Plug gets pulled on St. Croix again

By GREG ANDUZE

A cat was the cause of another island-wide power outage early Saturday morning after the feline electrocuted itself in some sensitive equipment, according to V.I. Water and Power Authority officials.

"I'm not embarrassed to tell you this and I have to tell the truth, a cat was electrocuted and during the flashover several 'pot-heads' (melted)," said WAPA Executive Director Alberto Bruno-Vega.

"Pot-heads" are terminal connectors that interconnects steam unit No. 17 to the bus structure that then distributes power to consumers.

"The cat stood on the right spot," Bruno-Vega said, adding that he did not know how the cat got into the plant in the first place. "They climb and sneak under the gates and climb into the structure. They're very curious."

The overload, which occurred at roughly 1:25 a.m., forced WAPA to rotate feeder power when Unit 17 terminations were damaged and could not be used to generate electricity, according to Bruno-Vega.

The loss of Unit 17 and off-line status of Unit 11 left the only two power generators with the impossible task of producing power for the entire island.

Units 12 and 16 are capable of producing some 16 megawatts, only half of the 32 megawatts St. Croix uses on weekends, Bruno-Vega said.

WAPA seeking help from Hess

The Virgin Islands Water and Power Authority, in an effort to end an "electrical nightmare," is seeking an agreement to purchase power from Hess Oil, an authority official said Saturday.

WAPA Executive Director Alberto Bruno-Vega said local officials hope to buy power from Hess for at least a year until two gas turbines can be constructed on the South Shore.

"We are hoping, as an interim measure, Hess can supply us with

Officials ready strategy for food-price war

By GREG ANDUZE

Two high-level government officials are scheduled to meet Monday to discuss possible Senate intervention in high food prices in the territory, according to Sen. Holland Redfield.

Redfield will meet with Internal Revenue Bureau Director Edward Thomas around noon Monday to map out what information the 19th Legislature would need to review high food prices in future Senate committee hearings.

"It will be a preliminary meeting to go over the ground rules of what kind of information the committee can expect from the IRB and how much information under our existing laws we can get without the issuing of subpoenas," Redfield said.

The private meeting will focus on obtaining information in three areas for Senate review, the Republican senator said. Those areas will include:

— how much excise tax the food industry generates in the territory,

— how much gross receipt taxes the industry generates,

— information on food industry income taxes and their profits.

"We're doing it for two reasons," Redfield said. "One, we want to have some indication of the profitability of the supermarkets. We also want to look very closely into the area of taxation and areas of which possibly we can lend relief."

Redfield said he expects the meeting to relay to Thomas what information the Senate committee will require as well as send a message out to the food industry that they are accountable to their consumers.

"The optimum result is that the director comes in prepared to a committee meeting which I am going to be scheduling sometime in the next three weeks to a month," Redfield said. "The type of information I'm asking for is going to take some extensive research by the IRB.

"It also should certainly put on notice to the food industry that the Committee of Consumer Affairs is serious about this issue and intends to systematically dissect the problem and come up with meaningful solutions," Redfield added.

"Just as important is consumer awareness," Redfield said. "We're fighting that battle on a different front that is basically arming the public with information, which will be available on a bi-weekly basis."

Redfield said that the consumer also holds a hand in controlling high prices.

"Also I am extremely cognizant of the fact that the success of bringing down food prices is in the hands of the consumer," Redfield said. "This is a battle that is long overdue and one in which the consumer must be prepared to play hardball with the supermarkets."

A comprehensive review of food prices in the territory for the general public is also a future goal of the meeting and subsequent committee hearing.

Redfield also said that a line of communication and definition of duties between the Departments of Labor and Licensing and Consumer Affairs has already been clearly defined in previous meetings with the two respective commissioners and should also assist in food price

A word about two letters to George

Have you ever thought about setting down and writing a letter to some one, not some one you know? Just pick a name and then begin to write, letting your imagination go and see what comes, perhaps pretending he or she is an old friend. I know some people hate writing letters, even though they like to get an occasional one.

A letter does something for a person, both when they write it and when they get one. We feel like we belong and some one cares and wants to know how we are.

I found it to be quite interesting the other day when I thought I wanted to write a letter, but I didn't know to whom I wanted to write. The following is what I came up with.

"Two Letters To George" One letter didn't seem to be quite enough to finish what I had started, so I ended with two. I went back later to write the second one.

To my dear friend George: (First letter)

I thought I would write you a letter, though I would rather talk to you face to face as we have so often done in the past. Since time, space, distance, and death all make this an impossibility I will settle for second best.

I'd thought of a thousand things I wanted to talk about before I sat down here. I guess I like remembering the most and talking about he past. It's a lot easier than planning for the future. Big plans scare me any more. I guess I move too slow to keep up with them. It seems I know more about the past than I do the future.

Remember the summer we put your dad's tent in my back yard, the small pup tent that he had packed with him all over France when he was in the first war? They don't do things now like they did then. Now when you're kicked out of the army all they give you is a few bucks and the uniform you walk away with. Remember he told us how he had almost as big a pack going home as he had carried all over Europe?

How many summers was it that we pitched that pup tent? No matter what we did through the day or where we went, we always crawled in that tent to sleep at night. I am not sure who was always the last one in, but I know I liked those times. Even if the memories are more enjoyable than the reality of the whole thing, I am glad it happened.

No, my friend, I don't have a son to share those wonderful times with. I can't even tell him how we used to raid the icebox, take the ice out there and then cut it with an ice pick and suck on it until our bedding was as wet as we were crazy. Those mosquitoes, I swear they flew in squadrons.It might have helped if we had a net over the front. Remember how your dad always used to laugh and tell us, "Boys,those darn things didn't come with a mosquito net. You will just have to swat the pesky things like we did." Remember how he laughed when he told us about that small hole near the entrance. Some times he laughed so hard he almost cried. "My buddy Frank got tired swatting them. He sure did." Your dad always started the story the same way, even started laughing before he began the story the same way, even stated laughing before he began the story. "When that didn't work too well he up and shot them mosquitoes plumb dead with that lugger he had taken off a dead German. The next morning when we woke up and crawled out of the tent, there lay that very Krout that Frank took the pistol from. Frank swore that German had two holes in him when we found him. The one that killed him and the one Frank put there when he shot the pesky mosquito sitting on the roof to the tent. Frank's bullet got that Krout right between the eyes. Would you believe it boys Frank picked two mosquito wings off the dead man's forehead and held them up for me to see. You know Frank swears that Krout was coming to get his lugger back."

These later years I have wondered if maybe that story didn't change a little every time we heard it. I am not sure now if it was he that got carried away with his telling or if it was we who got carried away with out listening. But you know, to be perfectly honest I prefer to think maybe it was a little of both. How about you? What do you think?

I used to like the nights when it rained. The water pounded on the canvas so hard. I was glad we were under that big tree so we didn't get the full burnt of it. I think I liked the little drizzle rain best. That was a good idea that you had about digging a drainage ditch around the outside. The only thing, it came one rain too late. Boy was our bedding soaked.

But that was good training for later. Did I ever tell you that after I went out West, when I was about twenty three or so, I started a boy's club in a little town out there? The boys were just fooling around, not getting into any real trouble. Only boy trouble, our, kind, remember? So I got about fifteen or so of them together once a week for boy fun and play. The high point was once a month, when we went to sleep out in the mountains, no tents, no pillows, cold pork and beans for breakfast and hot coffee. It wasn't so bad in the summer, but in the winter when it drizzled a cold rain sprinkled with light snow, that was a different story. Boy, how those guys did bitch. But you should have heard them brag the next Monday at school, telling how they roughed it.

It makes me shiver now just to think of it. But those are the treasures we store away for days like these.

But, you know my departed friend, those days never compared with the times we spent on the river. That old tar tub we had took us to all the islands we wanted to explore. I wonder whatever happened to our shack. You know it was a lot of hard work rowing that boat loaded with all that old lumber just to build a shack, there on the island. I have often thought how glad I was that you were bigger than me and that you could pull so hard on those poles we used for ores.

Things haven't changed much around here these past few years. I am just moving a little slower and not so far as I use to. I try not to let the old rocking chair get me too much. Each day I try to walk through my garden. Every once in a while I reach down and pick up a handful of sand. With each handful I watch shift through my fingers, I think of the time we played in the sand pile in my back yard. Those pieces of wood, we made into cars and tractors, did for us and our imaginations all that money could not buy.

If we had any money for such toys, we more than likely would have brought nails to pound on our shack.

Well, old friend, I just took a few minutes out from this to have dinner. Mary called. She has been a good cook all of these years, but lately its boiled fish and a lot of that low cholesterol stuff. No real, food bacon and eggs, a good steak or what we always liked. She's always fretting about my blood pressure and my heart. I guess those are the things that come with the blessings of antiquity, at least I keep telling myself that. I put in my order for dinner tomorrow evening. Three large potatoes sliced and fried, three fried eggs on top of the potatoes. On top of that I told her to put

Former agent promises to tell all

Brann says book is in the works

By Avis Staff Writer

Controversial former Narcotics Strike Force Agent Fitzroy Calvin Brann told The AVIS Saturday he will write a book soon that will give names and details on the various aspects of his life as a drug agent in the Virgin Islands.

Brann also said he and former NSF Agent Cedric Armstrong were "approached" by an unnamed "big time drug dealer" and told to "do away" with the Earl Roebuck, Elroy Brow cocaine case or Armstrong would himself become a defendant, and in the case of Brann, he would become history.

"I was approached...that I do away with the case....to do away with the case so it won't be filed...Or, else..." Brann said. Brann also said that Armstrong was told to influence him to do away with the case or become a defendant himself in yet another case. "He was told to influence me to do it; at that time, he'd already retired," Brann said.

Brann said that the drug dealer wanted them to do away with two cases, "The Government versus Carlos Denton and the Roebuck case."

Brann refused to name the "big -time drug dealer" who allegedly approached him and Armstrong prior to the trial and said that he was saving it for his book. "I have plans to write a book, and at this time, I don't want to tip my hand. But, I promise the people of the Virgin Islands that I intend to write a book. I've been contacted by two writers who are interested in assisting me. My father is also a journalist," Brann said.

Brann was asked who he informed in law enforcement, of the alleged approach.

Brann said that he notified an attorney in the U. S. Attorney's Office but said that he would not name any names, since he still had several cases against him in that office, and would save that for his book.

Brann also said that the fact that he and Armstrong were approached before the Roebuck/Brow trial was the reason behind Armstrong's testimony on Wednesday that he (Brann) had told him of placing 500 grams of cocaine and 73 grams of marijuana in the possession of Roebuck and Brow prior to their arrest at Cyril E. King Airport in April of 1989.

Brann maintained Saturday that Armstrong was afraid of becoming a defendant at trial on another matter, and that was the reason for his testimony. He also said that there was a connection between Armstrong and one of the defendants. "There is a connection between Armstrong and the Roebucks. Two Rotweilers were his and now they're in the Roebuck's yard. He said he sold them to them," Brann said.

Brann also made this statement regarding Armstrong: "He's afraid to lose his assets he

Senator denying racism charges

Sen. Stephanie Scott-Williams said Saturday that charges by Sen. Lorraine Berry that her views and polices are hypocritical and racist are nonsense and are only made by Berry as a publicity stunt and to stir up trouble.

"This nonsense is appalling. I ran for office to work for the people of the Virgin Islands while Senator Berry spends the bulk of her time conjuring up non-issues to keep her name in the news.

"My office is busting our butts to address issues of concern to all Virgin Islanders. Her inferences of me as "racist" are ludicrous—the voters, white, black, and otherwise are postivie proof that the people of the St. Thomas/St. John District do not believe these allegations to be true of Stephanie Scott-Williams.

ST. CROIX'S MAUREEN O'HARA (right) stars with John Candy and Ally Sheedy, in the romantic comedy "Only the Lonely", premiering July 24 at La Reine Theater.

O'Hara won't be lonely

(First in a two-part series)

Long-time St. Croix resident and cinema legend Maureen O'Hara returns to the silver screen after more than two decades in Twentieth Century Fox's romantic comedy "Only the Lonely" from the creators of "Home Alone".

The Virgin Islands' premiere of "Only the Lonely" is scheduled for July 24 at La Reine Theater with a screening for the benefit of St. Croix's United Way.

O'Hara's performance in "Only the Lonely" has already attracted critical acclaim and there is much early talk of an Oscar nomination, something that eluded her in her more than thirty-year career.

"It really doesn't have to be an Oscar, just a nomination will do," she said recently.

During her prime in the war years of the '40s, '50s and '60s, O'Hara was the premiere Irish leading lady in Hollywood. She played opposite some of the greatest leading men in screen history: her close friend John Wayne (who visited her in St. Croix just months before he died), as well as Tyrone Power, Charles Laughton, John Garfield, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Henry Fonda, John Payne, and Jimmy Stewart. O'Hara is reunited in "Only the Lonely" with one of her favorite co-stars, two-time Oscar-winner Anthony Quinn, for their first screen appearance in 35 years.

Rotund funnyman John Candy, "Bratpacker" Ally Sheedy, Jim Belushi and Milo O'Shea join Quinn and O'Hara in the Hughes Entertainment production. Chris Columbus wrote and directed the film which was produced by John Hughes.

$16,000 in fines

Avis Staff

Commissioner Clement "Cain" Magras of Licensing and Consumer Affairs announced this week seven businesses were fined a total of $16,000 for violating consumer protection laws in June.

Radio Shack was fined $12,000 for selling goods without having the prices displayed. In a settlement agreement, Radio Shack agreed to post their prices in the future.

Nisky Convience Store on St. Thomas was fined $1,000 for selling food beyond the expiration date.

Shoprite of St. Thomas was also fined $1,000 for selling food beyond the expiration date.

Central Meat Markets of St. Thomas was fined $600 for selling food beyond the expiration date.

International Motors of St. Thomas was fined $300 for not honoring an expressed warranty.

And G.C. Travel was fined $150 for offering them as offered. Magras said local businesses can be fined as much as $300 for each item found to be double priced, mislabeled or which otherwise violates pricing laws. Among other things, consumer protection laws cover weighting and measurement of products, proper pricing and enforcement of dates.

Panama seizes BCCI; bank tied to drugs

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) - Authorities here seized control of a huge private bank's Panamanian branch implicated in world-wide money laundering for deposed dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega.

In a brief news release Friday night, the Panamanian Banking Commission said it "intervened" in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A. branch "because of the need to safeguard depositors' interests and those of its customers in general."

The news release noted threatened "liquidity and solvency" in light of action taken by eight other countries against the bank.

Banking authorities in Great Britain, Luxembourg, the Cayman Islands, the United States, Switzerland, Spain, Canada and France acted in concert Friday to curtail or close down BCCI's activities.

The Bank of England cited evidence of widespread fraud going back years and said it was referring the case to a British prosecuting agency, the Serious Fraud Office.

Once one of the world's largest, the Luxembourg-registered bank now based in Abu Dhabi operates in 69 countries and has an estimated dirs 20 billion in assets. It is controlled by the ruler of Abu Dhabi and President of the United Arab Emirates, Sheik Zayed Al Nahayan.

Two divisions of BCCI pleaded guilty in Tampa, Florida, last year to laundering dirs 14 million as part of a dirs 32 million global money-laundering case. Five former BCCI bankers and a Colombian businessman were also convicted of conspiracy and drug money laundering.

A U.S. investigation showed BCCI laundered money for Noriega and one of its convicted officers, Amjad Awan, once served as Noriega's personal banker. But BCCI itself was never charged with laundering Noriega's money.

Noriega was deposed by a U.S. military invasion in December 1989 then taken to Miami, where he is awaiting trial on drug trafficking and money-laundering charges.

BCCI was founded in the early 1970s by Pakistani banker Agha Hasan Abdedi and grew over the years.

The bank had its headquarters in London until last year, when it was taken over by Sheik Zayed, who is said to hold a 77-percent interest.

Since 1989, Sheik Zayed injected at least dirs 1 billion into the bank.

ANC to boycott negotiations

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) - The African National Congress upheld its boycott of constitutional talks with the government Saturday but urged ANC leaders to work at resolving disputes holding up the negotiations.

The group served notice that despite its choice of moderate leaders, its basic demands had not changed. They include an end to political violence and the release of all political prisoners.

On the final day of the national conference, some 2,000 delegates rounded out the ANC's new leadership by voting for a policy-making National Executive Committee. More than 140 people were vying for 50 seats. The 40 remaining seats on the committee were automatically filled by ANC regional leaders, heads of internal groups such as the ANC Women's League, and the top five leaders in the ANC.

Results weren't expected until early Sunday.

Candidates included Winnie Mandela, the wife of ANC President Nelson Mandela. Mrs. Mandela was convicted in May of four counts of kidnap and four counts of being an accessory to assault, but is pursuing an appeal.

She has a strong following among ANC youth but her chances for election diminished Thursday when delegates scrapped the idea of reserving 15 committee seats for women.

Another candidate was Communist Party leader Joe Slovo, who was seeking to retain his seat. The ANC's close ties with the Communist Party have disturbed government and business leaders.

Mandela has repeatedly stressed the groups are independent despite their alliance.

The committee's makeup should give an indication of the power of moderates vs militants..

U.N. in new search for Iraqi nuclear equipment

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) - A U.N. nuclear inspection team arrived in Iraq Saturday to test Saddam Hussein's promise of full cooperation, while a second team witnessed the destruction of Iraq's last known long-range missiles.

The leader of the nuclear team, Dimitri Perricos, said his 37-member crew would spend a week investigating reports that Iraq is hiding equipment that could be used to manufacture nuclear weapons.

Asked whether the inspectors would immediately seek out the convoy of equipment that touched off a shooting incident last week between Iraqi soldiers and a previous U.N. team, Perricos said; "We will address that issue."

Iraqi soldiers fired into the air when the U.N. team approached a convoy of trucks carring what was thought to be nuclear-related equipment. No one was injured in the incident.

Friday, Saddam, in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar promised to cooperate with the U.N. inspectors.

In Washington, the White House re-emphasized that the United States he has authority to launch a military strike if Iraq continues to block the inspection of its suspected nuclear weapons facilities.

Under the U.N. cease-fire resolution ending the Gulf War, Saddam promised to cooperate with the U.N. in identifying and destroying all nuclear, chemical or biological weapons material and certain long-range ballistic missiles.

Most of the ballistic missile equipment identified by Iraq was destroyed during the past week by a 21-member U.N. team led by U.S. Army Col. Douglas Englund.

In seven days, the team supervised the demolition of 61 missiles, 28 warheads, 10 mobile launchers, two fixed launchers, nine liquid-fuel transporters and eight missile transport vehicles, Englund said. The last were destroyed Saturday.

Toward the end of the month, another U.N. team headed by Englund will travel to western Iraq to inspect 34 fixed launch sites and eight supporting factories, he said.

But experts are more concerned about allegations that Saddam is attempting to preserve the remnants of a once-thriving program to build a nuclear bomb.

Threatened with a possible U.S. military strike as well as the continuation of crippling trade sanctions, Saddam has promised that a complete list of Iraq's nuclear materials would be made available by Monday morning. He said inspectors would be granted instant access to all sites.

Perricos, a Greek official with the International Atomic Energy Agency, expressed some skepticism.

"It's one more assurance," he said in an interview at his Baghdad hotel.

In addition to searching for the missing equipment, he said his team would assess how to safely remove enriched bomb-grade uranium that had been inspected by another U.N. team in May.

Perricos said the mission would begin Sunday morning at the Tuwaitha research site 32 kilometers (19 miles) southwest of Baghdad.

Saddam makes more promises to cooperate

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Saddam Hussein has pledged cooperation with a new U.N. nuclear inspection team, but skeptical Security Council ambassadors are considering ways to guarantee Iraqi compliance.

Spurred by the threat of U.S. military action, the Iraqi president said the U.N. team due in Baghdad on Saturday would receive a complete accounting of all his nuclear sites and immediate access to them.

Saddam on Friday promised "prompt and unimpeded access will be ensured to the locations and items designated for inspection ... in addition to guaranteeing the security and safety of members of the inspection team.

"It has been arranged that the mission should be provided with a list of the items about which it sought information," the Iraqi statement added.

Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari said the list would be given to the inspectors in Baghdad on Sunday evening or Monday.

The U.S. government said Friday that if Iraq violates the Gulf War cease-fire agreement by hiding its nuclear sites, U.S. military force could be used to enforce compliance.

Saddam's declaration came in a reply sent to a request for full cooperation made Thursday by Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Three times last week, Iraqi soldiers denied U.N. nuclear inspectors access to trucks loaded with equipment believed to be a crude device for enriching uranium to weapons-grade quality.

On the last inspection attempt on June 28, near the town of Fallujah, Iraqi troops fired over the heads of the U.N. inspectors to run them off.

The Security Council met privately Friday to hear a report on the incidents and on the talks that three top U.N. officials had with senior Iraqi officials who pledged their government's full cooperation.

"We've heard that many times before," said the acting U.S. ambassador to the United States, Alexander Watson. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating."

The acting British ambassador, Thomas Richardson, said Saddam's statement left several major problems unresolved.

"What has happened to this missing material? ... The production of a list by the Iraqi authorities of items which might have been destroyed and which might or might not have been the same material that the inspection team saw on the 28th was simply not adequate."

KEEPING OUR FRIENDS

The phrase "No man is an island unto himself" has never held greater significance, nor been more applicable to these islands than at the present time.

In this day and time contacts, interrelationships, good will and good, sound friendships may very well hold the key to what we hope to accomplish for these islands in the future. Nor can such a thought be brushed aside and dismissed as inconsequential, and of little or no significance.

Whether we know it or not, like it or not, what we accomplish in these islands is inextricably tied to what takes place on the mainland, the friendships we make, and the relationships we maintain.

The importance of good, sound relationships with the right places, could very well be the key to where we go from here, and what we accomplish. Put another way these islands should have friends in and out of Congress, in industry, in the academic field, and generally wherever we can find, cultivate, and keep such friends.

We do not imagine that anyone in these parts will disagree with this position. However, there will be those who, for no reason or another will want to play down the idea, contending that in the final analysis, a 29-cent stamp could do just as well. It is a form of defense which should be recognized for what it is, and nothing more.

It should not be necessary to go into details to convince even the greatest skeptic. Much of what we do, and how, much of the programs available to us, comes through the action of Congress, and other sources, and whether these are made available to us, and to what extent will certainly depend upon whether we get in on the ground floor, or have to wait until the pie has already been cut up, and hope that somehow, someone will be willing to slip something our way.

Certainly, this is one thought we ought to keep in mind as we look to the future.

Letters to the editor

Housing a priority in V.I

Dear editor:

I read with interest your editorial of June 18, in which you lament the lack of affordable, moderate income housing on St. Croix.

There is no question that housing and home ownership are some of the most important components of our community. Homes provide basic shelter. They serve as an important investment and a hedge against inflation. Home ownership gives a greater sense of pride in our community. In the Virgin Islands where many homes have income-earning apartments, increased home ownership means increased rental housing stock.

I was surprised your editorial failed to mention a program that may be the key to solving many of our moderate income housing problems in the islands: the recent increase in the Virgin Islands Federal Housing Administration (FHA) mortgage lending ceiling, made possible through my amendment to the federal Affordable Housing Act of 1990.

The increase for single family, single unit homes in the Virgin Islands to $187,300 - and even higher for two, three and four unit homes - gives the following advantages to prospective home owners under the FHA program:

* A 5% downpayment compared to at least 20% down for conventional mortgages.
* Nearly half of closing costs rolled into the loan.
* Often, lower interest rates than conventional mortgages because the loan is backed by the federal government.
* More liberal income-to-loan ratios, requiring less income for more house.

To explain these benefits and how Virgin Islanders can best take advantage of them, I am sponsoring two housing conferences, on St. Thomas, July 26, at Bluebeard's Castle Hotel and July 28, at Government House in C'sted. Top officials of the federal Dept. of Housing and Urban Development and the FHA program will be there to inform the general public, builders, contractors, lenders, real estate agents, and anyone interested in the opportunities available under the FHA program. I will be providing complete conference information to the community as the dates approach.

I invite readers, as well as your editorial staff, to these important conferences to learn more about the FHA program, how the new ceilings will enable us to boost home ownership, and how to bring relief to Virgin Islanders caught in the moderate housing crunch.

Poor placement of tourists

Dear editor:

This letter is in response to the article "Criminals put white tourists on the run," in the Sunday/Monday, June 16/17, issue of the AVIS.

It is our position that the front page placement, when many more pertinent issues face our community, is highly inflammatory and irresponsible.

St. Croix is faced with several issues that could be responsibly addressed in the same space, for example, where will the ex-employees of Carambola seek employment in an already depressed economy? Also regarding the ex-employees, do they have insurance, medical or otherwise? How will this affect the Virgin Islands' Unemployment System? And how will the VI government (those charged with the welfare of our community) safeguard our tax-paying populace from disasters like this in the future?

Instead the article chooses to highlight negative aspects of our community, without thorough investigation. In an article regarding crime, such as we would hope it to contain factual information which would allow the reader to assess the validity of the comments made. This article has not met this criteria. We would like to know what time this occurred, how large this "bunch of people" was, and why did Welcott not report the crime to the police?

Without these basic facts the article is simply inflammatory. For Greg Anduze to amend the Welcott incident with the Kash story and provide no date, no time and no statement by the police as to the status of the investigation is wholly irresponsible.

The issue of crime is not specific to St. Croix or to "white tourists". The multitude of crimes committed

Hey, what's the matter with Buffalo?

BY MARIANNE MEANS

WASHINGTON - As television broadcasts and home-video cameras intrude further and further into our private lives, familiar standards of good taste and viewer sensitivity are constantly being challenged.

The latest pioneering effort to air what has never before been broadcast is California public television station KQED's lawsuit seeking the right to video-tape the execution of a condemned man in the San Quentin prison gas chamber.

A federal district judge in San Francisco recently denied the station permission to film the pending execution of Robert Alton Harris, a convicted double murderer who is scheduled to be the first California prisoner put to death in nearly a quarter century. The decision will be appealed.

The case has set off an emotional controversy. laden with anguish over First Amendment principles, the public's right to know and the morality of constitutionally allowed capital punishment at all.

Those who think executions should be filmed argue that television is simply a modern extension of the pencil press, which has long been allowed to witness executions, although not photograph them. The advocates contend that opposition reflects an unnecessary squeamishness about what the public should be allowed to see.

Station KQED also has an ally in opponents of the death penalty, who hope that if the public actually witnesses the state putting a person to death, the resultant horrified outcry will end the practice.

But there are legitimate reasons why the court drew the line. The judge cited concerns about the prisoner's privacy, a possible prison riot and potential retaliation against officials whose faces would be seen as they carried out the sentence.

Yet those are practical considerations that don't got to the heart of the matter, which is whether masses of people have a right to witness government officials under a court order legally taking a human life.

In the 19th century, executions were not only open to the public, they were celebratory occasions that drew large crowds. criminals were hung from a rope in some convenient outdoor location amidst a festive, circus-like atmosphere.

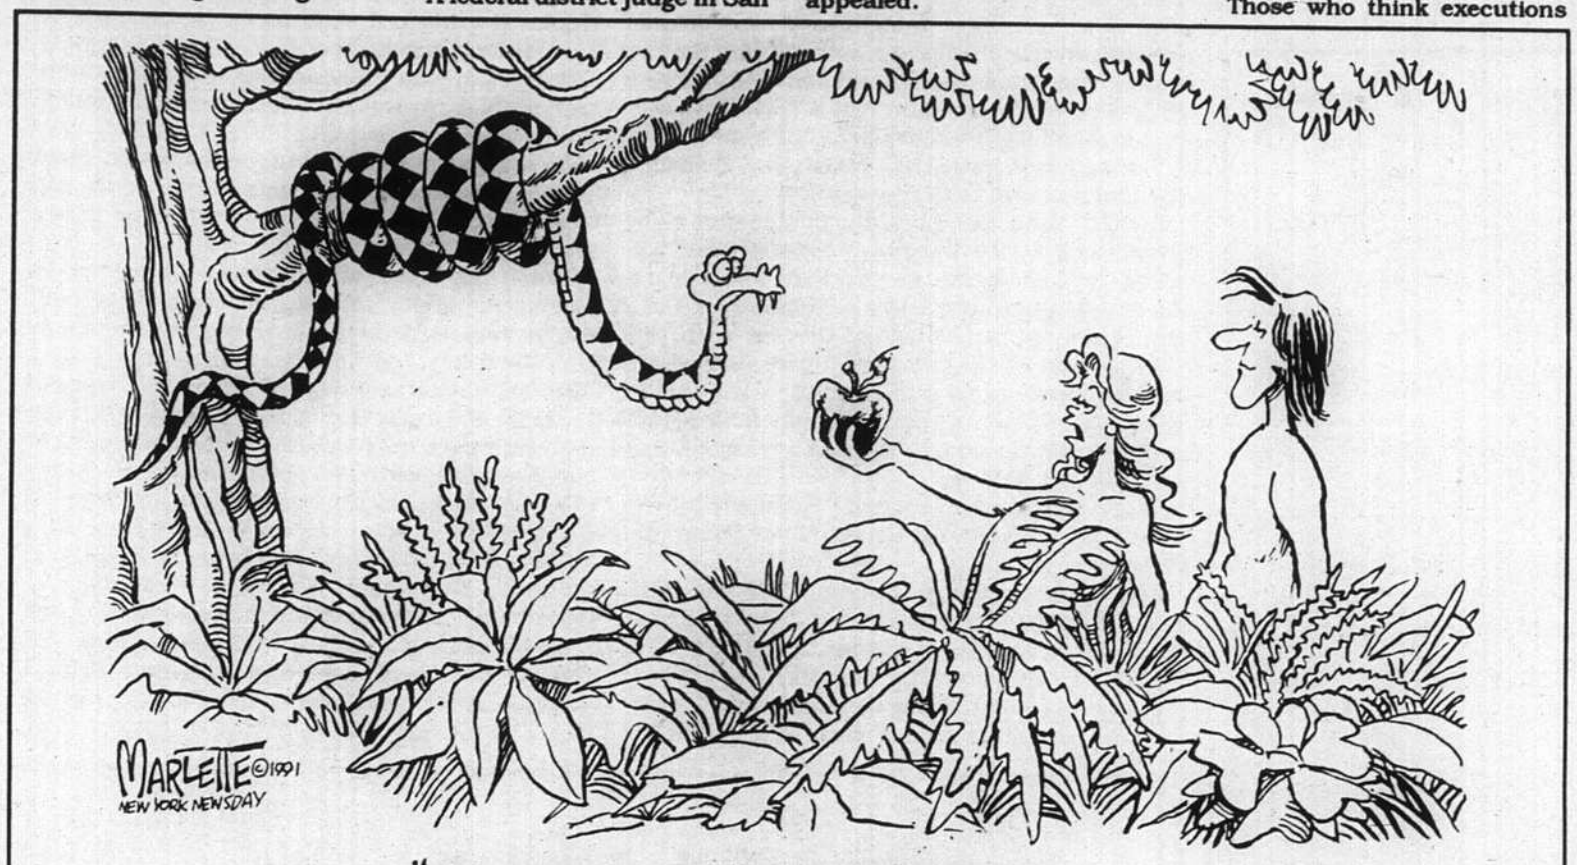

A hundred years ago nobody worried about the privacy of the condemned — they simply didn't have any, as thousands watched their final suffering. But as the nation matured, this barbaric voyeurism fell from favor as altogether too uncivilized and bloodthirsty; executions were moved indoors to the relative obscurity of the electric chair or the gas chamber.

Admitting television amounts to the modern equivalent of a public hanging. Even if videotaping were allowed only upon permission of the condemned person, the privacy of the prisoner's family would violated, adding to tits humiliation and pain. And once the film was made, there is no guarantee that it would implying that because the state does it, murder is OK.

The case for giving the public a ringside seat relies upon the concept that all government actions, no matter how offensive, should be done in the sunshine. Taxpayers, after all, pay for everything.

That's a fine. idealistic goal. But we live in a real, imperfect world, and the policymaking sessions are free to close them, and often do. It was only five years ago that the U.S. Senate began allowing TV cameras to record floor debate; the House began a mere 11 years ago. Most

The clash between television and individual right to privacy

BY CALVIN TRILLIN

Without meaning any disrespect toward Miami or Denver, I want to say that I was rooting for Buffalo to get one of the two new National Leagues franchises. On the day the decision of the league's selection committee was scheduled to be handed down, I wore my Buffalo necktie for good luck. It has a lot of buffalo heads on it, so that it looks like the club-tie for a club in which all the members are shaggy beasts. All I can say to the people of Buffalo is that the tie has worked in the past.

I realize that some people will think that my taking any interest at all in the question of National League franchise selection is pretty hypocritical since, I have in the past made light of the desperate longing of American cities to be in the majors. I have viewed it as an impulse often led by businessmen who, cheerfully throwing around other people's bond money to build a flashy major league stadium, are mainly interested in sitting up in one of those fancy corporate boxes and feeling big league themselves.

Also, I long ago acknowledged that my loyalty to the Kansas City Blues, of the American association, was such purity that when they disappeared — erased to make room for a major league club -I pretty much lost interest in the national pastime. Still, as the moment of the franchise announcement neared, I found myself wearing my Buffalo tie — which caused some comment in my family, since I was spending most of that day helping in the garden.

Don't get me wrong: I like Miami and I like Denver. I like the tenuous hold Miami has on respectability — that history of promoters and fast-talkers that still makes it a hard place to cash a check. I enjoy 8th Street, or Calle Ocho, the main drag of Cuban Miami. I can't think of any better way to spend the end of a balmy Florida evening than to watch the action from a corner table at the Versailles, on 8th Street, A Cuban coffee shop that for fancy trappings has the Versailles over in France beat a mile.

And I have a neighborly feeling toward Denver. When I was growing up in Kansas City, I thought of Denver as the next city west. (The next city east was St. Louis, then a center breweries and shoes factories that was the last outpost of the majors; because of the hapless St. Louis Browns, it was often described as "first in booze. first in shoes, and last in the American League.") When I'm in Denver and I cross Colfax, the extension of the old Highway 40, I always have the feeling that all I have to do is make a sharp turn east, drive 603 miles, and I'm home.

I wish Denver and Miami luck and a couple of lefthanders who can go the distance. Still, I was rooting for Buffalo — partly, I'll admit, because Buffalo seemed to me about due for a big inning.

Because of a couple of freak snow storms, Buffalo has become the butt of cheap snow-jokes by stand-up comics and other smart alecks — although a friend of mine in Buffalo (the same friend who gave me my Buffalo tie) assures me that anyone who took the trouble to look up the statistic would know that Buffalo actually get considerably less snowfall on the average than Yakutsk, Siberia, USSR.

I liked the idea of the worm turning. In fact, I though I saw a trend developing in that direction a week or so before the National League selections when the National Assessment of Educational Progress released the result of mathematics testing done in all but 13 states: it turned out that the state with the best math students — or, considering the overall results, maybe I should say the least dismal math students — was North Dakota. Anybody who had ever heard people from South Dakota tell jokes about the intelligence level of people from North Dakota had to see that as a sign that the oppressed were rising.

At that point, I could envision the victory celebration among

Bush sends Gorby arms control message

IJAMSVILLE, Md. (AP) - President Bush on Saturday sent a personal message to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev urging a stronger Soviet effort to conclude thorny arms control talks.

Bush said he wanted to do whatever he could to see that the Soviet leader "energizes his bureaucracy."

"What we're doing is trying to move that process forward once again, " Bush said, adding that he wanted progress before his talks with Gorbache v in London at the conclusion of this month's economic summit of industrialized nations.

U.S. Ambassador Jack F. Matlock Jr. delivered the oral message to Gorbachev.

The U.S. president, speaking to reporters as he played golf in the Maryland countryside, indicated he still wants to conclude a treaty on limiting long-range nuclear weapons so a U.S.-Soviet summit can be held at the end of July.

Bush said of the message, "It was strictly to express once again our continued interest in getting this START agreement finished. He knows and we know that to get a summit agreement, that must be finished up."

If the process gets moving, Bush said, there could be an agreement "hopefully by the end of July."

Pressed for specifics, Bush indicated he prodded the Soviet leader to make a greater effort to resolve the remaining technical issues that have blocked an agreement for months.

"I want to get their team moving forward as fast as ours is," the president said, adding that the Soviet leader is "very interested" in concluding the agreement. "And what I want to do is be sure that he energizes his bureaucracy just as we've energized ours, and his military particularly," Bush told reporters.

U.S. officials have said the Soviet military has been taking a much harder position in the talks than was evidenced early on by Gorbachev's reform-minded government.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who accompanied Bush, was asked what specifically was in the message.

Baker said the president urged the Soviet leader "to send his people with instructions so we can close out START. ... They know what the issues are."

Bush said the remaining issues blocking an agreement largely involve the coded data both sides would need to verify each other's compliance with the treaty.

The United States and Soviet Union had hoped to conclude the treaty last winter. The talks and the Gulf War have held up the planned summit between the two leaders.

The United States and Soviet Union are continuing efforts to reach a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, or START, which has been in negotiation for nearly 10 years.

Most of the major issues in the treaty that would reduce nuclear weapons on both sides by about 30 percent have been settled, but some technical points remain. Both sides had hoped to finish the treaty by the end of July.

Guerrillas surrender to Lebanon government

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) - Palestinian guerrillas surrendered anti-aircraft guns, mortars and rocket launchers to the army Saturday as the government moved to further extend its authority over the south of Lebanon.

The guerrillas also left refugee camps where they had been surrounded after retreating from their strongholds in a four-day battle against the Lebanese army.

The army loaded the Palestinian weapons onto trucks and said they would be stored until the Palestine Liberation Organization decides where it wants to send the weapons.

Christian and Muslim Lebanese militias in Beirut, the central mountains and northern Lebanon given up their weapons a few months ago.

Army officers said that on Sunday they hoped to complete the disarmament, which would prevent the PLO from making attacks against Israel or defending the southern Lebanon refugee camps from Israeli air raids.

The army has said it will take responsibility for protecting the camps. But the government hopes that preventing the guerrillas from crossing the border to attack Israel will end the Israeli raids and lead Israel to pull its 1,000 soldiers out of a security zone it has established along its border with Lebanon.

The 5,000 PLO fighters in southern Lebanon will retain their automatic rifles, but agreed Thursday to remain in the refugee camps and not interfere with the army's deployment.

Lebanese government officials said that Washington had been asked Saturday to press for the withdrawal of Israeli-backed militiamen from the southern town of Jezzine, government officials said.

The Christian town, 18 kilometers (11 miles) east of Sidon, is expected to be the next target for army deployment following the agreement with the PLO guerrillas.

Jezzine is controlled by the South Lebanon Army militia, which is financed and trained by Israel. The militia also deploys troops to patrol Israel's self-proclaimed security zone.

The government officials, who insisted on anonymity, said the request was relayed to U.S. Ambassador Ryan Crocker.

Crocker met Saturday for 1-1ú2 hours with President Elias Hrawi.

He told reporters after the meeting, "Our position is very clear on this subject of the extension of the government authority to all Lebanese territory, and that includes the south."

The United States has repeatedly called for ridding Lebanon of all militias.

Crocker praised the deployment of Lebanese troops around Sidon last week as "a step that we can all be proud of."

The army encircled the refugee camps of Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh Mieh on Sidon's eastern edge on Friday after the guerrillas retreated from battles which left 46 people dead and 173 wounded.

Pressing the press

LONDON (AP) - Press freedom in Britain is under increasing attack as politicians seek to curtail investigative journalism and judges hear more cases in private, a report from newspaper owners said Saturday.

"In recent years the threat of statutory interference with newspapers has grown," said the report, Press Freedom in Britain, issued by the Newspaper Society, which represents newspaper companies outside London.

The report also spoke of a growing tendency for publication restraints and new legislation which would impose impartiality guidelines on commercial television.

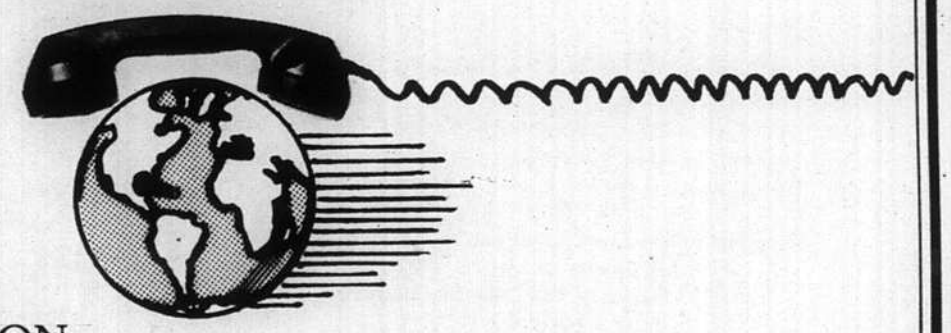

The report said intrusion into private lives by some tabloid newspapers had provided ammunition for those seeking to put restraints on the press.

"As we witness the collapse of the Soviet empire, rejoice at the triumph of the spirit of liberty ... do we in Britain, at this of all times, intend to see our freedom of speech, inquiry and publication harassed, eroded and confined?" the report asked.

Is Barbouti dead?

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ihsan Barbouti was suspected by U.S. intelligence of doing illegal business with Iraq. He also had admitted helping build a Libyan plant alleged to make chemical weapons.

So what was he doing living openly in the United States, leaving a trail of multimillion-dollar real estate deals?

And what was that Florida business involving cherry pits? Was he, as his partner alleged, seeking byproducts that could be used in chemical warfare?

Then Barbouti died last summer. Or did he?

The Iraqi-born dealmaker's activities provide a tale of globe-spanning intrigue. And his case renews questions about U.S. policy toward Iraq - a stance turning sharply from public civility through most of the 1980s to open war after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Taking Barbouti's demise first, he was reported to have died in London last summer - on July 1, his 63rd birthday. A heart ailment. Body cremated.

Since then, however, according to former partner Louis Champon, he has been reported alive in four countries: Austria, Chile, Argentina and Jordan.

And there would be precedent for a mysterious rebirth, says Champon's lawyer, John C. Mattes. Barbouti was said to have died once before - in the late 1970s - only to turn up alive and well in the early 1980s.

The U.S. government's relationship with him - if any - is no clearer.

The CIA says it "was made aware of some allegations that Barbouti was undertaking activity in support of weapons proliferation in the Middle East" and turned the information over to the FBI.

The FBI says it won't comment on any of that.

However, lawyer Mattes suggests the CIA actually was using Barbouti to infiltrate Iraq's and possibly Libya's chemical weapons programs, so nobody went after him.

That's where the cherry pits come in.

The U.S. Customs Service said it began investigating last fall whether Barbouti illegally shipped technology and material to Iraq.

But Champon, an inventor of flavors and scents who entered into a business venture with Barbouti in 1988, said he had raised the alarm about the Iraqi's activities back in 1989, and nothing happened.

Champon, of Boca Raton, Fla., has been informed he is the target of a grand jury investigating allegations of illegal exports, said his lawyer, Mattes.

The grand jury appears to be focusing on exports to Libya, partly because Barbouti spoke openly and often about his dealings with the Libyans, said Mattes. But Mattes said he believes Libya was just a convenient cover for other Barbouti dealings - with Iraq.

Champon went into partnership with Barbouti to obtain an investor for a process he invented to extract natural cherry flavoring from cherry pits, said Mattes.

But what Barbouti really wanted was a front company for dealings with Iraq, he said.

In an October 1990 suit against Barbouti's firm, IBI Flavor Ingredients, Champon alleged that Barbouti's real aim was to "obtain possession of byproducts of the process which can be used to create toxic and chemical weapons for the governments of Libya, Iraq, and-or others to whom such substances cannot be lawfully exported."

Various news reports, including one by ABC News' Nightline program, say Barbouti was interested in a byproduct of the cherry pit extraction - cyanide. According to these reports, Barbouti shipped several cyanide barrels to Iraq as proof that the substance could be manufactured from fruit pits and could be used for making nerve gas.

But Mattes doubts the reports, saying he has interviewed workers at the Boca Raton plant who said they had dumped the cyanide as a waste product. Also, cyanide is generally available on the open market and Iraq wouldn't have had to make it from fruit pits, he said.

Instead, Mattes believes Barbouti may have been used by the CIA to infiltrate chemical weapons programs in Iraq, and maybe in Libya.

"That's the only conclusion you can draw" for Barbouti being allowed to operate openly in this country despite his well-known connection to the Rabta plant, Mattes said. The U.S. government says the plant, in Libya, produces chemical weapons and has considered bombing it.

Two Swedes escape India after 97 days in captivity

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - Two Swedish engineers who escaped Saturday from their Muslim kidnappers said they had given up hopes of freedom during their 97 days of captivity in Kashmir.

"I did not think we would be able to come out this alive," said a beaming Jan-Ole Loman at New Delhi airport after he arrived from Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir.

Loman and his colleague, Johan Jansson, were received by Swedish Ambassador Par Kettis who presented them with flowers. Unshaved and haggard, the engineers talked to reporters briefly before being taken to the Swedish Embassy.

Loman, 38 and Jansson, 40, were kidnapped March 31 by Muslim separatists while driving towards a ski resort near Srinagar.

The Muslim Janbaaz (Martyrs) Force claimed responsibility for the kidnapping. The organization is one of the several guerrilla groups fighting for the secession of Muslim-dominated Kashmir from predominantly Hindu India.

The men said they had been treated well by their captors, but were shifted to at least 45 hideouts in the Kashmir valley during their captivity.

"The food given was very good but we are not used to such kind of food," Loman said, referring to the spicy meat and rice they were fed.

The men said they escaped from a hideout at an unidentified location at about 1.30 a.m. (2000GMT Friday) and walked 25 kilometers (15 miles) before reaching a police station.

"We jumped out of the window and walked through rice paddies. We did not really have any idea where we were walking," Jansson said.

The two men reached the village of Bijbehara at about 5.30 a.m. (0000GMT) and walked into a police station.

Concorde prices cut to $7,000 rountrip

NEW YORK (AP) - For the first time ever during the summer travel season, British Airways is slashing the roundtrip price of a seat on its super-deluxe, supersonic Concorde jet.

Through Aug. 30, travelers on the 3 1-2-hour first-class journey from New York to London (and back) will have to fork over just dlrs 6,999 instead of the regular $8,334 roundtrip fare.

"I'd say it's quite a bargain," said British Airways spokesman Sandy Gardiner.

For passengers flying the needle-nosed jet between Washington to London, the roundtrip fare is trimmed to $6,999 from the standard $7,426. (The regular fare is cheaper because the trip takes longer, and time is money.) Travel must be completed by Aug. 31.

Unlike the rest of the airline industry, which gears up for extra travelers in summer, business for the Concorde slacks off because the business executives who keep the airline aloft go on vacation, often for the entire month of August, Gardiner said.

"We're trying to incentivize the period when the Concorde usually has less traffic," he said.

Hungary suspends probe into funding of terrorist

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) - Hungarian authorities Saturday suspended a year-long investigation into possible Hungarian aid to the international terrorist known as Carlos.

Carlos, implicated in several major terrorist acts during the last decade, is known to have used Hungary as a base of operations from 1979 to 1985.

Hungarian authorities said they decided to suspend the investigation because they could find out about terrorist accomplices "only by questioning the Carlos group," the state MTI news agency reported.

The whereabouts of Carlos are unknown.

Hungarian, French, German and Austrian authorities cooperated in the probe, which confirmed that Carlos and his group began staying in Hungary in July 1979. One month later, the terrorist shot at an Interior Ministry car tailing him. No one was wounded.

For two years beginning in 1980, the group kept an arms cache in a Budapest apartment. MTI reported that Carlos and his accomplices sealed the apartment on request of Hungarian authorities, who then prevented them from having access to it in 1985.

The Carlos group left in that year and did not return.

In June 1990, Hungary's newly appointed Interior Minister Balazs Horvath first publicly alleged that officials of the country's former Communist regime had provided shelter and training facilities for Carlos, whose real name is Ilich Ramirez Sanchez.

One of the documents Horvath produced was a letter allegedly written by Carlos to Hungarian Communist leader Janos Kadar.

"From our base in Hungary, we have developed our international ties ... without any hindrance on the part of the Hungarian authorities," the 1980 letter said.

Living in fear

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) --The breakaway republic of Croatia has been spared military intervention, but its leaders still fear the worst and say ethnic clashes between Croats and Serbs could trigger war.

"I was an optimist until a week ago," said Croatia's information minister, Hrvoje Hitrec. "Now I would say the possibility of war is greater than for finding a peaceful solution."

Ethnic violence flared Friday in Croatia, which declared independence along with Slovenia on June 25.

The Croatian Defense Ministry said its forces battled Serbian nationalists in the northeast. Reports on Saturday said up to 83 people were killed or injured in the fighting, but the figure could not be confirmed.

Hitrec said that if federal troops were called in to separate feuding Serbs and Croats, the fighting would make combat in Slovenia "look like Disneyland." Croatia, a predominantlyRoman Catholic republic of 5 million people in northern Yugoslavia, has 100,000 men under arms in its national guard and police.

The republic, the officials say, is a powder keg of long-suppressed hatreds between the Croats and the 600,000 ethnic Serbs living there.

The Forgiving Father, Part 2

By Dwight Lamppert

Searching The Scriptures

Last week we began our study of Luke 15 and the parable of the prodigal son. We learned that the focus of this parable is really The Forgiving Father, and that it shows us some characteristics of God's forgiveness.

We also learned that God is always looking and waiting for us to return to Him at times when we break fellowship with Him. Then we found out that when you take one step toward Him, He'll run toward you. To continue our study, I need to go back to verses 18 and 19 to examine what the son decided to say once he returned to the father.

"I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee,"

"And am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants."

He certainly had his confession planned. His only goal was that he wanted to be made a servant. Then he would at least have something to eat, and wouldn't have to eat pig's food any longer. Now look at how the confession went:

"And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son."

"But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:" (Luke 15:21-22)

The first word in verse 21 is "but." This word "but" sets in contrast that which precedes it. The son had started his confession, but the father did not allow him to finish. Compare verse 21 with verses 18-19. The son did not have a chance to tell the father that he wanted to be one of the hired servants.

"But," or in contrast to being made a servant, the father gave him a robe, a ring, and sandals for his feet. In the Eastern culture, the robe signified his authority or position in the family. This robe might have been the one he wore before he left. The father restored him to his position as a son.

To further show this, the son received the family cygnet ring and the sandals. The ring was used to seal letters with a drop of wax and would have the family coat of arms or symbol on it. In the east, only the family members wore sandals. The servants did not wear sandals. All these gifts show that the father restored him fully as a son into the family.

The situation is similar with God. When we walk out of fellowship and harmony with God, we don't lose our sonship or the rights we have as His children. What we lose is the ability to claim those rights and tap into His abundant blessings. We then become subject to the circumstances of the world, which are controlled by the devil. This explains why things got so bad for the son. It's so much better to return to fellowship with God.

Verses 23 to 25 describe the party that the father threw for his returning son. Note that they killed "the fatted calf" and ate it. This wasn't just any calf. It was the best one. The father wanted nothing but the best for his son.

In verses 26 through 30, we find that the eldest son became angry with the party for the younger son:

"And he answering said to his father, Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment: and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friend:"

"But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou has killed for him the fatted calf." (Luke 15:29-30)

Isn't this just like a family? One child gets jealous because a brother or sister receives something that he didn't. Note that the elder son called the prodigal one "thy (the father's) son." Although the father could have gotten very upset here, look at how tenderly he corrects him:

"And he said unto him, Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine."

"It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad: for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found." (Luke 15:31-32)

The father gently reminded the elder son that this was his brother, and corrected his thinking, and forgave him also.

Br[illegible]en that kitchen!

By CARLETON VARNEY

Dear Carleton Varney: My kitchen is carpeted in a dark rust and black geometric print. My appliances are a soft-yellow color, and the countertops are marbleized yellow. The breakfast area has a beautiful honey-colored paneling. My cabinets have a dull flat finish, and I'm thinking of repainting them, along with the rest of the woodwork. What color can I use to offset my paneling? I plan to replace the carpet with a light-colored linoleum in a few years. My accents and curtains are slate blue and peach. Thank you, Peggy Connor.

AMERICANA is the mood of this country kitchen. Baskets, checkered curtains and a rocking chair all prominently displayed. (Photo courtesy of Chapters "Garden Time.")

Dear Peggy Connor: Your kitchen is a combination color. The soft-yellow appliances, along with the marbleized yellow countertops and the honey-colored wall paneling, sound interesting. On the cabinets, I would use yellow paint with a bright-red trim or bright-red knobs. Replace the carpeting with a vinyl flooring of yellow and white squares - 12 inches laid on the diagonal. For curtains, select a flower print of red, blue, green and yellow on a white background.

Dear Carleton Varney: My bedroom wallpaper has lavender, yellow and tangerine flowers with green leaves against a pale-yellow background. It's a very feminine print. I need suggestions for the wall color and the floor covering. Would you use green wall-to-wall carpeting on the floor? How about painting the walls the same pale yellow as the background? - B.W.

Dear B.W.: I would like the walls and ceiling painted the same pale yellow as the background color. Then unify the room with a plush wall-to-wall carpet of a slightly deeper yellow. For the bedskirted table, choose a lavender, yellow and white plaid. At the windows, place pale yellow draperies bordered in a plaid ruffle to match the skirt.

There's a common prejudice against country decorating. Many believe that to give a home a country look, a certain amount of style or sophistication will have to be compromised. They have an idea that there is a certain formula to be followed when using this motif, and they will necessarily have to install wood plank floors, paint the walls rust or delft blue and purchase all the traditional furnishings and knickknacks - American quilts, a pine trunk, oil lamps, duck decoys, rag rugs and so on. While all of these

Country Kitchens coming Virgin Islands and P.R.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Country Hospitality Corp. the parent company of Country Kitchen restaurants, has announced the signing of a major new franchise development agreement calling for additional of 10 Country Kitchen restaurants in Puerto Rico, St. Croix and St. Thomas over the next 10 years.

Frank Steed, corporation president joined with Willie Santana, president of International House of Quality Food Inc. of San Juan, to make the announcement. International House of Quality Food, Inc. will act as sub-franchiser for the new Country Kitchen restaurants.

"We feel the Caribbean market is ripe for the Country Kitchen restaurant product," said Steed.

"We are happy to bring the well-respected Country Kitchen name to the Caribbean," said Santana. "We're confident that the full-service America family restaurant concept that Country Kitchen symbolizes will be well received."

Two sites has been selected for the first phase of the expansion. Plans call for the opening of the first Country Kitchen restaurant in November 1991 in the Travelodge hotel on Isla Verde Avenue in San Juan.

For over 50 years, Country Kitchen restaurants have served millions of families with a unique style of country hospitality flavorful food, fast, friendly service, and fair prices in comfortable, casual surroundings.

There are currently more than 250 Country Kitchen restaurants in the United States and Canada. In late 1989, Country Kitchen announced its first expansion beyond the United States and Canada as the result of an international agreement with C.K. Japan, Ltd. This agreement calls for the development of up to 200 Country Kitchen restaurants in Tokyo, Osaka, Kyushu, Tohoku, and Hokkaiido. The first Country Kitchen recently opened in Osaka.

Sheep symposium a success

Sen. Bent Lawaetz, chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, congratulated Dr. Darshan S. Padda, vice president and director of the Virgin Islands' agricultural experiment station on the hosting of the 1991 haired sheep symposium which was held on St. Croix last weekend.

Delegate to Congress Ron de Lugo poses beneath an historic portrait of George Washington with Steve and Mary Ann Hulett of St. Croix during their recent visit to the nation's capital. Hulett, an Emergency Medical Technician, is the former editor of the St. Croix AVIS.

The one-day symposium attracted participants from 20 U.S. mainland institutions, Mexico, Canada, Indonesia, and nine Caribbean countries.

According to Lawaetz, "St. Croix is a major location for the development of prime livestock, and the St. Croix white hair sheep is among our many successes."

The senator referred to the Senapol cattle which was developed on St. Croix and which is in demand worldwide for use as breeding stock.

Similarly, the St. Croix white hair sheep is in demand throughout the Caribbean and North America. "Although the white hair sheep was not developed on St. Croix, it was brought to the island from West Africa more than 200 years ago," Lawaetz said.

Since then, the white hair sheep has been exported to many countries from St. Croix. Hosting of the symposium on St. Croix is appropriate because almost all white hair sheep in the new world came from St. Croix," he said.

According to officials at the V.I. agricultural experiment station, the St. Croix white hair sheep have been exported to Martinique, Anguilla, Tortola, Trinidad and Saba among others. Participants presented papers on several aspects of the

Lee Lets Loose on Hess -- UVI land

By SIDNEY LEE

Let us take a look at the current controversy about 350 or so acres of land on St. Croix near the Hess Oil Complex.

While this acreage is in the name of the College of the Virgin Islands, it is really a product of St. Croix's industrial potential and the oil refinery site potential of St. Croix.

This property was part of a Joe Alexander - Annie de Chabert plot on the South Shore area of limited potential. Then two promoter - entrepreneur personalities namely Hadary and Kluge seeing the Hess refinery success become interested in St. Croix. At that time there was a shortage of world refinery capacity. Mr. Hadary was a world wide operator jumping from the Middle East to the refinery centers of Europe and North America. Hadary had limited capital but was as we say an operator. He operated on several fronts. He contacted officials in the Virgin Islands government and the U.S. Department of Interior and had tax abatement legislation all ready for V.I. government approval. He had his eye on the land by Hess, and also on the section of Sandy Point where just offshore where the ocean floor falls to off 500 or more fathoms of depth to provide a deep major tankers berthing place on a dock close to shore. So there is no need for a pipeline from the tanker.

It appears that Hadary was sold that prospects for V.I. government help and approval would be best forth coming if some firm committment for the Refinery Site could be made. This was not forthcoming for Sandy Point without a bona fide sales contract.

However a sort of deal was made with de Chaberts for the land near Hess. As time dragged on the sellers of this land demanded some cash payment and Hadary & Kluge induced great Northern Gas company a producer in the Illinois midwest area to back the purchase and eventually put up the purchase money. In time due to the unavailability of sufficient crude oil, lack of operating money, and other factors, the Hadary-Kluge venture failed and disppeared.

The great northern company took over ownership of the land for which they had provided the fund. Ownership of this land was a burden and a nuisance, and I believe Ralph Palewonsky suggested and possibly urged and helped great northern to make a gift of the property to the College of the Virgin Islands.

As time moved on, Hess expanded and could have a use for the 350 acres adjacent to their complex and bid $10 - $11 million plus for it. The University if the Virgin Islands should ratify the sale.

Realizing (1) the history of the land and its intertwining with St. Croix Industrial development, and the development uniquely of St. Croix as a refinery center and (2) also realizing the ongoing need to invest in the St. Croix campus and provide classrooms and dormitory and other facilities so St. Croix becomes a real sister campus to U.V.I. Then the money from the sale of the land to Hess should be invested in UVI facilities on St. Croix. An arrangement can be pursued where students in Science or Administration at the enlarged St. Croix campus can study 6 months and then work at Hess or Vialco for 6 months. This is the new custom in many newly developed technical and community schools.

It is a must that UVI do something to elevate the St. Croix campus to a near equal status; or the St. Croix branch will become an evening part time post high school; or in time a new institution will arise on St. Croix outside of UVI which will benefit no one.

One further comment to the opponents of the sale of the land. It is not feasible to u moderate cost hou herring smokescr

There is no ru alongside Hess (there and the com ner) and over $30, expensive for mod in this location. T ready has flat land that it can use for buy more suitable amount.

My apologies to jazz fans and to Banana Bay for getting last week's day and date wrong for the evening of jazz that took place Monday night. Unlike big city newspapers we don't have facts-checkers on staff in our proofing department and now and then, unfortunately, I do make a mistake. If I hadn't run into Joe Straws on Monday afternoon I would've missed the show myself.

Michael Bolivar on sax was bad (meaning good), he was nationwide, and St. Tomian guitarist John Schaffer was excellent, sticking with Wes Montgomery stylings throughout much of the evening. They were joined by the always sensitive Joe Straws on upright bass, Steady Teddy Blackwood on percussion, and Leo Depuis on traps.

One of the highpoints of the evening was a guest appearance by Venus, who inspired ent to the op-the land. It is not feasible to use this land for moderate cost housing, this is a red herring smokescreen.

There is no rush to want to live alongside Hess (unless you work there and the company is your partner) and over $30,000 per acre is too expensive for moderate cost housing in this location. The government already has flat land easy to subdivide that it can use for housing. Or it can buy more suitable sites for half this amount.

Holding this idle land is not a suitable investment for the government Retirement Fund. They could consider investing in a building under lease or real property with rental income. That is an investment. Idle land with no plans is a gamble and needs an entrepreneur. The Retirement System should have it hands full getting a real outside audit and putting its house in order and reporting its operations to its membership which the law requires and GESC ignores.

As an aside the College for years has owned land at Sandy Point but does nothing with it. The College should sell the idle land to this affluent purchaser as the college does not have a good history of managing and developing idle land unrelated to the college.

New prime minister for Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) - The new prime minister of Pakistan-held Kashmir took the oath of office early Saturday, after the government dismissed and arrested his predecessor.

Chief Justice Sardar Mohammed Ashraf of the Azad Kashmir (Free Kashmir) Supreme Court was sworn in early Saturday as acting prime minister of the semi-autonomous state in the Himalayas.

President Sardar Abdul Qayyum invoked his constitutional powers to fire Prime Minister Mumtaz Rathore on Friday, following a weeklong power struggle.

The president was quoted as saying that outbursts by Rathore after his party's overwhelming defeat in last week's legislative elections threatened to incite violence and damage Pakistan's stand in the Kashmir dispute with India.

Rathore complained of vote-rigging, among other charges.

Less than an hour before the swearing-in, held before dawn, the president told reporters the ceremony would be held later in the day. A presidential spokesman said the ceremony was moved up for legal reasons.

"The program was changed at the last minute because our lawyer said there should not be a gap of 12 hours," said Mohammad Farooq, a spokesman for Qayyum.

The official Associated Press of Pakistan reported that Rathore was taken by helicopter from Muazaffarabad, the capital of Pakistani Kashmir, to an undisclosed location.

Azad Kashmir once was part of a larger Kashmir, a former princely state divided between Islamic Pakistan and predominantly Hindu India in the 1947 partition of the subcontinent. India and Pakistan are longtime enemies.

Muslim secessionists in Indian-controlled Kashmir have been fighting for independence since January 1990. The uprising has killed more than 2,500 people.

India accuses Pakistan of arming, training and harboring the insurgents. Pakistan denies it, but says it supports the Kashmiris' right to self-determination.

Rathore had headed a fragile coalition government since May 1990.

In the June 29 legislative elections, his left-leaning Pakistan People's Party and its allies were overwhelmingly defeated by the conservative Muslim Conference, winning only two of the 40 assembly seats. The Muslim Conference won 28 seats.

But Rathore received little backing from the leader of the Pakistan People's Party, former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

Ms. Bhutto, who said little about Rathore's allegations, left Pakistan on Thursday for a three-week tour of Britain and Europe.

Ms. Bhutto herself was dismissed abruptly last August on charges ranging from corruption to political ineptitude. She is being tried before special one-judge courts on charges of misconduct and abuse of power.

Fallout in Yugoslavia may be omen to Soviets

LONDON (AP) - Overshadowing this month's meeting among leaders of the top industrialized nations and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is the disintegration of Yugoslavia and fear of a similar breakup in the Soviet Union.

The Group of Seven nations may be sympathetic to Moscow but show no sign of opening their coffers to help Gorbachev keep the country together with a massive infusion of Western aid.

"There won't be a check under the plate," said British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd.

This sentiment is echoed in Washington, Paris and Tokyo where officials pointedly note that Moscow has trouble repaying existing loans.

Even Germany, which has been the most active proponent of aid and would be flooded with refugees in the event of a Soviet breakup, is backing off.

German officials say they are running out of foreign aid money. Germany has come around to the pre-summit view that Moscow can only expect advice and a special associate membership in the International Monetary Fund.

A Japanese Foreign Ministry source, briefing reporters Friday on condition of anonymity, said the industrialized nations were most likely to offer "technical assistance."

The possibility of a Yugoslav-type explosion in the Soviet Union is not on the agenda of the July 15-17 summit but will be raised during informal political discussions by the so-called Group of Seven, government sources said.

Dr. Jonathan Eyal, director of the London-based Royal United Services Institute for Defense Studies, said Yugoslavia shows that there is little Western governments can do to influence events in such a crisis.

Stefano Silvestri, vice-president of the private Rome-based Institute for International Affairs, said, "The question for the G-7 summit is no longer should, but can the West do something to help the Soviet Union?"

"The Soviet Union's crisis is much larger - Yugoslavia is Little League in comparison," he said. "It is a crisis which (the West) will not be able to manage." The West will not want to choose sides between the republics and the federal government, he said.

Gorbachev has said he wants Western cooperation to help implement reforms.

He is expected to outline his plans for political, economic and constitutional reforms when he meets the leaders of the United States, Canada, Japan, Britain, Italy, France and Germany in London after the summit ends, a British official said.

Before the summit, the authors of one plan being considered by Gorbachev have been traveling to key Western capitals with their proposal to integrate the Soviet Union into the world economy by 1997 with large-scale Western help.

Graham Allison, a Harvard University professor who co-authored the plan with Soviet economist Grigory A. Yavlinsky, told the Royal Institute of International Affairs on Thursday that "the situation in Yugoslavia ... should serve as a vivid wake-up call" about what could happen in the Soviet Union.

Unless the Soviet Union takes bold measures, he warned, its economy will go into a free fall which could lead to violent disintegration.

"No single event in the postwar period would pose a larger risk of nuclear war than the violent collapse of the Soviet Union," Allison said.

Political analysts countered, however, that the breakup of Yugoslavia shows that massive aid is not a panacea.

Eyal said the years of Western support for Yugoslavia's federal government, unlike for the Soviet Union, had failed to stop the slide toward civil war.

"Unless the center sorts out its problems, including giving independence to those who want it, no external propping up exercise is going to succeed," he said.

"Aid changes nothing," said Anita Tiraspolsky, a specialist on Eastern Europe at the French Institute for International Relations. "It can help maintain Gorbachev for a certain time.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Z equals M

The Cryptoquip is a substitution cipher in which one letter stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words and words using an apostrophe give you clues to location vowels. Solution is by trial and error.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Wife Says Her Cheatin' Heart Still Beats for Ex-Husband

DEAR ABBY: I am having a problem with my ex-wife. During our marriage, I caught her cheating four times. She swears she still loves me and only me. (We still see each other.) She comes over and spends the night with me every once in a while, and we have sex together, even though she has been engaged to a man in Florida for more than a year. He has money and buys her very nice gifts. (He just bought her a '91 Camaro.)

The problem is, I still love her and would like to get back together if she would only let go of the "money man." Should I let her go or keep trying to get her back?

A TOUGH DECISION

DEAR TOUGH DECISION: Let her go. She's using you (for sex) and using the man in Florida for whatever she can get out of him. If you were to get her back, what would you have? A promiscuous gold digger who can't be trusted.

DEAR ABBY: Twice recently, my daughter (the eldest and married) asked me to intervene in her behalf concerning some disagreements she has been having with some of her siblings.

My answer was, "No, please try to work it out yourselves." She then told me that it was my duty to intervene. I disagreed, saying I was not going to take sides — I wanted to be on friendly terms with all my children and their spouses.

Her husband then sent me a nasty letter calling me "ignorant and selfish," and saying I could no longer write to — or speak with — my daughter!

Abby, was I wrong in refusing to intervene?

PROBLEMS ON THE HOME FRONT

DEAR PROBLEMS: No, I think you used good judgment in remaining neutral. Now, about your name-calling son-in-law: He does not speak for his wife — unless, of course, she has authorized him to be her representative. Has she?

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are happily married. We both agree that our family is complete and we do not want any more children. We use birth control, but nothing is foolproof, and just the thought of another pregnancy makes me shiver in my boots!

The reason my husband hasn't gotten a vasectomy is because we haven't been able to find out if such measures are right in the eyes of the Lord. We are members of the congregation of a very small Christian church, and I just can't bring myself to ask our minister. Can you please help us?

SHY IN COLORADO

DEAR SHY: Perhaps you would feel more comfortable consulting a clergyperson of your faith in a neighboring town. Or you could write to the district office of your church and inquire.

DEAR ABBY: Reading in your column that you put your glasses on when you answer the phone prompts this letter.

Even if it's dark, when we need to hear, we put our glasses on. Regardless of how strange it may seem, we hear better with glasses. This theory has been tested, and it's true.

Oral Health Tips For Seniors

Here's a thought to bite on. Dentures will not only soon be obsolete, so will tooth loss in this country. That's the prediction of health officials who are launching an ambitious program to improve the dental health of American adults.

Tooth loss is so common among older people that many regard it as a normal part of aging. Teeth don't fall out because they are old. They're lost because of trauma, or, more often, dental disease.

To wipe out the diseases that lead to tooth loss, we need to understand the factors that influence oral health. These include dental hygiene practices, behaviors such as tobacco use that harm oral tissues, socioeconomic status, general health status, dental treatment methods and the diseases themselves.

To meet the challenge, the NIDR is spearheading a national program of research and action to improve the oral health of American adults.

The diseases responsible for most tooth loss—gum disease and tooth decay—are largely preventable today.

NIDR will lead the research side of the program, supporting studies on the biological, behavioral, and epidemiological aspects of adult dental health.

For a free fact sheet on oral health for seniors, write: Age Page, National Institute of Dental Research, P.O. Box 54793, Washington, D.C. 20032.

teamed when Columbus directed the Hughes-scripted "Home Alone", which just completed a successful run at La Reine Theater and which recently surpassed "Return of the Jedi" to become the third highest-grossing film of all time. On "Only the Lonely" Columbus, who previously wrote the blockbuster "Gremlins", works from his own screenplay, which he describes as "a bittersweet comedy".

In "Only the Lonely", unmarried Chicago policeman Danny Muldoon (John Candy) finds true love with Theresa Luna (Ally Sheedy), the shy daughter of a local mortician, but has trouble breaking the ties that bind him to his cantankerous, overbearing mother, played by O'Hara. The good-hearted Muldoon is driven to distraction by his mother's meddling.

On "Only the Lonely", Candy works under the Hughes banner once again, having previously worked with Hughes on "Planes, Trains, and Automobiles", "The Great Outdoors", "Uncle Buck" and "Home Alone'. Candy's other credits include "Stripes", "National Lampoon's Vacation", "Splash", "Volunteers", "Summer Rental" and "Spaceballs".

Ally Sheedy is Theresa, the shy girl who comes between mother and son. In "Only the Lonely", Sheedy reunites with John Hughes, who directed her in "Breakfast Club". Other credits for the popular actress include "Bad Boys", "War Games", "Twice in a Lifetime", "St. Elmo's Fire", "Short Circuit" and "Betsy's Wedding".

Crucian Maureen O'Hara plays the widowed, manipulative Rose. O'Hara's distinguished career includes such classics as "How Green Was My Valley", "Rio Grande", "The Quiet Man", "The Hunchback of Notre Dame", "Mr. Hobbs Takes a Vacation" and "Miracle on 34th Street".

Anthony Quinn plays Nick, the Muldoons' amorous next-door neighbor, who encourages Danny in his newfound love while trying to romance the unreceptive Rose.

Adding to Danny's woes with their unsolicited advice are Jim Belushi as Danny's police partner and Milo O'Shea as an Irish barfly.

Tickets for the Virgin Islands' premiere of "Only the Lonely" and United Way Benefit at La Reine Theater on July 24 are $12.50.

Contact the United Way at 773-0582 for more information.

With power from those two units, feeders six, nine and ten were given priority and brought on line at approximately 6:30 a.m. Saturday because those units supply electricity to the well fields that produce a portion of St. Croix's potable water supply, according to Bruno-Vega.

"This problem was complicated by low water in the tanks," Bruno-Vega said. "So we gave priority to those feeders that supply the well fields. In St. Croix we don't have sufficient reserves to stand the outage of two units."

Feeder No. four was also brought on line immediately because it supplies power to the St. Croix Hospital.

Repairs to Unit 17 were conducted all day Saturday by WAPA staffers from St. Croix and St. Thomas with the eight hour start-up time necessary to put Unit 11 back on-line expected to be completed by 5 p.m.

"We have brought in people from St. Thomas," Bruno-Vega said. "We had two of our best splicers working shoulder-to-shoulder with their counterparts in St. Croix to fix and repair the pot-heads.

Bruno-Vega added that with the cat's electrocution, nine sets of terminals needed to be repaired.

"The pot-heads are more manpower intensive that equipment extensive," Bruno-Vega said. "This is very critical work. That's why we require experts. It's a very tedious and time consuming job and we had to work around the clock just to replace nine of these terminals."

Another unit, No. 10, is under repair in Puerto Rico and is expected to be back on St. Croix within the next two weeks, Bruno-Vega said.

Power was resumed island-wide at 3:40 p.m. Saturday, WAPA officials reported.

With steam unit No. 17 expected to return on-line by Saturday night, a unit that produces steam for three of the Authority's desalination plants, WAPA's potable water supply problems may also be on the horizon of a solution.

"If the power plants are out, steam is not produced and consequently the desalination units are not working," Bruno-Vega said. "Right now the only units producing water are the well fields."

Those well fields produce one third, or one million gallons of water daily, of St. Croix's water needs, according to the executive director. The remaining 2.25 million gallons of required water are prod by the desalination units, which are down.

"Once Unit 11 come on board, then we'll start cranking up the desalination units," Bruno-Vega said. "Hopefully by (today) those units should be operational. We were working all through the night."

Bruno-Vega concluded by apologizing for the inconvenience the power outages may cause customers and asked them to continue supporting the Authority in its efforts to improve its service.

One business owner in the Sunny Isle Shopping Center, though, didn't appear to be supportive of WAPA.

"This is ridiculous," said the owner, who asked to remain anonymous. "The Mini Mall had to be closed down last week in the middle of the day. Now we wake up in the morning with no electricity, no warning, no bath and if you have an electric stove you have no food."

"I represent 6,120 people who voted for me. The 27th vote was mine. The constituency was mixed. She's placing doubt in people's minds about things that don't exist," Scott-Williams said. The status of several leases held in the Rules Committee led Sen. Berry to accuse the Committee Chairperson, Senator Adelbert Bryan, of delaying action on the leases because the owners of the businesses are white.

Scott-Williams refuted that charge, indicating that it is the intent of Senator Watlington to report these leases out of Committee at the next available opportunity. "I said that the leases were not being held because of race, because they were not. It's a non-issue. She needed to do something to be in the news," Scott-Williams asserted.

The freshman senator continued to question Berry's motives.

"Virgin Islanders, beware of those that stir cauldrons of trouble where none exist. During my six months in office, I have enacted legislation and addressed real concerns," she said.

"Ask yourself: Did you elect Berry to office for her to race around casting spells and notions about non-issues? How much of the people's time has been spent in this manner? Besides loud talk, what else is getting done on behalf of the people of the Virgin Islands? "I am focused on addresssing the needs of our youth, the disabled, and the elderly. They deserve my time and attention." Scott-Williams said.

Scott-Williams said that she was "appalled" by the manner in which she was described by Sen. Berry and bemoaned the state of politics in that case. "The adjectives that were used to describe me—if this be politics—then shame on us," Scott-Williams said.

Aussies boycott Coca-Cola

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) - The 5,000 residents of a small Australian town have declared war on the multinational Coca-Cola corporation for taking five jobs away from their community.

Locals in Stanthorpe, 100 miles (160 kilometers) south of Brisbane, are boycotted the company's products after it sacked its local distributor.

The century-old firm, Stanthorpe Aerated Waters, faces closure after Coca-Cola cancelled its franchise and distribution rights as part of a reorganization plan.

"We might not beat them, but they're going to know we are here," Neil Robertson, manager of the distribution company said Friday.

Queensland Hotels Association secretary-treasurer Bill Dellar said Stanthorpe was "a drop in the bucket" to Coca-Cola but said the loss of five jobs was important to the community.

Dellar hoped the boycott would spread from Stanthorpe to other small towns in Queensland state.

Local hotel and shop owners are purchasing drinks made by rival soft-drink manufacturers, and urging customers not to buy Coca-Cola. The town has five hotels and three clubs, all of which are backing the boycott, Dellar said.

Ian Brown, a spokesman for Coca-Cola, said the company viewed the boycott "very seriously" and a representative was visiting Stanthorpe to explain its position.

Brown said his firm decided to end the agreement with Stanthorpe Aerated Waters more than a year ago.

"We have decided that we can achieve a larger market share by using our own employees, rather than agents," he said.

Brown said the five workers had been offered alternative employment in Brisbane.

Man arrested for bad calls

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) - A computer analyst has been accused of making 30,000 obscene telephone calls during which he tried to get women to stand naked outside their homes, police said.

Anthony S. Galante, 31, told the women he was holding family members hostage and would kill them if they didn't comply, said police Detective Stephen Toth of Orangetown, N.Y.

Galante randomly chose the women - who ranged in age from 34 to 74 - and achieved success about once every 100 telephone calls, Toth said Friday.

Eclipse to rattle cookery

By SHELLEY EMLING
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE CHACAYA, Guatemala (AP) - When the moon eclipses the sun on July 11, some people of this Indian village will be ringing church bells and banging pots and pans to resurrect the sun.

"People worry that the sun will go away forever," said Nicolas Tuis, a 75-year-old elder in this village of 1,000 Quiche and Cakchiquel Indians west of Guatemala City.

The total eclipse will be visible along a 6,000-mile (9,654-kilometer) long, 160-mile (257-kilometer) wide path stretching from Hawaii to Brazil.

Skies will darken, stars will appear, winds will change and the temperature will drop during the nearly seven minutes in which the eclipse will be total.

For most of the millions of people expected to view the event, it will be a spectacular show. But in places like San Jose Chacaya, it has greater significance.

More than half of Guatemala's 9 million people are Indians — inheritors of ancient Mayan and other pre-Colombian traditions that rank the sun and the moon as deities behind only an inaccessible supreme being. Mayan astronomical calculations and the Mayan calendar are still used in some rural areas.

Millions of Mexico's 88 million people are also descended from the Maya, whose civilization collapsed around 810 A.D., and other Indian cultures.

"The (ancient) Mayan priests were very concerned about an eclipse," said Samuel Franco, founder of Casa K'ojom, an Indian museum in Guatemala City. "They would pray hard that the end of the world wouldn't come."

Tuis says his people believe an eclipse is an announcement from God, although as mortals they cannot understand what God is saying.

The ancient Maya also believed in the healing powers of an eclipse. Some of their descendants still expose injured or ailing parts of the body during an eclipse.

Some Indians believe a big bird is eating the sun during an eclipse. Others blame a giant bat or believe the moon is attacking the sun.

"They will come out and play music or burn incense to try and scare the bird away from the sun," Franco said.

Some villagers have hoarded food and firewood for weeks in case the sun doesn't come back.

SECTION 00020
INVITATION TO BID

VIRGIN ISLANDS PORT AUTHORITY
CROWN BAY PIER AND REVETMENT REPAIR
ST. THOMAS, VIRGIN ISLANDS
U.S.A.

To Contractors: Sealed bids, entitled "CROWN BAY PIER AND REVETMENT REPAIR, ST. THOMAS, VIRGIN ISLANDS, U.S.A.," will be received by the Virgin Islands Port Authority Office of the Executive Director at Cyril E. King Airport until 2:00 p.m., July 17, 1991. Bids will be publicly opened and read aloud by the Purchasing Supervisor, and interested parties are invited to attend. A Prebid Conference will also be held in the Engineering Conference Room, Cyril E. King Airport at 10:00 a.m. on July 2, 1991, and potential bidders on this contract are urged to attend.

The work for which tenders are invited consists of providing labor, materials, services and equipment and of providing all work to repair the revetment at the Crown Bay dock. The intent of the work is to reconstruct the following facilities:

1. Replacement of approximately 700 tons of shore protection stone revetment.
2. Removal and replacement of four concrete pads — 3- square yards by 1 foot thick.
3. Construction of four wood gazebo rails.
4. Demolition and replacement of 650 square yards of 8" concrete apron.
5. Demolition and replacement of 150 square yards of 8" concrete slab.

The Contract is under and subject to:

A. Minimum wage rates as established by the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Labor.

B. Executive Order 11246 of 24 September 1965 as amended, and to the Equal Employment Opportunity Clause.

C. Disadvantaged Business Enterprise and Small Business Development Agency (DBE/SBDA).

The schedule for completion of the Contract is 60 calendar days after issuance of the Notice to Proceed. Bidders shall submit a certified check in the amount of 5% of the proposal or a Bid Bond as Bid Security. Bidders shall be prepared to furnish a Payment Bond and a Performance Bond, each equal to 100% of the Contract amount.

No Bid may be withdrawn for a period of 60 calendar days after scheduled closing time for receipt of Bids.

The bid money value of materials purchased directly by the Contractor together with the bid money value of the work performed by personnel and facilities provided directly by the Contractor shall be not less than 10 percent of the money value of work performed under this Contract. Any bid money value of work performed by Subcontractors' for work on the jobsite using Subcontractor's materials, labor and facilities, will not be included in the percent of work to be completed by the Contractor.

Bids shall be submitted on reproductions of the forms contained in the specifications, and shall conform to the terms and conditions of Section 00100 "Instructions to Bidders," and Section 00120 "Bid Requirements and Conditions."

Bidders may obtain Contract Drawings and Specifications at a cost of $50 per set from:

Virgin Islands Port Authority
Engineering Division
Cyril E. King Airport
St. Thomas, Virgin Islands
U.S.A. 00801

Contract Division and Specifications may be inspected in the above office at no cost.

The Contractor agrees to use local personnel for the categories of journeymn, mechanics, laborers, apprenctices, or trainees and local products to the maximum extend possible whenever such policy does not increase the cost to the Owner. The Contractor agrees to follow the resident employees requirements as described in Act No. 5174, Bill No. 16-0218 of the Virgin Islands Code.

Any contract awarded under this invitation to Bid is expected to be funded in part by the Virgin Islands Port Authority and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) under DSR #83529 and DSR #91308. However, neither FEMA nor any of its departments or employees is, or will be, a part of this invitation to Bid or any resulting contract.

The Virgin Islands Port Authority reserves the right to waive any informalities or irregularities in/or reject any or all Bids and to award or refrain from awarding the Contract for the work. The Authority also reserves the right to negotiate contract terms with the various bidders, when such is deemed to be in its best interest.

power," he said. "Hess, at present, is performing a detailed engineering analysis to see if they can deliver anything to us. We should have an answer in two or three months.

In a related development, Bruno-Vega said he was scheduled to leave late Saturday for meetings with potential investors in an $80 million bond issue the authority is attempting to float so that massive improvements can be made.

"Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday I will meet one-on-one with prospective investors in New York and Boston," Bruno-Vega said.

Meanwhile, he said dilapidated equipment at the Richmond Power Station makes the Hess deal especially crucial.

"The physical condition of the sub station in St. Croix is terrible. It is a relic in very bad shape," Bruno-Vega said. "The equipment is very old and it has become a plaguing electrical nightmare.

"In the short run, we are in a very critical situation," he said, "and unless we can get some power from Hess, we will be crossing our fingers for many times until we can get new facilities operating."

Bruno-Vega, when asked how much power WAPA wants to buy, replied simply, "We'll take as much as we can get.

"If that doesn't materialize, then we will have to continue repair and maintenance of what we have and our situation will continue to be as it is - poor."

WAPA administrators last April sought to purchase electricity from the refinery, but were told in writing Hess had no power to spare.

"We have continued to have discussions with Hess and, due to our present situation, they have agreed to take a second look and see if they can squeeze any additional power for our use, but the last official word we have is that they have no power to spare."

If Hess is able to supply power for public use, he said, rates for 20,172 St. Croix users and 23,163 St. Thomas users could be slightly affected. "We hope to negotiate an agreement that will not involve a rate change, but all of this has to be approved by the Public Service Commission" he said. "Since negotiations are underway, I would not want to publicly say how much we would be willing to pay for the power."

Hess power, if available, would be used only until two turbines can be constructed on a nine-acre land tract between Hess and Virgin Islands Alumina Corporation. Some $21.6 million in funding for the turbines, as envisioned, will come from the $80 million electric revenue bond issue.

Of the $80 million, Bruno-Vega said $4.2 million would be used to upgrade a switchyard at the Richmond Power Station, $9.9 million for construction of a combustion turbine on St. Thomas, $1.7 million to upgrade a switchyard on St. Thomas, $4.7 million for construction of a new east end sub-station on St. Thomas, $8.9 million for a new waste-heat boiler on St. Thomas, $1.6 million for power plant capital improvements, $325,000 for transmission and distribution equipment and $868,000 for environmental remediation on all three islands.

The rest, he said, will be to repay investors who purchased $16.2 million in revenue bonds," he said. "Also, an $8.5 million bond anticipation loan dating to 1983 is to be repaid.

"We hope to be able to repay the bond anticipation note as well as lower the interest rates we are now paying," he said. "Essentially, we are borrowing money at an interest rate lower than we are now paying."

Headaches for WAPA began in 1985 when the authority signed a contract with Caribbean Energy Corporation (CEC) for the construction and purchase of three diesel electric power and steam generators at the Richmond Power Plant, he said.

Power and steam from the generators, he said, was to have been sold to WAPA and would have produced 24 megawatts of power. Peak consumption during the week averages at 40 megawatts while during the weekends, 32 megawatts are used at peak times.

Under the original contract the generators were to have been built by 1989, but because of legal problems, the contract was extended until Jan. 1991.

"They (CEC) were not successful in obtaining a construction permit from Coastal Zone Management," Bruno-Vega said. "They were not able to obtain EPA Air Quality permits and there was delay after delay."

The executive director said by January of this year - construction still not underway - WAPA had had enough.

"WAPA went to U.S. District Court in January in an effort to terminate the agreement," he said. "The court ruled in our favor, declaring the contract moot.

"For all practical purposes, WAPA was in a straight jacket," he said. "We could not build other units because we were bound by a contract dating back to 1985. Now we are freed from the straight jacket and the road is clear for us to begin new construction."

Although pleased with the ruling, WAPA is now back at square one.

"The power situation in St. Croix has deteriorated tremendously," he said. "When two generators are out, WAPA does not have the capacity to supply the load for the island."

St. Croix has four generators, two of which are steam operated and two of which are gas turbines. The total capacity, when all four generators are working is 65 megawatts.

St. Thomas, meanwhile, has three gas turbine generators and two steam generators. Additionally, there is an emergency-use-only diesel generator on St. John.

regulation.

"What we have done in the past which we've already succeeded in is the coordination of the DLCA and Labor in a stronger working relationship, with reference to their reporting and their coordination to make this battle for lower food prices more affective," Redfield said.

"They're still going to be doing their own reporting," Redfield added, "but they're going to be coordinating with each other so it's more accurate, more effective and presented to the public in a manner of which the information is more useful."

Redfield concluded by saying that consumers should shop around and compare prices before buying and examine the review once it is made available.

"Try to buy at the best price," Redfield told consumers. "There are wide ranging differences in prices in the supermarkets and on a bi-weekly basis they should study up on these reports that will be made available to them and establish new and more realistic buying patterns.

"And by doing so, they will modify the market shares that the respective supermarkets now have, thereby creating the stimulus to decrease prices," Redfield concluded.

have. He's afraid to become a defendant, and he's afraid for his life," Brann said.

Brann was asked what he meant by "assets".

"I'll just leave it at that.. He can't convince Brann and he can't convince the people involved about how he obtained them and how," Brann said.

Armstrong testified on Wednesday that Brann brought U.S. Customs Agent Leslie Webb to his home two days prior to trial and while Webb returned momentarily to their vehicle Brann indicated to him that he was "workin" on the agent to get her to corroborate his story against Roebuck and Brow. Brann again, as he did on Wednesday, denied this allegation.

"My purpose for taking Mrs. Webb to Cedric's residence was for the purpose of taking some local Armstrong ice cream. It's a treat, and being we were friends, I would introduce folks to the ice cream," Brann said.

Brann added that he and Webb had attended pre-trial preparation at the U.S. Attorney's office up until lunch time. He said he took her to lunch at the P&M Restaurant in Frederiksted, and when they finished eating, they decided to go to Armstrong's to have ice cream for dessert. He said that they did not discuss the Brow/Roebuck case during lunch.

"We didn't talk about the case....She didn't go back to the vehicle. She was never out of earshot. We always spoke in the presence of Leslie Webb. I introduced them, obtained the ice cream, said hello, and shortly after, left the yard. We spent probably no more than seven minutes," Brann said.

The former NSF Agent denied ever knowing Mrs. Webb prior to her involvement in the case. He also denied planting drugs on Roebuck and Brow as implicated in Armstrong's Wednesday testimony.

"I told the truth. I told what I saw. I had no information that they had drugs; I only had suspicions...That's the honest truth. They acted suspicious.

"Mrs. Webb treated me like a professional. She was very strict, straight, and she treated me like a professional. I didn't know her, and everyone would know that you don't just meet people and ask them to lie for you.

"I'm sorry her name got caught up in this," Brann said.

Brann was asked why Webb chose the wrong defendant on Wednesday when asked to identify the man she saw clutching the drug-filled bag as he passed her office at the airport just prior to his arrest by the NSF. Webb chose Brow, who wore a white shirt on Wednesday, and ignored Roebuck who sat wearing a purple shirt. Yet, during the November trial, she had pointed to Roebuck as the person she saw previously.

Brann said there were reasons for the misidentification. "I can't say why she picked the wrong person as the possessor of the bag. I can say that it has been a while since the trial. She'd never had that much contact with them. She doesn't know them like I know them," he said.

Brann reiterated that it was still Armstrong's agenda in his testimony on Wednesday "to do away with the case. He said that many people of common sense would be able to "read the thin lines."

Brann was also asked about testimony connecting an alleged affair by his wife with the brother-in-law of one of the defendants and if that had been a motive in the case. "It happened very long ago...It's laid to rest. It allegedly happened before I became a Narcotics Strike Force Agent," Brann said.

Brann was also asked about the recent acquittal of St. Croix Attorney Jeffrey Moorhead on bribery and tampering charges. "I was approached, again, in that case. I was used like a scapegoat. My name came up in the Daily News and in The AVIS. People with common sense would know that the story Moorhead gave was frivolous. "The jury believed it because of the negative publicity that related to Windham and my arrest. The jury had to believe it, and I'm not surprised to hear that he got off 'cause, I think the Government should have used me in that case and let people decide which story they believed," Brann said.

Brann was asked about the monies involved in the case.

"I took whatever monies I received to the U. S. Attorney's Office...I would just like to say from my heart...I have nothing against attorneys Nissman and Atkinson.

"They can sleep at night. For sure, they will not see agent Brann attempting to cause them any harm," Brann said.

Speaking of harm, The AVIS asked Brann if he were aware of published reports that there had been a contract on his life regarding another matter while he was away.

"I have heard from a good source that there is a contract on my life...I have been a good worker. I have served my community. I have served it well—as to matters concerning the contract—I am not concerned at this time. I am not going to let anyone scare me away from coming home where I was born," Brann said.

components can be a very appealing part of a country look, none are requirements.

There are many offbeat ways to decorate with country accessories. When Rosalynn Carter was our first lady, I used country thread spools as candlesticks to freshen the White House decor. I'm also a big fan of pierced pine chests - they have such flair!

If you hope to create a country bedroom that is chic, you might begin by covering over your chairrail with a black-and-white striped paper. Make sure it's a soft black and white design, nothing that resembles and old jail-house uniform. Above the chairrail and beneath the crown molding install a border with a country swan stencil. Cover a brass and black lacquer bed with white sheets and ruffled throw cushions of a black and white check. Then skirt the bed with a black and white striped fabric. Accessorize your walls with English oil paintings or prints framed in black and gold. Against one of your walls place a pine armoire. The knob of the armoire can be accessorized with a white and black tassel. Finally, skirt a round end table in black and place a brass lamp on top of it.

haired sheep.

Dr. Stefan Wildeus, coordinator of the symposium said the St. Croix white hair sheep is a popular animal for use by researchers and private livestock farmers because of the sheep's ability to withstand stress and disease, its high tolerance for warm and humid climates, and because it is bigger than other breeds of haired sheep.

Lawaetz praised the St. Croix farmers and the V.I. agricultural experiment station for its continued successes in its research and pioneering in the area of livestock development.

in this community are perpetuated against locals, as in any other jurisdiction. For tourists to expect not to be faced with the same type of transgressions on St. Croix is unrealistic. If Welcott or Kash had gone to New York, Denver or Wichita, Kansas, the criminal element also exists. We feel it is unfair for Welcott's or Kash's companions to judge the island on one negative incident, and discount the assistance of the many locals during their stay.

The grave situation with Carambola, the ideological dependence upon the precarious tourism industry, and the increase in local crime should indicate that other forms of industry should be sought.

It is imperative for our survival that we the people of the Virgin Islands begin to explore investments which will allow for a twelve month economy as opposed to any form of "seasonal" economy.

Buffalonians. (One of the things I like about Buffalo is that the name for people from there makes them sound important enough to belong to something that requires a club tie.) All Buffalonians are dancing in the streets — even though about half of them now live in Broward County, Florida, which is actually closer to the Miami franchise. Buffalo chicken wings, the Buffalo national dish, are being eaten with abandon. So are beef on weck sandwiches, the Buffalo national dish before Buffalo chicken wings. People in North Dakota are cheering. I am wearing my Buffalo tie.

congressional hearings are open to all media; but neither cameras nor scribblers are allowed into a committee chairman's office to expose his private wheelings and dealings.

Traditionally, the courts have been open to print reporters but uneasy about both still and TV cameras. Beginning in 1976, 45 state legislatures have allowed either experimental or permanent television coverage of state court criminal trials, but only under certain widely varying circumstances. Florida, for instance, will soon bring to you live in color the rape trial of Sen. Edward Kennedy's nephew William Smith.

But the federal court system has been totally closed to cameras. In July, a handful of federal courts will begin a three-year experiment to test limited TV coverage of civil cases. But no federal court allows criminal trials to be covered by cameras, or even considering it. The Supreme Court does not let cameras past the threshold.

It is getting the cart before the horse to demand that the worst penalty the criminal judicial process can levy be paraded before millions of viewers who have not had similar universal exposure to the process itself.

Standing alone, out of context, the taking of a life is an immoral deed. But an execution is not an isolated nor a hasty act. It is the result of a terrible crime foe which the accused has been duly convicted. In all the cases thus far, murder is always involved.

Is is society's ultimate retribution and protection against the evil within.

Perhaps TV cameras in the gas chambers would help people make up their minds about the legitimacy of the death penalty. But they cannot make a wise decision until cameras first help them make up their minds whether the law had proved the defendant so callous toward the sanctity of other human life that he or she does not deserve to live.

Isn't this a tremendous example for fathers today!

Our God is a loving, gentle, tender, forgiving Father. It is often difficult to admit our mistakes. When we have this record of forgiveness in our hearts, it becomes much easier to confess our broken fellowship, because we know that He is faithful and just to forgive us (I John 1:9).

no less than a half a can of cold pork and beans. I could tell by the look that she gave me I was putting in an order she never intended to fill. Remember when we used to eat like that? Mmmmm. Good!!

I am not just sure how I should address this letter. I was by our place the last time I went North to Michigan. The big tree is gone. Someone else is living in our old house. There on Sable St. Where your house used to be across the street there is now only the vacant lot, with more memories for us than grass growing there. The house, I was told, has been long since moved out west to town. I went looking for it, but I guess it was remodeled so much I just didn't recognized it any more.

I know I want to mail this because I want you to know that I have been thinking about you and those good times we used to have together. Most of all though, I guess I miss you myself. The corny jokes we used to share. Like, "Why did the farmer kick his cow off the top of the barn? Because he wanted to watch the Jersey Bounce." I am afraid this generation wouldn't know the Jersey Bounce was a dance.

I think I will address it 825 Stable St., Alpena, Michigan, right across the street from where our old house still stands. That seems right to me, because that is where you always were.

When I walked across the vacant lot a few years ago and stood where you used to park your bike, against the house, I thought I heard you call to me, "I'll be right out." You were answering my call to you in my thoughts. I remember I smiled to myself as I thought of hearing you again across those many years.

Yes. I think I will do that and I will put a note in the corner, "Please forward to where necessary." If I don't hear from you for a while I will know that this letter has not reached you as yet, or else you have just not gotten around to answering. I will be waiting to hear from you.

Your boyhood friend.
Willie.

We've been waiting a long time for the first production of Another Caribbean Theatre Troupe (with a name like that, you've got to expect something a little out of the ordinary). They'll take the stage this coming Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at St. Croix by the Sea, former home of the Caribbean Community Theatre. St. C has been waiting for another caribbean theatre troupe to come along. If you get there early you can wait for the show to start at 8. Get real existential, get there in the afternoon to wait for this premiere performance of "Waiting for Godot". It will have an all-female cast of Helen Sax, Bonita Repp and Patti Grisar, so we'll probably have to wait even longer than usual.

Seriously though, now that I'm finished playing with words, expect a polished performance, directed by Bob Grisar, from an experienced cast.

TIPS ON TRIPS

The 1000 Islands: Fun and Safety

One of the most enjoyable vacation spots on earth is also one of the safest and easiest to reach—it's right on America's northern border.

Clustered in the waters of the St. Lawrence River between New York State and Ontario, Canada, the 1000 Islands—actually, more than 1,800 islands—are a uniquely beautiful resort region. There are luxury hotels, motels, housekeeping cottages, campsites—any kind of accommodation for a day, a month or a season's stay, reports the 1000 Islands International Council, which represents southwestern Ontario and Jefferson County, NY.

The centerpiece of the region is the world-famous 1000 Islands Bridge, the best link between Ontario and New York State and within a day's driving distance from nearly 100 million people in the United States and Canada. Completed in 1938, the scenic bridge crosses several islands and affords a breathtaking view of 200 more. There are seven miles between the foot of the U.S. bridge to the foot of the Canadian bridge, with five spans between, painted a patina green to blend with the scenic background—a thing of beauty and a masterpiece of engineering.

There's much to see and do for every family member in the 1000 Islands. Fine fishing and boating abound—you can even spend your vacation on a houseboat! A "must" for every visitor is a sightseeing cruise on the St. Lawrence, weaving in and out among the maze of scenic islands. Some 45 provincial and state parks offer wonderful camping facilities. Skydeck Tower on Hill Island, Ontario, boasts a spectacular 25-mile view. Historic forts from the Revolutionary era and fascinating museums abound, including the Antique Boat Museum with its classic wooden boats.

Among the most famous turn-of the-century millionaire's mansions that dot these islands is lovely Boldt Castle, built by the late George Boldt for his beloved wife Louise.

Besides easy access by car, the 1000 Islands can be reached by bus or plane. Getting there is half the fun for boat owners as well, via inland waterways into Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River. For free brochures that can tell you more, see your travel agent or write: 1000 Islands International Council, Box 400, Alexandria Bay, NY 13607. You may also call toll-free 800-8-ISLAND.

Red Sox win 7-4

BOSTON (AP) - Roger Clemens settled down after a bench-clearing brawl on the mound in the second inning for his 11th victory as the Boston Red Sox rallied for four runs in the seventh to beat the Detroit Tigers 7-4 Saturday.

Clemens (11-5) gave up 11 hits, including consecutive home runs by Pete Incaviglia and Rob Deer setting up the pushing and shoving that buried Boston's All-Star right-hander in a big pileup.

Clemens struck out nine and walked two in eight innings before giving way to Jeff Reardon, who worked the ninth for his 21st save.

Incaviglia and Deer joined Oakland's Jose Canseco and Dave Kingman as the only batters to hit consecutive homers off Clemens as they hiked Detroit's major league-leading total to 101 in 80 games. Clemens entered the game having allowed three homers this season.

After Deer's 16th homer into the screen in left-center, Clemens hit John Shelby in the back with an 0-1 pitch. Shelby, bat in hand, charged the mound and was tackled from behind by catcher John Marzano as both dugouts emptied.

"After the home runs, Shelby hit the first pitch to him foul to left," Clemens said. "It was a fastball three or four pitches outside that he went out and got. Then I came inside with a fastball. I thought he was going to get out of the way, but it hit him in the back. The next thing I knew he was on his way to the mound with the bat in his hand."

After bodies were untangled from the pileup, order was restored without any apparent punches thrown. Shelby was ejected. -Yankees 13, Orioles 5

NEW YORK (AP) - Matt Nokes hit two homers and drove in six runs as New York Yankees to beat Baltimore for its seventh win in eight games.

Baltimore led 5-3 in the sixth inning when Nokes hit a two-run homer off starter Ben McDonald. Steve Sax, who had four of New York's 13 hits, capped the three-run inning with an RBI-single off reliever Todd Frohwirth (2-2).

Tribe boss out

CLEVELAND (AP) - The Cleveland Indians, baseball's worst team, fired manager John McNamara and replaced him with first-base coach Mike Hargrove on Saturday.

The announcement was made during a news conference at Cleveland Stadium.

McNamara, 59, was in the second year of a two-year contract with the Indians, the sixth major-league team he has managed. Only McNamara, Jimmy Dykes and Dick Williams have managed that many major-league teams since 1900.

McNamara was the sixth major-league manager to be fired this season. The others were Buck Rodgers of Montreal, Don Zimmer of Chicago, Nick Leyva of Philadelphia, John Wathan of Kansas City and Frank Robinson of Baltimore.

At 25-52, the Indians have the worst record in the majors, and lost eight of their last nine games under McNamara. Since he took over at the start of last season, they've gone 102-137.

Cleveland has won only five games since June 3.

Hargrove is the Indians' fifth manager in five years.

"John McNamara is not a scapegoat," team president Hank Peters said. "He's not totally to blame for what has happened here. If there was a shortage of talent on this ballclub in the minds of any of you, that responsibility is on my shoulders and the shoulders of management.

Golfers getting ready!

St. Croix golfers are getting ready to tee-off July 21 at the 3rd Annual Women's Coalition Golf Tournament at Carambola.

"We are grateful to the St. Croix Design Centre for sponsoring this successful event a third year in a row. Specially since this year also commemorates the Coalition's 10th anniversary," said WCSC Director Mary Mingus.

The 18-hole scramble will have a shotgun start at 12:30 p.m. and will be followed by a barbecue and an awards presentation.

Making this event more challenging will be a "putting contest" at 11:30 a.m., ladies' and men's Closest-to-Pin prizes donated by AT&T, and a Hole-in-One prize consisting of a 1991 Path Finder from Tropical Nissan.

"Registration is progressing well," Chairperson Anne Williams said, "but since space is limited we encourage all interested players to sign up before it is too late."

Tournament proceeds will benefit the Women's Coalition. Founded in 1981, the Coalition is a non-profit organization dedicated to ending violence against women and children.

Graf wins at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Gabriela Sabatini had beaten Steffi Graf five straight times - twice indoors, twice on hard courts and once on clay.

But the U.S. Open champion couldn't keep the streak going on the grass at Wimbledon as Graf prevailed 6-4, 3-6, 8-6 Saturday on Centre Court.

The lead swung back and forth, with six breaks in the dramatic final set. Sabatini served twice for the match, at 5-4 and 6-5, but couldn't convert.

The lightning forehand return of serve that flashed past Sabatini gave Graf her third Wimbledon title and left the Argentinian still searching for her first.

Reaching her first Wimbledon final was an accomplishment, but Sabatini feels there is a lot more to come.

"I think I have a very good chance to win this tournament," she said. "Probably I'm going to have to work a little more on the serve."

Sabatini was solid at the baseline but won points on only 56 percent of her first serves.

Whenever she got in position to serve for the match, she never was able to push the advantage through as she frequently came under pressure from Graf's booming returns.

HBO special looks at baseball's 'Golden Age'

Collector's-item footage is featured

By Steve Paschal

Once there was a time when baseball was a game.

Before the days when multimillion-dollar player contracts and massive exposure were made possible by the emergence of television as a social phenomenon, the game of baseball and the men who played it captured the American imagination. While America stumbled through a major Depression and into the second global war in two decades, players like Dizzy Dean, Lou Gehrig and Ted Williams kept the American spirit alive simply by chasing a ball between two chalk lines. The time has come to be called "The Golden Age of Baseball."

Thanks to the discovery of more than 40 hours of film footage, including never-before-seen color footage of Babe Ruth and Jackie Robinson as well as Gehrig and Williams, HBO and Black Canyon productions have recaptured that time in the tribute special When It Was a Game, debuting Monday, July 8, on HBO.

The documentary takes fans back to the days when the Braves were in Boston, the A's were in Philadelphia and most games were played during the day on grass fields. It visits now-legendary ballparks like Ebbets Field, the Polo Grounds and Comiskey Park and offers highlights of the 1938 World Series between the New York Yankees and Chicago Cubs, played before the ivy-covered walls of Wrigley Field.

More than 40 Hall of Famers are represented in this look at our national pastime. Producers found the footage in the basements, attics and trunks of fans, former players, coaches and equipment managers. Actors James Earl Jones, Jason Robards and Roy Scheider contribute readings from historic baseball lore.

The show offers historical perspective on the game, beginning with the hard-nosed, Depression-era play of the St. Louis Cardinals' Gas House Gang, led by Dean, Pepper Martin and Leo Durocher. It recalls the days when President Franklin Roosevelt declared baseball so important to American morale that "they shouldn't quit playing just because there's a war on," and goes through the post-War battles between New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox.

However, the documentary spends far too little time chronicling the most important event in the history of American sports: integration. There is some footage of Robinson, Roy Campanella, Willie Mays and Satchel Paige, but there is no film of the old Negro Leagues and only passing reference to the fact that the bold, although long overdue, move by Branch Rickey and the Brooklyn Dodgers in bringing Robinson into the Major Leagues was very unpopular with most players and owners. In fact, the 1951 dismissal of then-baseball commissioner A.B. "Happy" Chandler was prompted at least in part by his decision to override the owners' 15-1 vote against letting Robinson into the game.

These memories, too, belong to the "Golden Age."

HBO presents never-before-seen color footage of baseball's "Golden Age' '30-1950), Monday. When It Was a Game chronicles the legends and legacies of ove .0 Hall of Famers. Batter pictured: Willie Mays.

AIDS themes find expression on the home screen

By Steven Alan McGaw

This week most Public Television stations will be carrying an encore presentation of "Andre's Mother," an acclaimed drama in the American Playhouse series that focuses on lives affected by AIDS. (Also watch for the documentary Living With AIDS, airing the same night.) For comparison, let's look back at the first major TV project to deal with this modern-day plague.

An Early Frost (1985) NBC exhibited a fair amount of courage in bringing this project to fruition six years ago (and courage can be a rare commodity in network land). The script, by Ron Cowen and Daniel Lipman, is literate and moving, free of cliches and maudlin tendencies. Director John Erman cast Aidan Quinn as the central character, a young man who must tell his parents he's both gay and sick. Co-stars Gena Rowlands and Ben Gazzara are marvelous as Quinn's parents, and Sylvia Sidney adds to the show immeasurably as the young man's wise, loving grandmother. D.W. Moffet's character of Quinn's partner (he's not sick) lends to the work's complexity, and actors John Glover and Christopher Bradley find greatness in the film's best scene, a draining depiction of a hospital encounter group. Elegant, moving, An Early Frost is a shining reminder of what television can, but so seldom does, achieve.

MOVIE MARQUEE

'Right Thing,' 'Lightning' heat up summer airwaves

By Amy Schmidt

CBS has caught the latest wave carrying black American film makers to new cinematic shores: The network will telecast Spike Lee's controversial but critically acclaimed Do the Right Thing, Saturday, July 13. Lee, Danny Aiello and Ossie Davis star in the 1990 drama, in which racial tensions soar with the summer heat in a working-class New York neighborhood. Can the film's July airdate be any coincidence, one wonders?

Wall Street meets Hong Kong when NBC rebroadcasts the four-part miniseries Noble House, beginning Sunday, July 7. Pierce Brosnan and Deborah Raffin play key roles in the Far-East saga.

Be sure to catch Fox's Pink Lightning, in which five young women must decide whether to say "yes" or "no" to marriage, motherhood and society in the '60s. The sets and costumes of this funny, yet profound film will tele-transport you to the age of drive-ins, cat-eye glasses and lava lamps. Pink Lightning premieres Monday, July 8.

It's Roger Moore, aka James Bond, to the rescue when a Nazi-bred monster attempts to destroy Silicon Valley's computer-chip industry in A View to a Kill, airing Sunday on ABC. Monday on the network, Lauren Hutton and Perry King play couch potatoes who turn to exercise, nutrition and plastic surgery in an effort to become Perfect People.

Roger Moore, aka James Bond, reaches new heights in A View to a Kill, Sunday on ABC.

ABC's MacGyver (Richard Dean Anderson) searches for the tomb of Alexander the Great, Monday.

AT A GLANCE

SUNDAY: Okay, it's not "snap, crackle and pop," but how about "Pops," as in Evening at Pops, Sunday night on PBS? Tom Cruise is behind the wheel at HBO in Days of Thunder, and there's plenty of "Love" around as play at Wimbledon draws to a close on NBC.

MONDAY: Pink Lightning may sound like an exciting new breakfast drink, but it's really the Fox Network's latest original film. HBO looks at baseball's Golden Age in When It Was a Game.

TUESDAY: Baseball fans will no doubt be riveted to CBS' live airing of the All-Star Game.

WEDNESDAY: Flutist James Galway and pianist Andre Watts lend their talents to opening night of the 25th Annual Mostly Mozart Festival on PBS' Live from Lincoln Center. A&E's Living Dangerously series looks at volcanoes, while evil millionaire Roddy McDowall erupts into violence in Deadly Game, the latest World Premiere telefilm on USA.

THURSDAY: PBS looks at the emerging art form of innovative video in a new 10-part series, New Television.

FRIDAY: PBS debuts a moving documentary, produced by Houston Public Television, titled Living With AIDS. The show profiles several patients, as well as health-care professionals on the frontlines of the battle against the dread disease.

SATURDAY: CBS' Saturday film offering is Spike Lee's controversial, thought-provoking Do the Right Thing, starring Danny Aiello, John Turturro and Lee.

The Chairman's Thoughts

Digital recording is destined to become the preferred method of recording during the nineties. Again, as in traditional analog recording, there are both tape and disc (platter) formats. At the January Winter Consumer Electronics Show, Tandy announced that it would be a manufacturer and marketer of a new digital tape format named Digital Compact Cassette (DCC). This new technology brings "CD" class quality to a tape the same size as existing cassette analog tapes. As a result, in a DCC tape recorder you could also play existing tapes that you own. This compatibility bridge to the past makes DCC a highly desirable format for the future. Initial product development is underway and in about a year you should see DCC decks in the market for $500 to $700. The technology is such that decks, car players and portables will become widely affordable within two or three years thereafter.

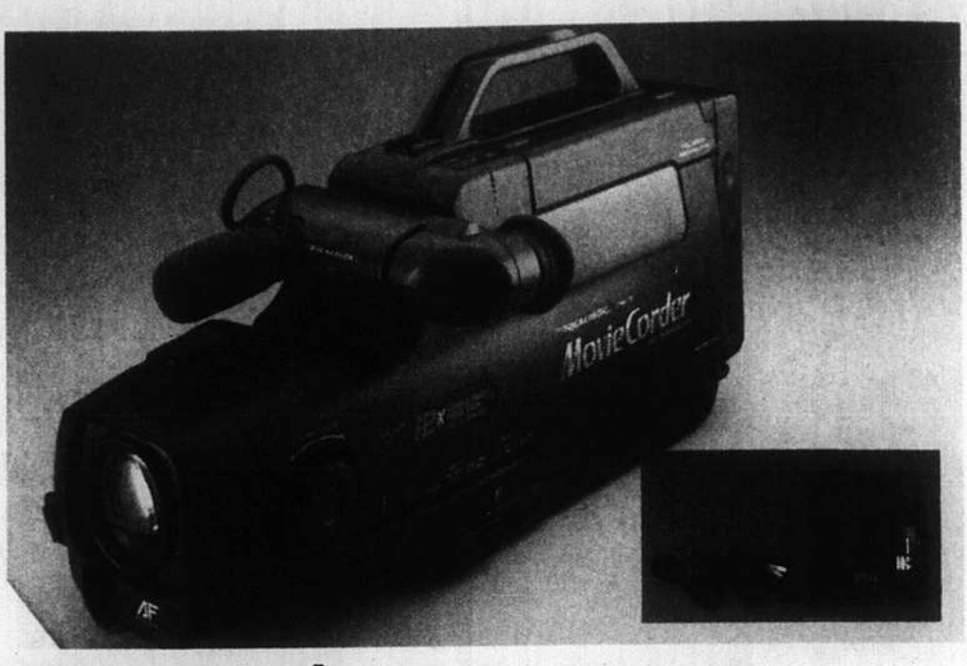

The popularity of DCC will, of course, be dependent on price, but it will also be dependent on the availability of prerecorded cassettes. The music industry has been slow to accept digital recording of any type. Their excuse for depriving everyone of these high-quality recordings is fear of illegal copying. We believe, as do the overwhelming majority of Americans, that you have a right to copy for your own personal use. However, we support the concept that only originals-and not copies-could be copied by a DCC recorder. Unfortunately, some in the music industry are driven by greed, and feel they are entitled to a royalty on all "legal" tapes to compensate them for "illegal" taping. I'm not sure I understand, as there are plenty of laws to protect us - and them- against pirates.

Meanwhile, on the facing page is an instrument with the format providing the finest digital sound available today. Both price and quality make this CD player an excellent value.

Radio Shack, America's Technology Store™, is not only creating new standards in technology for you but also defending your rights.
