.

In any event, one cannot disagree, this has been a remarkable improvement in the overall garbage problem. It seems the government is doing its job - lets hope the public will share its responsibility.

We at Bugby Hole, Catherines Rest, Work and Rest, Royal Manor, Herman Hill among other areas, are very appreciative of the governor's help in hopefully diminishing the rat population, keeping children healthy and restoring vegetation - islandwide. Thank you again.

Very truly yours,
Gene J. Neville

How does a dead man die?

By HENRY A. SAMUEL

How does a dead man die?
Each day in agony
little by little, bit by bit worn down with anxiety.
How does a dead man die?
Forever groping, clawing struggling to escape from his enslavement.
Hands extended but rejected.
How does a dead man die?
Asking, begging, crying for help everyone desiring to help no one helping.
How does a dead man die?
Alone in his agony!
Alone in his darkness!
Alone in his enslavement!
Alone asking for help!

Fire Chief: Thanks

Dear editor:

I wish to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to the St. Thomas community as a whole and to the various agencies and businesses such as : Public Works, Airport Firefighters; Vitelco, WAPA, V.I. Police Department, Bluebeards Castle (who provided us with breakfast), the retired firefighters who came out to assist us at our most crucial moments with the two recent fires at Kronprindsens Market on lower main street and Coastal Enterprises in Crown Bay.

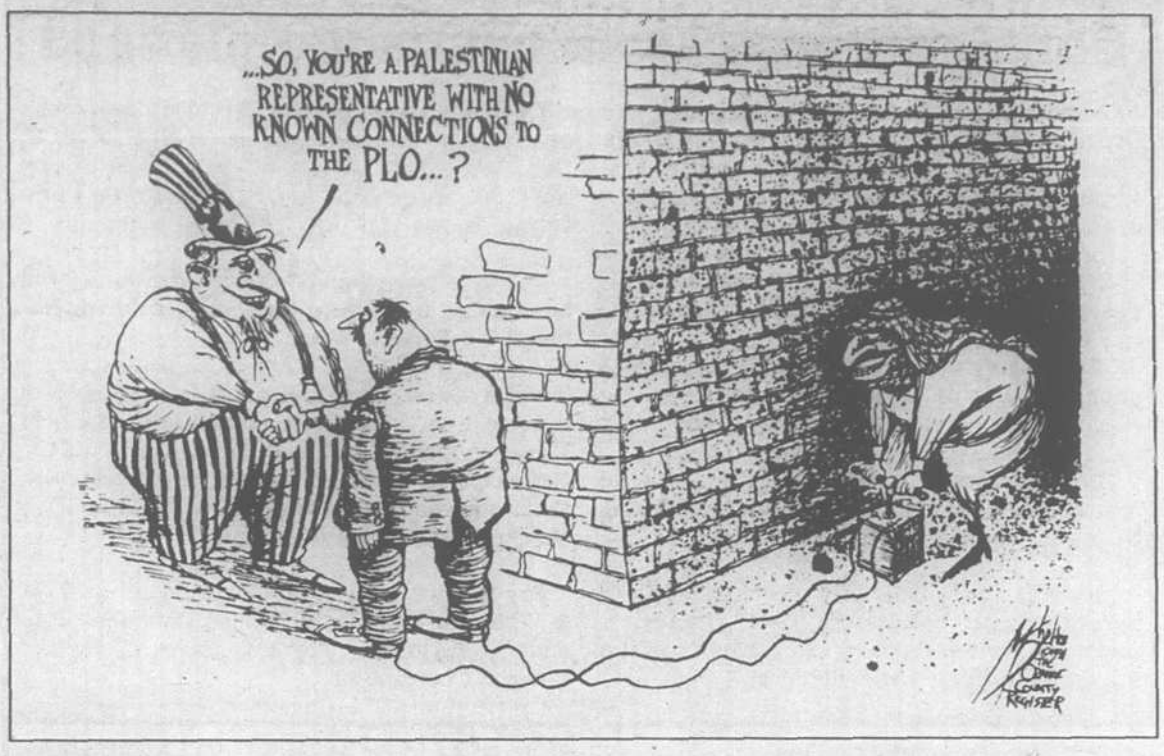

I also would like to compliment and congratulate all the firefighters for a job well done. I am exjamin Ubiles who was in charge of both fires. Together we proved that teamwork and cooperation can do.

A special thanks to Gov. Alexander Farrelly for taking time out of his busy schedule to visit the site of the explosion and taking a tour of the premises with me. The Farrelly Administration has been extremely supportive and helpful in us acquiring our new fire trucks and the necessary equipment to work with.

Remember when you have the proper tools, functional equipment and hardworking, dedicated and conscientious employees you can ac-

We do give a hoot

By MARIANNE MEANS

WASHINGTON — It will be difficult for Congress, a political body, to investigate in a non-political way the allegations that 1980 Reagan campaign officials cut a secret deal with Iran to delay release of the U.S. hostages in return for arms shipments.

House Minority Leader Bob Michel immediately dismissed the probe as partisan and frivolous, sniffing that "people don't give two hoots about what happened 10 years ago."

But people do give quite a few hoots. If such a breach of the integrity of the political process occurred, the voters, the hostages and history ought to know. If it did not, the Reagan team ought to be cleared of such nasty suspicions.

The controversy goes back to the fact that Ronald Reagan's advisers were worried that a mid-campaign release of the hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Iran could prompt a sudden burst of popularity for President Carter.

Their fears were exaggerated. There is no way Carter could have won re-election 11 years ago. He was too weakened by the party split with Sen. Edward Kennedy, John Anderson's independent candidacy, high inflation and interest rates, Middlewestern anger over a grain embargo and the disaffection of blue-collar, urban Catholics. He carried only six states and the District of Columbia, with 41 percent of the vote.

In that sense, a sneaky hostage deal would not have dramatically changed history as did Democratic hanky-panky in the 1960 campaign and Republican trickery in 1968. In both those instances, the election turned on a vote margin of only a half-percent nationwide. It wouldn't have taken much to reverse the outcome.

Richard Nixon was convinced that the 1960 election was stolen by Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, whose Cook County machine was famous for inventing overly generous Democratic voting tallies. Despite some evidence of precinct fraud, Nixon didn't ask for a recount because he realized the resulting bitterness might ruin future political prospects. He piously attributed his decision to a desire to avoid embarrassing democracy in the eyes of the world.

John F. Kennedy never acknowledged knowing anything about Daley's creativity, except to observe wryly that Daley was wise not to release the Cook County Democratic returns until he saw the amount by which Republicans had inflated their own count in downstate Illinois.

Eight years later, the campaign between Nixon (rewarded for his earlier wisdom in being a good sport) and Vice President Hubert Humphrey turned on one issue — ending the Vietnam War. President Johnson was making mammoth last-ditch efforts that autumn to bring about a peace settlement that might rescue his reputation, end the bloodbath and help elect his heir-apparent.

Johnson thought he had an agreement for a peace conference in Paris that October in return for ending the bombing of North Vietnam. But Anna Chennault, a Nixon campaign official, secretly called South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu. She persuaded him to refuse to join the talks until after the election by promising he'd get a better deal from Nixon than from Humphrey.

When Johnson learned of the call and complained, Nixon insisted he knew nothing about it — although key aides did. Humphrey considered blowing the whistle but wasn't sure whether Nixon was lying. In the end, neither Johnson nor Humphrey said anything. Humphrey lost.

The problem here, as in a possible Reagan hostages deal, is that the United States can have only one president at a time. The president bears the ultimate responsibility for national security and the conduct of foreign policy. Underhanded meddling in international affairs involving life or death by unelected outsiders for selfish political purposes comes very close to treason. In 1968, delaying the peace talks meant extending the war and the killing. Simarily in 1980, postponing freedom for the hostages meant prolonged and unnecessary suffering.

Separate House and Senate committees are probing whether campaign chairman William Casey and perhaps others negotiated secretly in Madrid with Iranian agents in July to stack the deck in Reagan's favor. Casey is accused of promising to transfer U.S. military equipment via Israel to Iran in violation of public policy, a transfer that did take place later.

Casey, who died in 1987, became Reagan's Central Intelligence Agency chief and a central figure in the 1986 Iran-Contra scandal, which could have evolved from those alleged campaign contacts.

No one has been able to establish Casey's whereabouts during the period in which Iranian arms dealers claim to have met with him. He was

Sam Nunn: Global Democrat

By CHRISTOPHER MATTHEWS

WASHINGTON — Georgia's Sam Nunn didn't like the words coming from George Bush's mouth Monday morning.

The president was making his first statement on the Moscow coup that toppled Mikhail Gorbachev. He was saying how "disturbing" the whole thing was, how it "could" have serious consequences for U.S.-Soviet relations, how he hoped the coup leaders would "continue" the progress Gorbachev had begun. The president was telling the TV cameras before him about his "gut instinct" that coup figurehead Cennady Yanayev had a "certain commitment to reform."

No. The Senate Armed Services chairman didn't like the sound of that. Within hours of Bush's statement, Nunn was on CNN with words that were neither kind nor gentle — words like "condemn."

"I think we ought to be very strong in telling those who have taken over in an illegitimate fashion that they will not be supported and, even at this stage, recognized by our country.

"I think we ought to send a clear signal to the illegitimate leadership that has taken control," the Georgia Democrat continued, "that we will not in any way help them or assist them, that we are going to wait and deal with the leadership that has been constitutionally selected."

What triggered Nunn's broadside, he said Tuesday, was the sense he got after hearing Bush's Monday morning remarks, that the administration was becoming overly tolerant of the Moscow junta that pushed Gorbachev aside.

"It was very tentative," he said of the president's initial statement. "It did not send the message as clear as we should have."

Nunn was also concerned with the president's business-as-usual "tone," his "lack of clarity" about where the United States stood. "It was time for somebody, regardless of party, to make some very important points."

By late Monday, the president's tone had turned markedly sharper as he condemned what he termed "the unconstitutional resort to force" by the eight-man coup and promised that the U.S. would "avoid in every possible way actions that would lend legitimacy" to the junta leaders.

By Tuesday, with Bush's condemnation of the coup and support for Russian President Boris Yeltsin intensified, Nunn was mollified.

"The president is on the right track," he said in a telephone interview from Atlanta. He said that Bush was correct in serving notice that the U.S. would do zero business with those who seized power from Gorbachev. "My critique," he said, "was of yesterday morning. It looked as if we were going to tolerate the situation, that it would be business as usual."

Whether Nunn's remarks of midday Monday, which were broadcast live by CNN, served as a political "wake up" call for President Bush is unclear. What's certain is that a combination of forces led the president to harden his opposition to the Moscow coup by later in the day.

By speaking up, the Georgia Democrat demonstrated the role of constructive critic in the American political system. While those seeking the presidency in 1992 either held their fire or remained on vacation, Sam Nunn had the commitment, self-confidence and savvy to say what needed to be said.

What's said is that a Democrat with the rare credentials to be a world-class president isn't running for the job.

Career officer is nominated to Dominican Republic post

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush will nominate Robert S. Pastorino, a career Foreign Service officer, as ambassador to the Dominican Republic, the White House said Thursday.

Pastorino, 51, is deputy chief of mission at the American Embassy in Mexico City. He would succeed Paul D. Taylor in the Dominican post.

Bush also will nominate Albert P. Burleigh to succeed Morris D. Busby as the State Department's coordinator for counter-terrorism. The job carries ambassadorial rank.

Burleigh, 49, is deputy assistant secretary of state for the Bureau of Intelligence and Research.

Puerto Rico logs record number of robberies

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) - Police reported Thursday the 71st bank robbery on the island of this record-breaking year.

Three armed men robbed the Banco Popular in San Juan's Puerto Nuevo sector of an undisclosed amount of money Thursday morning, police said.

The previous bank robbery record of 50 was set just last year.

However, robberies to savings and loans cooperatives are not included in the bank robbery statistics.

Consumer education campaign planned

Commissioner Clement "Chin" Magras of the Department of Licensing and Consumer Affairs recently announced that the department's Consumer Protection Division is gearing up for a major consumer education campaign.

The campaign which targets adults, children and the public and private sectors, will focus on shopping tips, credit scams and other consumer concerns.

"The territory's grocers recently promised more price cuts, but those price cuts often won't be effective if the consumer isn't aware of how to get the best price for their dollar," said Magras.

The consumer education push will utilize all forms of media and will officially kick-off during Nation Consumers' Week, Oct. 20-26.

However, the Consumer Protection Division's Fourth Annual Essay and Poster Contest is underway for the territory's students from the 4th grade through university level.

The students are being asked to write an essay or create a poster using the theme "How to Become a Better Consumer." Entries are due by Sept. 30, and will be judged by educators and DCLA staffers.

This year more than $6,000 in prize money will be awarded to the winning students during National Consumers' Week.

DLCA is inviting all non-profit organizations to become a part of the information fair to be held Tuesday, Oct. 22, 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. at the Emancipation Garden Gazebo on St. Thomas. Consumer education fairs are also planned for St. Croix and St. John.

For further information, call DLCA at 773-2226 and ask for Angel Suarez, Consumer Protection Director or Lorraine Quinion, Special Projects Coordinator.

Guyana's government still persecutes one of its members, says opposition party

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) - The government is carrying out a vendetta against the brother of a slain politician, a major opposition party said Wednesday.

In a statement, the Working People's Alliance said the political climate has not improved in this former British colony, even though general elections are only months away.

The statement said the government has refused to allow a car and personal belongings of Donald Rodney, brother of slain WPA founder Walter, to enter Guyana free of duty.

Guyanese who live outside the country for more than a year are entitled to return with all their personal belongings free of duty once necessary documentation is completed abroad at an Guyana Embassy.

Donald Rodney, who survived the 1980 car bombing that killed his brother Walter, lived in exile in Britain from 1982 until last November when he returned home.

Rodney, who is in the party's executive council, claims immigration officials have prevented him from working in Guyana by placing a special stamp in his passport.

The WPA has consistently fingered the governing People's National Congress for planting an antipersonnel bomb in Rodney's car.

The government has denied the charges, but it has accused Donald, who escaped with minor injuries, of illegal possession of arms and explosives.

Donald left the country two years later on bail, while appealing a conviction on the charges. His appeal is yet to be heard.

Elections are due in December.

Health care workers to learn trauma techniques in special class

Territorial emergency health care professionals will benefit from a three-day seminar on basic trauma life support being taught by the National Chapter of Basic Trauma Life Support from Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 16-18.

The instructor level class is designed for pre-hospital care. It will emphasize skills used by paramedics and nurses to recognize the mechanisms of injury, assess and perform critical interventions, as well as to recognize the need to immediately package and transport trauma victims in order to save lives.

Participants in the instructor course are currently in the emergency medicine field in the Virgin Islands. Upon their successful completion of this course, they will become basic trauma life support instructors and will be able to provide the same training to other health care providers in the future.

On Sept. 19-20, the graduates will also participate in their first teaching session. They will be teaching other Virgin Islands professionals the same skills and training they just received. This is a requirement from the national chapter which enables recent graduates of the instructor course to become full-time instructors.

The Department of Highway Safety is responsible for funding a grant to the Trauma Institute for $15,000. This money covered the cost of books, materials and travel costs for the instructors.

Pre-school workers attend week-long training program

The Department of Human Services recently held a week-long training program for pre-school services employees in the territory. The meetings brought together day care/Head Start workers with the department's administrators to discuss ways to implement the philosophy of the Head Start program.

On the first day of training, Commissioner Juel T.R. Molloy acknowledged that the increase of alcohol and drug abuse by parents "has created greater problems" for day care service workers. She also emphasized that the resources exist to better deal with these problems, and she voiced the Department's commitment to make full use of all resources for the benefit of the community.

The Head Start program has existed in the Virgin Islands for 26 years, and through the Department of Human Services, it is providing educational, health and social services to the children in its care. It also conducts activities which support the parental role in the child's development.

Molloy said the Department is opening more all day centers to accommodate working parents. The centers officially opened Sept. 12.

Parents may apply for the program at the Department of Human Services' office in Barbel Plaza South on St. Thomas or call 774-5370 and on St. Croix at the Estate Diamond Office or call 772-4950.

Freedom devoured by government

...."How is it that people who have been crushed by the sheer weight of slavery and cast to the bottom of the pit can nevertheless find strength in themselves to rise up and free themselves —first in spirit and then in body —while those who soar un-hampered over the peaks of freedom suddenly lose the taste of freedom, lose the will to defend it, and hopelessly confused and lost, almost begin to crave slavery?"

ALEKSANDR SOLZHENISYN

And so it goes, as we observe the dismantling of totalitarianism and state socialism in the east, we experience our country and territory moving closer to it.

Our freedom is being devoured through government control, social indulgence, and abdication of social responsibility.

Forgive me for coming to the conclusion that our freedom is fading fast. But the same government that bans ear piercing here, because of the remote risk of AIDS, is the same government that refuses to require doctors and dentists to inform their patients if they are HIV positive.

If it is the danger to life that drives government regulations than why are abortion on demand clinics licensed and protected by government? The government has decided that the not yet born are not life, not yet a person, so thus not entitled to constitutional protection. The same government that will arrest and imprison you for taking a bucket of sand from the beach, dumps raw sewage and PCBs in our harbors.

The same government that, according to the GAO, misuses, loses, and purloins millions of dollars or public funds, is the same government that arrests a St. Thomas locksmith who now faces 5 years imprisonment for giving a wrong Social Security number to the phone company! (Who's ox did this poor soul gore?) They say he was practicing his trade without a license even though he had applied 6 months ago. Knowing this we can solve the Territory's drug problem by requiring government licensing for dealers.

After standing in line a some bureaucrat's office for many months, they will jump the gun and be ripe for arrest.

VICIOUS CIRCLE..

Here I go again beating up big bureaucratic government which, some of my readers say, is only a product of our society.

"Don't blame the government blame the people who support it." They claim "society is sick, so must their government be."

Is it simply a question of our government bureaucracy being a reflection of the moral decay of society?

Or does the intrusive bureaucratic government rumble along as a self-sustaining organism consuming the traditional values of its subjects.

The common desire of today's naive child, criminal teenager, or irresponsible adult is to be free to act without consequence.

Unfortunately, this destructive attitude extends to societies, governments, and whole cultures.

Today's political leaders

Women more abused than abusers

Women's Coalition of St. Croix

In the summer 1991 issue of the St. Thomas Citizens On The Alert (COTA) Newsletter, a caption appeared that the Women's Coalition believes to be very misleading concerning the issue of wife/woman battering.

The caption which we take exception to is as follows: "A recent study indicates wives physically abuse husbands more often than husband abuse wives," (page 7). The short article which followed was based on a study done by two female Phds, Tyree and Malone, and on the presentation they wrote of their research for the American Sociological Association. This presentation was titled: "How Can It Be That Wives Hit Husbands As Much As Husbands Hit Wives And None of Us Knew It."

Although serving the purpose of being an "eye catcher" this very quip caption and title both do a tremendous disservice to the thousands of battered women who are brought to the emergency room every day across the nation and the VI.

Domestic violence is never a topic to make light of - but this title and caption go one step further and insinuate that a battered woman deserves what she gets because she "started it" or at least was a willing and active participant in this abuse.

This suggestion, that the majority of women in abusive relationships are equally or even more aggressive than their husbands is totally false.

It has taken men and women too long already to have this vicious act recognized for what it is - a Crime, punishable by law, that comes from the perpetrator's need and desire to control and manipulate another human being.

Even Tyree and Malone maintain "...a recognition of wife beating as a social problem with devastating and well documented consequences for its victims." What the researchers neglect to point out and to emphasize, is that the majority of men who batter will take violence and abusive physical behavior to the extent that their mate requires emergency medical care or may even be killed as a result of the abuse.

The fact that both husbands and wives admit to "nastiness," shoving, pushing, and throwing objects, is a far cry from being severely and repeatedly beaten to the point of needing emergency medical care.

While violence and aggression should never be encouraged in a relationship, to compare the couples in the study to physically abusive husbands is like comparing shoplifting to armed robbery. Both are crimes, both are stealing and both are wrong but there is a vast difference in the severity and the consequences of such actions.

Before Tyree and Malone, and COTA uses such a flippant title to get their readers attention, (and they must know that many readers never get past a headline), they should have considered the following facts provided by the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence:

•Approximately 95 percent of the victims of battering are women.

•2/3 of the battering women's partners threaten to kill them.

•The Surgeon General reports that battering is the largest single cause of injury to women.

For those persons who read the COTA article or only the provocative headline, let us leave you with two additional thoughts...

•A 1984 reports from the Surgeon General states that domestic violence is the leading cause of death among women.

•A recent article on the front page of the Daily News details an attack on a St. Thomas woman allegedly stabbed seven times in her neck and upper body by her ex-boyfriend.

When was the last time you read in the Avis or Daily News or any newspaper that a woman stabbed her boyfriend seven times and with such brutality that the knife blade broke in the body?

The Women's Coalition is a non-profit, tax exempt organization dedicated to ending violence against women and children and promoting freedom from the oppression of sexism and racism.

St. Maarten-based airline expands Caribbean service

PHILIPSBURG, St. Maarten (AP) - WINAIR, the St. Maarten-based airline, has announced an ambitious program of providing a better service to the northeastern Caribbean.

The airline said in a statement Wednesday it is negotiating the lease acquisition of two Mitsubishi YS-11 aircraft for its services to St. Kitts, St. Thomas and St. Croix.

The airline also said it plans to introduce scheduled flights to Puerto Rico later this year.

WINAIR, which last month celebrated its 30th anniversary, pointed to the growing importance of the Princess Juliana Airport here as a regional hub and the eminent position of St. Maarten as a tourist destination.

WINAIR said the Twinotter's which have been the airline's landmark planes for several years lack the comforts required to compete on longer flights.

Filipino rebels call cease-fire in base deal

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - Communist rebels, who oppose the U.S. military presence in the Philippines, on Thursday declared a cease-fire in their 22-year-old insurgency, as the Senate appeared poised to reject an extension of the U.S. lease on Subic Bay naval base.

A senator with close ties to President Corazon Aquino said she had given up hope of winning Senate approval or of seeking voter approval in a referendum.

The senator, Rene Saguisag, said the president told him she was considering a plan that would give U.S. forces two to three years to withdraw and demand no compensation for use of the base during the pullout period.

The proposal appeared aimed at maintaining good relations with Washington despite the likely rejection of the base-lease agreement. At least eight of the 23 senators expressed support for the idea, when asked by The Associated Press.

Under the pact being weighed by the Philippines Senate, the United States would give up volcano-damaged Clark Air Base next year but keep Subic Bay naval base 10 more years in return for $203 million annually. The current lease expires Monday.

Two-thirds, or 16, of the senators would have had to approve the agreement. On Monday, the Senate voted 12-11 in a preliminary ballot to reject it.

Mrs. Aquino, who supported the agreement, failed to sway Senate opinions during a rally and march Tuesday.

Supporters of the bases agreement claimed the Philippines could not afford to offend the United States, its largest trading partner, at a time when thousands of Filipinos are suffering from the effects of the June eruptions of Mount Pinatubo.

Opponents of the bases agreement had argued that it provided insufficient aid and debt relief commitments. But President Bush said it was the United States' "best effort" and ruled out further negotiations.

Sen. Jose Lina offered a bill this week providing for a referendum on the base issue. But on Thursday, he told reporters that he would withdraw the bill Friday and instead offer a formula under which the U.S. forces would leave in two to three years.

During the withdrawal period, the government could offer the United States access to Subic on a commercial basis, he said.

Word of the rebel cease-fire, effective immediately, came in a statement to news organizations. In it, the insurgent National Democratic Front said it had declared the unilateral halt to fighting nationwide in hope the Senate will "hold firmly on to their patriotic stand" in rejecting the lease extension for Subic Bay.

Mrs. Aquino's executive secretary, Franklin Drilon, said the offer would have to be studied but that the government did not want it to undermine its efforts to reach separate peace agreements with regional rebel leaders.

Inquiry begins into Hurricane Gilbert scandal

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) - A public inquiry opened Thursday into the disappearance of $35 to $50 million of zinc meant for the construction of housing for the victims of 1988's Hurricane Gilbert.

The allegation is that some politicians gave away the zinc, which at one time was estimated by a government minister as eight years' supply for Jamaica, to their party supporters who were not in need of it.

For months people were seen selling the hurricane relief zinc at various locations on the streets of Kingston.

And there are reports from at least one area, that some hurricane victims are still living in tents.

Break in hostage stalemate s

NABATIYEH, Lebanon (AP) - Hopes grew Thursday for the release of Western hostages in Lebanon after Shiite Muslim kidnappers said British hostage Jack Mann was alive and well and praised Israel for releasing prisoners.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization in Beirut early Thursday gave the first word about a hostage who has been held for two years.

It said Mann was alive and well, and that the release of prisoners by Israel had raised hopes of a "happy ending" - with Mann and other Westerners going free if everything goes according to plan.

Israel on Wednesday freed 51 Lebanese prisoners and handed over the remains of nine guerrillas in exchange for word that one of its servicemen was dead.

The Israeli move was seen as a crucial break in the hostage stalemate, heightening prospects for a broad swap including the rest of Israel's dead and missing servicemen, more Arab detainees and the 11 missing Westerners.

Revolutionary Justice accompanied the handwritten Arabic language communique it delivered to the independent Beirut newspaper an-Nahar with a photograph of Mann. The 77-year-old former pilot has been missing since May 12, 1989.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, the diplomatic point man in efforts to break the hostage deadlock, was "very encouraged" by Israel's actions, his spokesman Francois Giuliani said.

Perez de Cuellar met Wednesday with Iranian officials in Tehran, but his spokesman gave no details about the talks.

In Washington, the Bush administration welcomed the actions. "We are very hopeful that this has ramifications that are helpful to the hostage situation," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, spiritual mentor to Hezbollah, which is believed to be an umbrella for the pro-Iranian hostage-holding factions, said the releases and repatriations "creates an atmosphere conducive to positive results."

Israel's chief hostage negotiator, Uri Lubrani, also expressed optimism about prospects for an overall settlement in the wake of Wednesday's "positive omen."

The developments come a month after the last big break in the hostage crisis. British television journalist John McCarthy was released Aug. 8, carrying a letter from his Shiite captors to Perez de Cuellar requesting that the U.N. chief mediate some sort of swap. Three days after McCarthy was released, American Edward Tracy was freed in Beirut.

The missing Westerners include five Americans, three Britons, two Germans and an Italian. The longest held is American Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Israel has long insisted on an accounting of its missing men in Lebanon as part of any overall hostage deal. It said in a military communique Wednesday it had received "irrefutable evidence" that serviceman Rahamim Alsheikh was dead.

Alsheikh had been missing since 1986, and confirmation of his death would leave six Israeli soldiers missing.

Report: Human rights violations in Ku

KUWAIT CITY (AP) - The human rights group Middle East Watch accuses the United States of being unwilling to protest murder, torture, arbitrary detention, deportation and other abuses in post-war Kuwait.

"The reinstated Kuwaiti government has trampled on (human) rights at nearly every turn, often with the use of violence," said the 63-page report, released Wednesday by the group in Washington and in Kuwait City.

"The U.S. administration ... has acted far more as a defender of the Kuwaiti government ... than as a government intent on living up to" human rights principles," the group says.

State Department spokesman Rick Boucher said in Washington that the criticism of the U.S. government was "one-sided."

Kuwait's information minister, Badr Yacoub, said the Middle East Watch report was exaggerated.

"There have been strict instructions from the emir that human rights principles should be respected here," he said in an interview. "Kuwait is a Muslim country that respects Muslim traditions."

"If there are any illegal practices taking place then they are at the same level as those that happen in any country in Europe or in the United States because it's easy to break the law," he said.

Boucher said that "credit should be given" for the improvements Kuwait had made in its human rights records over the past several months.

The freeing of Arab detainees held by Israel has been a key demand of the Shiite Muslim hostage-holders. The 51 prisoners were freed from Khiam jail in Israeli-controlled south Lebanon, run by Israel's allied militia, the South Lebanon Army.

The prisoners were handed over at the southern Lebanon village of Kfar Tibnit on the edge of Israel's self-proclaimed security zone.

In addition to several hundred prisoners held at Khiam, Israel holds other captives whose release is demanded by the hostage holders, including Shiite Muslim cleric Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, who was kidnapped by Israeli commandos in 1989.

At about the same time the prisoners were released, Israel also returned the remains of nine Shiite Muslim guerrillas killed in clashes with Israeli forces.

Hezbollah sources in Tyre, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the bodies would be taken to a mosque in southern Beirut.

findings on information gathered by two missions to Kuwait, one in March and one in May-June, and extensive follow-up investigation by telephone and by human rights workers in Kuwait.

Yacoub noted that the International Committee of the Red Cross had access to all detainees in Kuwait, most of whom were arrested on suspicion of collaborating with Iraq, which occupied Kuwait from Aug. 2, 1990 until it was evicted by a multinational force in late February.

The majority of the detainees are Palestinians, Iraqis, Jordanians and stateless Arabs.

Captors ready for hostage swap, release photograph

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Pro-Iranian kidnappers released a photograph of American hostage Terry Anderson on Thursday and said they were willing to help reach a comprehensive solution ending the hostage crisis.

"We pay warm tribute to the immense efforts exerted by U.N. Secretary-General Mr. (Javier Perez) de Cuellar and call on him to persist his efforts to reach a comprehensive solution for the issue of the prisoners and the hostages," said the statement from Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War.

"We are fully prepared to extend the required support for him to reach the required comprehensive solution," the statement added.

"At the same time, we consider (Wednesday's) release operation a positive step, we at the same time consider it an incomplete one unless it culminates in freeing all our imprisoned brethren in the world, especially in Europe and the jails of the Zionist enemy (Israel)," the statement said.

The picture of Anderson, released to authenticate the statement, was similar to the one released Aug. 6 by Islamic Jihad, which was the first to show a clean-shaven Anderson in profile in more than six years of captivity.

The picture and statement were delivered to a Western news agency in Beirut.

Anderson, 43, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped March 16, 1985. He is the longest held of the 11 Western hostages.

The statement and photo came hours after the Revolutionary Justice Organization announced that a British hostage, 77-year-old Jack Mann, was "alive and in good shape" more than two years after he disappeared in Beirut.

The Revolutionary Justice statement was delivered one day after Israel released 51 Lebanese prisoners and returned nine bodies of Shiite Muslim guerrillas in a move that could lead to a broad-based swap involving the 11 Western hostages.

In Tehran, meanwhile, the U.N. chief said he believed he was moving toward a general solution to the hostage crisis. But he cautioned against linking "too strongly" the issue of missing Israeli soldiers with the fate of the Westerners missing in Lebanon.

In July, Islamic Jihad issued a photograph of Anderson along with a statement that threatened German interests unless it released two jailed Lebanese terrorists. The photo was the first of Anderson since October 1989.

Last month, former hostage John McCarthy said he was held with Anderson, Church of England envoy Terry Waite and American Thomas Sutherland. McCarthy said all three were healthy and were in good spirits.

Palestinians say they are returning Israeli soldier's body

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) - The body of an Israeli sergeant captured in Lebanon in 1983 has been flown to Vienna in preparation for its repatriation, a Palestinian official said Thursday.

Qaiss al Samarai, a leading member of the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, said talks between Palestinian and Israeli representatives were still underway in the Austrian capital.

"We expect to reach a final agreement regarding the repatriation of the body of Sgt. Samir Assad in return for written guarantees that comrade Ali Abu Hilal would be allowed to return home," Salarai said.

Boy disarmed after taking 22 schoolmates hostage

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) - A boy armed with a sawed-off shotgun took 22 fellow high school students hostage for about four hours and demanded pizza, soda and cigarettes before a student disarmed him, police said. No one was injured.

The gumman, a 17-year-old ninth grader at Rapid City Stevens High School, gave up Wednesday after a hostage took the shotgun away when he rested it on a table while lighting a cigarette, Police Chief Tom Hennies said.

The youth was arrested without incident, Hennies said. His name wasn't released because of his age.

The student walked into a math class wearing a trench coat, pulled out the shotgun and ordered the teacher to leave, Hennies said.

Police say the youth fired about 10 shots during the standoff, but no one was hit.

He released four of the students as he negotiated with authorities over the school's intercom system, police said. At one point, he demanded pizza, which was delivered. Later, police delivered soda and cigarettes to the room.

Chris Ericks, a 17-year-old senior, said he saw an opportunity to disarm the gunman when the cigarettes arrived.

The gunman had the only lighter, and students approached him to have their cigarettes lit, Ericks said. When the gunman rested the shotgun on a table while lighting cigarettes, Ericks said he snuck up from behind, grabbed the weapon and pointed at him.

"I knew we were never going to get out unless somebody in the room took action," Ericks said.

The students were on a first-name basis with the gunman and talked with him about school-related topics during the standoff, Ericks said.

Ericks said the gunman appeared calm, but shot holes in the chalkboard, pencil sharpener and overhead projector.

A special response team was called to the school, as were the parents of the students being held, police said.

Stevens student Jason Craig told radio station KKLS that the boy, a friend of his, hinted he might take such action.

Craig said his friend asked him, "What do you think would happen if I walked into math class tomorrow with a shotgun?"

Commuter plane crashes in Texas

EAGLE LAKE, Texas (AP) - A Continental Express commuter plane crashed Wednesday after a fiery explosion blew off a wing, killing all 14 people aboard, according to witnesses and authorities.

The twin-engine plane crashed during a flight from Laredo to Houston, spewing wreckage over a southeast Texas ranch.

The late morning crash occurred about 60 miles (96 kilometers) west of Houston, killing the occupants of Flight 2574, said Mike Cox, a state Department of Public Safety spokesman.

The airline said the plane, an Embraer-120, carried 11 passengers, two pilots and a flight attendant.

The Brazilian-made E-120, also known as the Brasilia, can carry up to 30 passengers in addition to its three-person crew. Witnesses to Wednesday's crash said they heard explosions and saw a fireball.

A National Transportation Safety Board investigating team headed to the crash site.

Continental Express is a commuter airline, a wholly owned subsidiary of Houston-based Continental Airlines.

The Georgia crash involved an Embraer operated by Atlantic Southeast Airlines, a commuter affiliated with Delta Air Lines.

The NTSB discovered a propeller defect on that plane, prompting the Federal Aviation Administration to order inspections on aircraft with similar propellers.

The FAA has not said if the investigation was completed.

Polio virus might cause new muscle weakness in survivors

BOSTON (AP) - A flare up of the polio virus may be responsible for renewed bouts of muscle weakness in people who survived the polio epidemic 30 or 40 years ago, according to a study.

The research provides circumstantial evidence, but doesn't prove, that the culprit is a new polio infection or reactivation of the old one.

The polio virus destroys motor neurons, the nerve cells essential for control of muscles. When people recover, the remaining neurons must do all the work.

Experts have theorized that the normal aging and loss of the remaining neurons, overexertion of these neurons or renewed attack by the polio virus could be responsible for the syndrome.

In the new study, Dr. Mohammad K. Sharief of the National Hospital for Neurology and Neurosurgery in London measured antibodies in the spinal fluid of people with post-polio syndrome. In 21 of 36 of them, he found evidence of a kind of antibodies typically produced to fight viral infections.

He and his colleagues said this suggests that the syndrome "may be caused by persistent or recurrent infection of neural cells with the polio virus."

Their report was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

"It's interesting from a scientific point of view, but I don't see that this will have any immediate effect on the treatment of the disease, and I certainly do not see any risk of the patients transmitting the virus," commented Dr. Marionos C. Dalakas, an expert on the syndrome at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

Dalakas said the antibodies could result from a chronic, persistent polio infection. But this does not necessarily mean that the infection causes the renewed muscle weakness.

"It is very early even to speculate that this finding can be associated with the patients' new symptoms," Dalakas said.

Jazz great hospitalized

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) - Miles Davis, the legendary jazz trumpeter, band leader and composer, has been hospitalized for an undisclosed illness.

Davis' family asked that no information be released about his ailment, his attorney, Dorothy Weber, said Wednesday.

She would say only that Davis was "doing better" and hopefully would be released soon.

The 65-year-old musician, who has a long history of poor health, entered St. John's Hospital and Health Center earlier this month, the Los Angeles Times has reported.

The Grammy Award-winning artist, once married to actress Cicely Tyson, has been treated for diabetes and a hip-joint replacement.

Davis, who lives in Malibu, won a Grammy in 1986 for his album "Tutu."

Grenade, gunfire kill 13 in townships

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - Assailants raked morning commuters with automatic gunfire Wednesday during a fourth day of violence in black townships that left 13 people dead, officials said.

"Railway stations have become killing fields," said the African National Congress in a statement.

Police said they did not know the motives in the killings, only that all were carried out by black men.

Three railway commuters were killed by gunfire in Tokoza township, police Col. Frans Malherbe said. Two people were killed by a grenade thrown into a commuter minivan, he said.

Violence has raged since Sunday in the black townships, raising fears that a new peace treaty could be crippled before it is signed Saturday.

Previous pacts have collapsed in bloodshed, but this would be the first signed by all of South Africa's three major political players - the governing National Party, and the warring ANC and Inkatha Freedom Party.

The pact has been billed as an important step in ending violence that has killed thousands of blacks and stalled President F.W. de Klerk's efforts to end white majority rule.

The ANC blamed the violence on opponents of the peace accord.

"It is increasingly clear the purpose of this horrific violence is to create a climate in which the signing of the peace accord appears futile," said the ANC statement, released Wednesday.

Heavily armed troops and police in armored vehicles surrounded Tokoza, where the attacks began Sunday. Nearly 100 people have died in Johannesburg townships since then.

Malherbe said six people died Wednesday in Tokoza, 20 kilometers (12 miles) southeast of Johannesburg. At least a dozen were injured. At the scene of the railway station attack, authorities found 50 spent AK-47 cartridges, Malherbe said.

In addition to the commuters, a white woman riding with a police officer was shot to death in Tokoza, he said.

Police said another person died Wednesday when gunmen opened fire near a railway station in the Daveyton township. The overnight unrest report six other deaths in Johannesburg townships but gave few details.

More than 6,000 blacks have died since 1986 in political violence, most of it involving supporters of the ANC and Inkatha. Both groups oppose apartheid but are divided by tribal and ideological differences.

Trains and bus stops have been regular targets.

The Cryptoquip is a substitution cipher in which one letter stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words and words using an apostrophe give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is by trial and error.

It's Time Again to Tip Our Hats to Towns With Spirit

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1991 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We in Midland, Texas, owe you a debt of gratitude for informing your 95 million readers about our Midland Community Spirit Award. Each year we honor a community that best represents the American ideal of people pulling together and helping one another.

Last year, we heard from 108 cities in 35 states. The 1990 Midland Community Spirit Award went to Yakima, Wash., for its ongoing war against drug problems.

Past nominees have included: Brownsville, Texas, whose citizens worked shoulder to shoulder for more than 60 hours to clear rubble from a collapsed building in order to rescue the trapped survivors; the good people of Saco and Glasgow, Mont., who graciously fed, clothed and cared for the waylaid passengers of a train derailed in their vicinity; the members of Valley View Methodist Church in Valley View, Texas, who walked from car to car inviting hundreds of stranded motorists to spend the night in their church when a blizzard halted traffic late one afternoon. The townspeople brought whatever they had in their freezers to feed them all. The residents of Colonial Beach, Va., who raised half a million dollars through bake sales and bingo to replace their old school built in 1912.

Abby, we are again seeking nominations for the 1991 Midland Community Spirit Award, which will be presented in November. So please encourage proud citizens to nominate communities that have shown the cooperative, caring spirit during a time of need or crisis.

Thank you for your continued support in making this project a success.

CARROLL THOMAS,
MAYOR, MIDLAND, TEXAS

DEAR MAYOR THOMAS: This past year has been one of the worst for both natural and man-made catastrophes, so there should be an abundance of nominations.

Readers: The deadline is Oct. 15, 1991. So to obtain an official nomination form for the Community Spirit Award, write to: Midland Community Spirit Award, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, Texas 79702, or phone (915) 685-7206.

I'm sure there are many other communities whose citizens rose to the occasion when tragedy struck. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: In the plant where I work, there are seven girls in my department. One of the girls was recently married. I pitched in for a shower gift, but I couldn't attend the shower.

I never did get an invitation to her wedding, but the other six girls got one. Two days before her wedding she mumbled, "Some of the invitations must have gotten lost in the mail, so if you didn't get one, consider this a verbal invitation."

Abby, I didn't have anything to wear, and it was too late to get ready. Do I owe her a wedding gift?
SLIGHTED IN ASHEVILLE, N.C.

DEAR SLIGHTED: No. Give her your verbal congratulations.

DEAR ABBY: I received your booklet, "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It" on July 30, 1991.

You have saved my life: I cried tears of joy for the first time in my 47 years. Before that, they were tears of pain and sorrow.

Thank you from the bottom of my heart. God bless you.

MARY T. GREEN,
SANTA MARIA, CALIF.

residents of these islands do not get the jobs. These big developers always bring in their own people to work.

Instead of allowing big development along our coastal areas, we can enlarge our marine business by welcoming new non polluted ones, thus rehabilitating beaches and developing others. This will bring more commerce to our islands, thus play a pivotal role in the marine environmental work of the Caribbean, and also train our young people to know their marine heritage, thereby protecting the marine environment and profiting from it.

We can manage our marine resources without ever having to pay the price-that we can with impunity pollute the waters, overdeveloping the coastline, uproot vegetation on the hills, dredge inshore sand, and neglect curative action. Just as there are laws that govern us in these islands; there are laws in nature that once we disregard them; then we pay the consequences.

We have to balance our approach to our marine resources, and allowing the WICO's developers to develop a marine and commercial center in Long Bay does not enhance the environment, but rather degrades the marine environment. Even our governor and our delegate to congress see the wisdom in saying no to Long Bay development.

We have to learn to say no to some big development in order to grow economically. Building a hotel for example does not mean that our economy is growing, but allowing our economy to become deiversified will enable us as a people to meet the economical challenge of tomorrow.

Again good planning for these Virgin Islands will benefit our economy in the long run. The Long Bay development is not good planning. However, if we allow the Long Bay development to go ahead, then we must keep in mind that we pay for the consequences of the short or long term impact the development will have on the marine environment.

Therefore, the future of these islands for growth and development are in the hands of the people of these Virgin Islands.

Yes, Virgin Islanders, the choice is ourselves.

Olasee Davis is an environmentalist. His opinion doesn't necessarily reflect his employer, the University of the Virgin Islands Cooperative Ext. Service.

complish any task that may arise. We must always remember without teamwork and cooperation we cannot move ahead.

May God Bless each and everyone of you. Again, thanks a million.

Sen. Hansen added that she expected the GERS to object: However, she pointed out, the legislature has the responsibility to determine what is best for the people of the Virgin Islands, in this case, Government retirees.

Sen. Hansen said that she expects, regardless of the GERS position-that the bill will pass the Legislature. Hansen said that the bill currently has the support of Senators Adelbert Bryan, John Tutein, Stephanie Scott-Williams, Arturo Watlington Jr., Lorraine L. Berry and Celestino A. White. She said that Senators Almando "Rocky" Liburd and St. Claire N. Willams had also come forward in support of the measure.

totaled $93 million.

But, when Mathes was asked by Roebuck, whether or not he was responsible for the St. John Capital Improvement Projects? Roebuck said that Mathes testified that he was not, however, he said that these projects may be placed under his jurisdiction.

Mathes was then asked by the Finance Committee to prepare an expanded status report on all Capital Improvement projects that are being developed by the Government as well as other independent instrumentalities. For example: The University of the Virgin Islands, Virgin Islands Water and Power Authority, and the Virgin Islands Port Authority.

The proposal also calls for Hess to improve the Castle Coakley road "in accordance with the drawings and specifications made part of the approved agreement."

Title to the by-pass would be conveyed to the Government of the Virgin Islands by Hess following completion and availability for public use of the new road and Castle Coakley improvements.

In exchange, Hess would receive Title to the "Hope Road," which would be closed to public use.

Other testifiers included Yvonne Wells, Principal at the Julius E. Sprauve School, William Lomax, Administrator of St. John Schools, and Madeline Sewer, Ass't Principal at the Julius E. Sprauve School.

Committee member present were Senators Liburd, Scott-Williams, and White. Sen. Malcolm Callender, although not a committee member, was also present.

should share the blame. Rather than being committed to truth and enlightenment, they are committed to the persuasion of something whether it is true or not.

Unsolved problems, which politicians love because they create more power for them, are solved by creating a larger and larger bureaucracy.

Our government today, rather than protecting the family seeks to be its replacement.

A truly free society is one in which government is restrained to only protecting the rights and property of individuals universally. Individual rights have faded to government enforcement of group rights.

Every special group wants empowerment and preferential policies. An individual's right to keep his job, even if he is an efficient hard worker, is lost to a federally mandated program of formulas and quotas.

A Los Angeles broadcast station which advocated on the air "burn baby burn" during the Watts riots is not censured for incitement to riots because the remarks were "constitutionally protected" political speech even though a whole community went up in flames and many died.

In contrast, a Christian radio station recently lost its broadcast license because it had "failed to report adequately its activity in training and hiring workers from a government designated list.

In New York City, where rampant crime and corruption are no strangers, the government spends nearly a million dollars prosecuting and convicting 71 year old hotelier Leona Helmsley. She must spend the rest of her life in jail, because of mistakes on her income tax return.

Her supporters disagree. They say the government prosecuted Helmsley because she was a successful, bitchy, anti-establishment Jewess who apparently rubbed some politico or Mafia don the wrong way.

This contrasts with DC Congresswoman Eleanor Holmes Norton, who failed to file her Federal Income Tax from 1982 to 1989 and was subsequently elected to national office.

Her political ads suggested that she was a champion..."of women, minorities, gay men and lesbians, poor people, young people and older citizens."

White, heterosexual, middle-aged males were left out. They only have to pick up the tab for her socialist programs.

In Sarasota, a half a dozen detectives, apparently not on the trail of drug dealers or murderers but lurking in the dark corners of an adult movie theater, captured PEE WEE HERMAN for allegedly relieving himself.

In Milwaukee, a bleeding and confused Laotian child fleeing torture, is escorted by police back to the apartment and into the arms of his "homosexual lover" for an evening that culminates in human vivisection.

WHEN MORAL DECAY SETS IN, A SOCIETY WILL NOT ENDURE FOR LONG...

Columnist Cal Thomas recently quoted the mother of a young inter-city murder victim, "We erred when we began to look at law enforcement as the only means to solve the problem (of violence) and look at the drug crisis as our only problem."

Thomas concludes, "No politician, no increase in police force, no increase in spending is going to stop any of this. Only a national decision that we've had enough and are ready to pay the price by repairing our families and our culture are going to do it.

The worst news is that while I hear many cries and see many tears I don't see that we are ready to pay that price. We aren't even willing to make a down payment."

"The government - and I've been arguing this point for years and years - should buy easements to all of the beaches," he said. "These are the white, sandy beaches that are being closed off and that is not right."

He said many property owners don't want people on beaches adjacent to their property because beach people have been known to build fires and leave trash.

"If they (the department) would only patrol beaches on the weekends and the holidays, they wouldn't have this problem," he said. "I didn't allow beach fires and I would always make sure people, when they left the beach, took their trash with them."

Officer Howard Forbes with the Department of Parks and Recreation said there are only five officers who are responsible for St. Croix, making effective beach watching next to impossible.

"We deal mainly with marine affairs anyway," he said, "and besides, one of the boats is not working very well and we have equipment problems."

Forbes said he was not aware of beach closure problems at either Judith's Fancy or Spratt Hall.

to utilities in the states."

Bruno-Vega said Hess Oil Virgin Islands Corp. (HOVIC) technical advisors are considering whether the South Shore oil refinery could lend "backup power" to WAPA when it needs it. HOVIC is expected to expand its power generation capability for its planned $550 million fluid catalytic cracking unit.

R.W. Beck and Associates of Denver, WAPA's consulting engineers who prepared the load loss probability index, estimated the local utility will have 49.9 days of outages in 1992; 7.1 days in 1993; 4.8 days in 1994; 5.5 days in 1995; and 6.4 days in 1996.

"This new generation plant will increase significantly the reliability of power services in St. Croix and provide for future load growth until the end of the century according to the latest projections," Bruno-Vega said.

Gay Haines, the St. Croix Chamber of Commerce executive director, said a survey found WAPA's performance was one of the major concerns of members had, "right up there with crime and litter."

"You can't run a business if you don't have a reliable source of power," Haines said in an interview before the luncheon meeting.

Haines added that chamber members were "vitally concerned" with the reliability of power here, but added that they were "very encouraged" by Bruno-Vega's performance since hiring in 1989. He is the man members credit for restoring power in a timely manner after the Hugo, she said.

"Everyone is solidly behind this man [Bruno-Vega] and I think it's important," she said.

About two weeks ago, WAPA's governing board declared an "emergency power condition" on St. Croix and authorized Bruno-Vega to make a contract with turbine manufacturer General Electric on an "emergency basis," he said.

WAPA currently has four generators capable of producing 66 megawatts, but the two 22-megawatt gas turbines will increase capacity 110 megawatts, a 67 percent increase. Daily consumer demand for electricity currently "hovers" at about 40.4 megawatts.

With the additional 44 megawatts of power in place by 1993, WAPA will be able to absorb the loss of its two largest generators without causing an outage on island, he said.

According to WAPA, consumer demand for electricity was about 42.4 megawatts before Hurricane Hugo in September 1989.

"As of today, we have not reached 42.4," he said.

St. Croix will total about the same amount of outages this year as it will next year (50), he added.

Bruno-Vega said "emergency conditions" have existed on St. Croix since 1985 when WAPA entered into a "service agreement" with Caribbean Energy Corp. (CEC) to buy power and steam from three proposed eight-megawatt diesel units at the Richmond plant.

After the Coastal Zone Management commission declined CEC's proposal, a U.S. District Court order prevented WAPA from canceling its contract, Bruno-Vega said.

"The valid period for the CEC contract expired on Jan. 23, 1991 and we were successful in declaring the contract moot on the grounds that CEC could not perform its responsibility of building the project," he said.

"We are now litigating this contract in arbitration for charges of claims and counterclaims for damages—CEC is claiming $10 million and we are counterclaiming $12 million," he added.

he agreed the agents should be paid better, he had to keep his budget within the limits set by Farrelly.

Sen. Stephanie Scott-Williams jumped into the fray to ask why the senators were meeting if all they could do was rubber-stamp the governor's proposal.

"I'm not talking about a Christmas gift, but are you getting the funding to do the job?" asked Scott-Williams.

However, Sen. Elmo Roebuck, who chaired the meeting, reminded her that in order to increase budgets they would have to raise taxes more than the $5.2 million already suggested by the govefnor.

"And we've just been told the budget is short some $14 million," said Roebuck, referring to the announcement Tuesday by Budget Director Jose George that revenues will be $14.7 million less than anticipated when the budget was prepared.

Farrelly has asked the Senate to approve a budget of $6.8 million to run his office, up 20 percent over last year.

Rents were up 343 percent and travel up 98 percent.

John deJongh, the governor's $65,000-a-year assistant, justified the increase by noting that three new offices had been set up.

The committee also discussed the $8.9 million Finance Department budget, up 10 percent over last year and the $6.7 million Internal Revenue Bureau budget, up 29 percent.

Additionally, they discussed the $13.5 million Territorial Court budget, which is up 10 percent and the $7.5 million Personnel Division budget, up 126 percent because of a 100 percent increase in health insurance expenses. The $1.8 million public television station budget, which is up 12 percent, also was discussed.

The Finance Committee will meet today to discuss the Health, Human Services and Police Department and Law Enforcement Planning Commission budgets.

Budget hearings are expected to conclude by the end of next week.

Lawyer: Lover's suit will hurt Martina

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - A lawyer warned counsel for Martina Navratilova that she and former lover Judy Nelson would suffer ``devastating'' emotional stress if their palimony lawsuit was not settled out of court, according to testimony Thursday.

"If litigation is filed, the press here and abroad will have a field day," contended Jerry Loftin, an attorney for Nelson, in a letter sent four months ago to Mike McCurley, Navratilova's Dallas lawyer.

"The emotional stress and strain on an ordinary individual would be devastating and seemingly catastrophic to an athlete attempting to perform," Loftin wrote last spring. "... Both sides will be the loser."

McCurley produced the letter and read excerpts into the record during cross-examination of a witness in a bizarre preliminary hearing in which Navratilova is attempting to have Loftin removed as Nelson's attorney.

Testimony in the pretrial issue began Monday, but has been overshadowed all week by on-again, off-again negotiations of a settlement. Those talks apparently broke off Thursday.

Navratilova's lawyers maintained Loftin was negligent when representing her in previous legal matters, including a controversial document that lies at the heart of the current dispute.

They also insist that Loftin's role in a previous agreement between Navratilova and another former companion, Nancy Lieberman-Cline, gave Loftin confidential knowledge of the player's affairs that should preclude his representing Nelson.

Loftin denies that allegation.

Nelson, 45, contends the 34-year-old Navratilova breached the so-called "non-marital cohabitation agreement" signed in 1986, a pact which sources said could cost Navratilova as much as $4.5 million.

The couple's relationship ended earlier this year.

In his letter of last May 13, Loftin warned McCurley that a trial of a lawsuit would have not only personal but financial consequences.

"Aside from the emotional devastations that this lawsuit would have on both parties," he said, "is the effect that this litigation would have on the future earnings and income of both parties, including general revenues which would unquestionably be jeopardized for both."

Tyson: the fight comes first

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Mike Tyson wants to put aside the controversy about his rape indictment and focus on boxing - hoping to regain the heavyweight title before facing a criminal trial he predicts will vindicate him.

Tyson was booked and fingerprinted Wednesday after a judge entered an innocent plea to charges Tyson raped an 18-year-old Miss Black America beauty pageant contestant in an Indianapolis hotel.

After posting bond, Tyson returned to Las Vegas to resume training for his Nov. 8 title bout against Evander Holyfield. Tyson's trial is scheduled to start Jan. 27.

Distracted by the rush of events, the former champion said he wants now to concentrate on regaining the title.

"Right now, I just want to go back and train," Tyson said Wednesday after answering the criminal charges. "The fight comes first. After the fight, then we can take care of the trial and then I'll be proven innocent.

"I'm just looking forward to fighting, and I'm confident I'll be in the form of a champion on November 8th," said Tyson, soft-spoken and subdued.

Fans yelled their support to Tyson as he walked through the Las Vegas airport - a far cry from protesters in Indianapolis, who asked the fight be postponed.

"I just want to fight," he said upon his return. "The fight comes first, then I'll deal with the rest," he said. "The people who are my fans support me."

Tyson, 25, faces up to 63 years in prison if he is convicted of rape, two counts of criminal deviate conduct and one count of confinement. His alleged victim claims he forced her to have sex on July 19 after she refused his advances: Tyson claims the relationship was consensual.

The woman "knows what happened in that room. I know what happened, and I know I'm innocent," said Tyson, calling his accuser by name during a news conference following his court appearance.

"I didn't hurt no one," Tyson said. "I'm extremely worried about the situation, but I know I'm innocent."

David Hennessy, an Indianapolis attorney for the woman, said "My response is that the victim and Mr. Tyson both testified before the grand jury and Mr. Tyson was indicted. Those are the facts, and they speak for themselves."

Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia J. Gifford read Tyson the charges against him during a five-minute court proceeding.

V.I.'s Julian Jackson looks to unify middleweight title

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Julian Jackson is looking to unify the middleweight championship. A couple of years ago he was looking at the possible end of his career.

"I was concerned about my sight, not about fighting," said Jackson, who defends his World Boxing Council middleweight title against Dennis Milton of New York on Saturday.

Jackson, of St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands, had noticed some fuzziness in his right eye before knocking out Terry Norris in the second round of his WBA junior middleweight title defense on July 30, 1989.

On Nov. 11 of that year, he underwent surgery for a detached retina in the right eye and a week later he underwent a medical procedure to tighten the retina of the left eye.

"If a doctor had said not to fight, I would have hung up my gloves," said Jackson, who is married and has six children ranging in age from 9 years to 10 months.

Doctors, however, told him he has no more chance of getting another detached retina than does a fighter who has never had one.

Jackson's defense is part of a championship doubleheader outdoors at the Mirage. In the other 12-round bout, Julio Cesar Chavez will defend the WBC super lightweight title against Lonnie Smith of Las Vegas. The champion from Mexico has won all 75 of his pro fights, 65 by knockout.

It will be the first defense of the 160-pound title Jackson won on a fourth-round knockout of Herol Graham last Nov. 24 in his third fight since the retinal surgery.

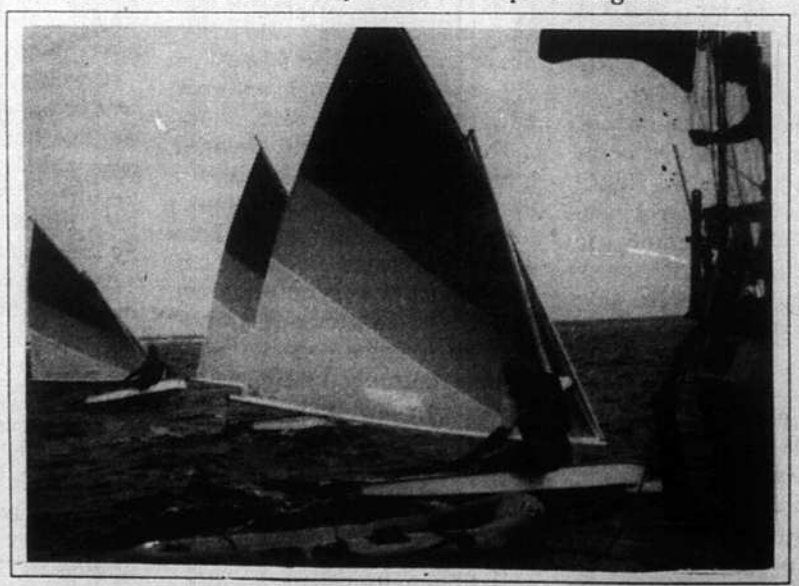

It almost didn't happen.

On June 27 in Las Vegas, he had to give present evidence to a WBC panel as to why he should not have the title taken from him for medical reason.

Jim Chamberlain of Las Vegas, Jackson's attorney, said he was informed by letter that the panel had voted to continue to give title sanction to the Jackson-Milton fight if Jackson met certain conditions.

One was that he have two examinations by ophthalmologists. Another was he sign a waiver not to hold the WBC responsible in case of injury.

Chamberlain said all the conditions were met and that Jackson was examined within the last month again by two opthamologists.

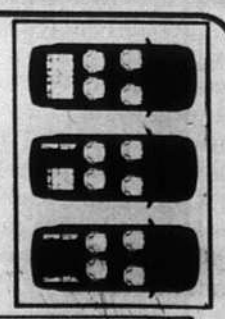

Hugo Memorial Race

Sunfish, Optimists, 420s and Rhodes 19s should get in at least two races in Teague Bay before the multihulls, Hobie cats and monohulls with and without spinnakers return from the 32-mile Hugo Memorial Race.

Dinghy racing begins at 11 a.m. and the Hugo race at 9 a.m. at the Coakley marker and take in Buck Island, the 5-mile buoy and Christiansted No. 1 buoy before ending at the St. Croix Yacht Club. Celebrations after the race include cocktails, prize-giving and grilled steaks but members and crew should book early. The Skippers' Meeting is at 5:30 today. Fridays are always fun nights at the SCYC with happy hour drinks for members and Sunfish racing around the moorings. The multihulls should be passing the Deep End Bar and Duggan's around noon with the monohulls in hot pursuit.
