Anderson suspect arrested

By CARL D. HOLCOMBE

A small crack cocaine party that swerved out of control contributed to the beating death of Kenneth Anderson at the hands of a Georgia man, according to Territorial Court records.

St. Croix police arrested Patrick B. Krepps, 24, of 15 West Suburb, late Thursday night, on suspicion of second-degree murder in the case.

Krepps is being held on $75,000 bail at the Anna's Hope Detention Center. He appeared in court yesterday - his birthday - for advisement of his rights, but was not released.

Patrick Krepps

His attorney requested a detention hearing which will take place early next week.

According to police reports read in court, Krepps, Anderson and another unidentified man were smoking crack cocaine at the suspect's apartment. The men were acquaintances and had known each other for a while, but police didn't say how long.

Anderson, who was openly gay, proceeded to make sexual advances on Krepps, including trying to undress him. Krepps began throwing punches at Anderson's face and head, knocking him to the floor.

A neighbor reported hearing a man's scream. The other man dressed and fled the scene, court records said.

Initial autopsy reports didn't reveal skull fractures or any other skeletal damage to Anderson, police said. Further tests are being conducted to determine the exact cause of death.

Anderson, 37, of 5F Cotton Valley, had been reported missing Oct. 14 by his parents. But his naked, decaying corpse wasn't found in a yard at 15 West Suburb - on the west end of downtown Christiansted - until Oct. 23.

He had last been sighted at 2 a.m., Oct. 11, leaving the Wreck Bar on Hospital Street, in Christiansted.

Investigators used dental records and fingerprints to identify the body which had badly decomposed.

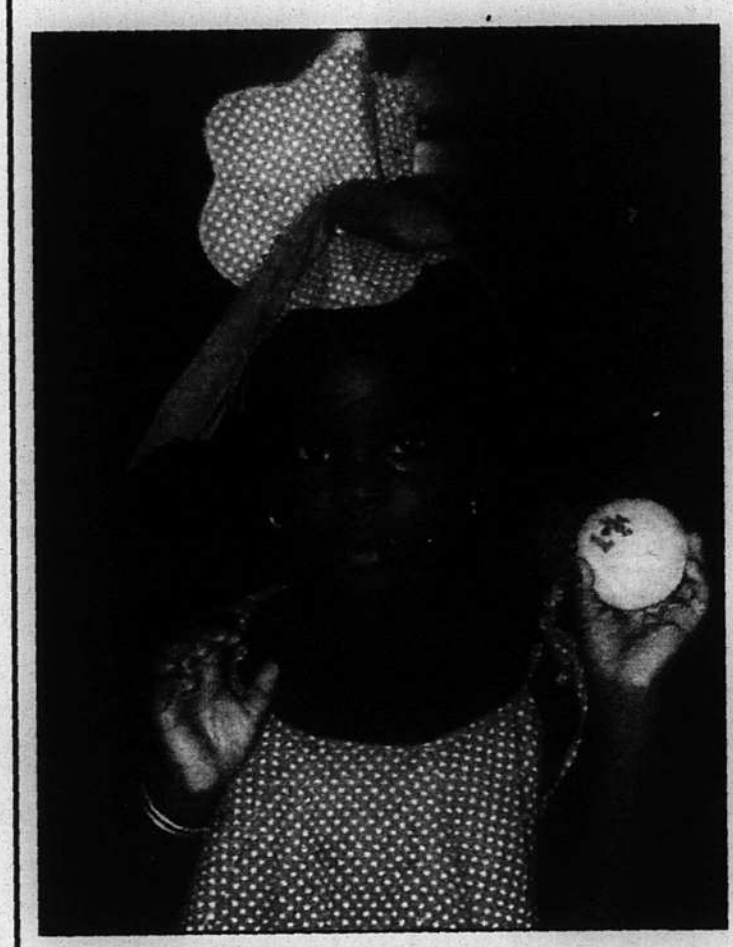

Police began investigating the case as a homicide, but didn't generate solid leads until St. Croix police chief Howard Daniel viewed the yard where the body was found.

"I was shocked," Daniel said. "The body was in a yard, not in the bushes, but in plain view. There was no way the body could've been there that long."

Police didn't say when the body was moved to the yard. After "following leads and knocking on doors," Daniel

Contact with boys started years ago

Police aided by adult who confirms teenagers charges against Jose Santana

By CARL D. HOLCOMBE
AVIS Staff Writer

St. Croix police were aided in the arrest of Jose Santana, on suspicion of child molestation, by an adult who told of similar abuse years ago.

The man corroborated the accounts of 12-year-old and 17-year-old boys who said Santana, principal at the Vocational School at the St. Croix Educational Complex, sexually assaulted them, said Lt. Secundino Roman Cruz.

The minors, who had known Santana for some time, told investigators that multiple incidents of sexual contact began about four years ago, court records said.

The 12-year-old was nine when the incidents allegedly began, and the older boy was 13, court records said.

Santana, 40, of 32 Herman Hill, was arrested Thursday on suspicion of second-degree rape - also called statutory rape - and first-degree unlawful sexual contact.

He appeared in Territorial Court yesterday for advisement of rights and received further bail conditions from Judge Maria Cabret, including no contact with the minors and maintaining weekly contact with his attorney.

He will need to post $75,000 bail to be released from Anna's Hope Detention Facility.

Cabret scheduled Santana for arraignment on Nov. 19.

Santana, who became principal when the education complex was built three years ago, will be placed on administrative leave, said Education Commissioner Liston Davis.

"He may or may not be paid during the administrative leave," Davis said. "There's a federal law that covers felony crimes and I have to research it some more.

"But he won't be here Monday."

Davis said he had yet to receive a copy of the police report, but a conviction will result in Santana's termination.

Statements from the minors indicated Santana fondled the younger boy's genitals and engaged in sodomy with the older boy, court records said. The latest incidents occurred in April or May.

Hundreds show up for Forbes' funeral

By ANDREW WILKINS
AVIS Staff Writer

Even though he was laid to rest yesterday afternoon, Keith Lancelot Forbes called "a legend of sorts" in the St. Croix community will live on through his legacy of service and love.

St. John's Episcopal Church was packed to capacity with St. Croix residents who came to pay their final respects to Forbes. The eulogy of "Forbesy," given by Derek M. Hodge former lieutenant governor, turned the tears of the gathered into laughter with stories of his joyous life.

Forbes died Friday Oct. 24 at the Ashford Presbyterian Hospital from complications due to high blood pressure and diabetes. He was buried in the shadow of St. John's, surrounded by loved ones made in the course of his 77 year life on St. Croix.

"You could not find a more beautiful person," said Enid Henneman, a friend of Forbes.

Forbes was actively involved in the service of the community of St. Croix through his church and as a Freemason. Over his 50 years of membership at St. John's, Forbes served as licensed lay reader and as a member of the vestry.

Forbes lived with the three Mason principals: brotherhood, truth and relief. He served in many leadership roles over the years, and helped found St. Croix's lodge.

Forbes combined his love of fun and his dedication of service to the commu-

No plans to replace locals with imports at Hess oil

By JAMIE BATE
AVIS Staff Writer

Hess oil yesterday denied union claims that the refining giant has plans to replace local workers with off-island labor.

Early last week in Sen. Alicia Hansen's Veterans and Labor Affairs Committee, Lloyd Daley, president of Local 8248 United Steelworkers of America, claimed Hess Oil Virgin Islands Corp. was planning on eliminating local subcontractors. His remarks followed on the heels of approximately 200 layoffs at Hovic.

Daley said the subcontractors are to be replaced by the Raytheon Corporation. He said Raytheon has operated at Hovic for approximately a year and has "not one local person on the company's payroll."

Daley said he had been "reliably informed" that Raytheon will be awarded a contract to do all the maintenance work at the refinery.

"Based on the present hiring practices of (Raytheon), our local workers will be getting the shaft again and catching hell, whenever this occurs," he said.

Hovic's Vice President of Human Resources Alex A. Moorhead, "categorically denied" Daley's claims. Moorhead said several subcontractors hired workers months ago for projects that are now near completion. As a result, he said 90 workers with C&C Construction and Maintenance and V.I. Industrial Maintenance Corp. were laid off.

An additional 140 workers were released by IMC and St. Croix Basic after 1997 overhaul projects were finished, Moorhead said.

"None of these reductions are being made to replace local workers with imported workers," he said.

Laid-off workers will have an opportunity to be reemployed early next year when Hovic begins its 1998 overhaul projects, Moorhead said. He added that currently there are 1,200 contracted workers employed at the refinery.

As for Raytheon, Moorhead said Hovic is "exploring options" with its current subcontractors, "as well as other...contractors, to reduce costs by increasing productivity of local workers with new techniques, training and better supervision."

Bill of Rights for students and staff

By ANGELA BORCHERT
AVIS Staff Writer

A Bill of Rights issued by the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) declared how all students are entitled to safe schools, and all teachers are entitled to respect.

Burnie Bond, a St. Croix native who now serves as the assistant director of educational issues for the national AFT, addressed those rights yesterday before a small gathering of St. Croix Federation of Teachers members.

"We need to continue to push for fair and explicit discipline codes and to demand the principals enforce them," Bond said. "Nobody can be expected to learn or to teach in an atmosphere of chaos and confusion."

The system can be reformed, according to Bond, who outlined realistic ways to do it.

"First we have to adopt rigorous standards that are clear to parents, teachers and students," she said. "Every teacher has the right to know up front what their students were taught last year and at what level. They need to know what they're expected to teach students that year and what students need to be able to do by the end of the year."

Another tactic Bond suggested was to catch struggling students early, which could greatly reduce academic failure.

"We need good intervention systems that can help students catch up before they fall so far behind that you don't know what to do with them," Bond said. "For students who are chronically violent and disruptive, we need good alternative placements that will provide them with the help and counseling they'll need without jeopardizing their own education and safety."

For any improvements to work, students must be willing participants.

"The best standards, the best curriculum, the best of everything mean nothing unless students are serious about school," said Bond. "Right now few of them are because they don't think that school counts. How students behave, how they perform in class and out of class has to matter to them."

True educational reform "will require a lot of hard work from you," Bond told the union members. "For those who tell you that this is too much to ask or that there is no more money to be had, I say the future of these islands probably depends on making these changes if government leaders are really serious about the responsibility to children and to future generations, to producing an educated citizenry, a healthy economy and stable society."

In the face of opposition, the educators were encouraged to find people willing to support their cause.

"All this union asks is give our members the tools they need to do their jobs," Bond said. "I would urge you to work with the elected leaders here. If the government leaders won't give you the tools, organize and find some who will."

Fifth person arrested in Diaz's murder

By STEVE BULLOCK
AVIS Staff Writer

St. Croix police arrested a fifth suspect yesterday in the fatal beating of Maximo Diaz , 58, of the Ralph DeChabert Housing Community two weeks ago.

Glen Edwards, 24, of the Ralph DeChabert Community was taken into custody yesterday morning and charged with first-degree murder.

Bail for Edwards was set at $500,000 and he was remanded at the Anna's Hope Detention Center. He appeared before a Territorial Court Judge yesterday at 4 p.m. for an advise of rights hearing.

Meanwhile, Acting Police Chief Howard Daniel said that the three minors arrested would most likely be tried as adults, pending a petition to the Attorney General's office.

"The petition to have the minors cited as adults is based on a recent Virgin Islands law that allows minors 14 years and older to be tried as adults for the commission of violent crimes," said Daniel.

The petition for the minors, two of whom are only 14, would most likely be made next week, said the acting police chief.

All three, who are being held at the St. Croix Youth Rehabilitation Center (YRC), appeared before a Territorial Court Judge on Wednesday for their advise of rights hearing.

Hugo Greenage, 27, the fourth person, linked to the laying of Diaz, was arrested on Thursday.

Following the arrest of Edwards yesterday, Daniel said that the investigation into Diaz's murder is continuing and that more arrests may be made.

"For now, though no other suspects are being sought by the police," said Daniel.

Because of the sensitivity of the case, Cruz declined to say what schools the boys attend. But neither attends the Vocational School.

Multiple counts may be involved and Cruz said police are continuing to investigate allegations against Santana. The youths, meanwhile, are undergoing counseling.

Santana is the second high-level official at the school to be arrested this year. Laughton Pemberton was convicted in August in U.S. District Court of possessing and manufacturing marijuana.

Schools were closed yesterday as teachers and administrators attended a professional development conference at the educational complex.

Education officials had received complaints about Santana and even a letter of inquiry from a Virgin Islands senator, Davis said, prompting their own investigation.

Information was then supplied to St. Croix police.

Santana's arrest followed questioning Thursday at Patrick Sweeney Headquarters. He didn't answer most questions, police said.

The incidents with the man who came forward, police said, occurred more than three years ago, beyond the statute of limitations for sexual assault charges.

So far no one else has stepped forward with similar stories, Cruz said.

Police said Santana, who is married but has no children of his own, didn't have a prior record of convictions on molestation charges.

Cruz said an investigation began by specially trained detectives Sept. 20, after parents of the boys complained to the Department of Human Services about Santana.

The minors had known Santana for some time, he said.

said, investigators interviewed Krepps.

Despite witness statements that Krepps was seen cleaning blood from the apartment, investigators found blood on a bed, walls and floors. Tests to identify the source will be conducted.

Blood was also discovered in common areas shared by other apartment building residents, police said.

Krepps has worked several jobs since arriving from Georgia.

He was fired Monday from his job at Florida Welding West Indies Steel Co., in Boetzberg, said a manager there, who described him as a bad employee who was often late.

"He said he had spent all Sunday night at the police station," the man said.

He had worked there about three weeks and had previously been working on a roofing project at Coakley Bay condominiums, the manager said.

Krepps arrived on St. Croix six to eight months ago with a group of friends, the manager said. But he had been recently hanging out in Gallows Bay seeking employment.

Police described the relationship between Krepps and Anderson as non-intimate, but with "occasional hellos."

"There was no conflict that we know of," said Lt. Secundino Roman Cruz.

First-degree murder is a premeditated act, while second-degree murder isn't.

Anderson worked as a sales executive at WSVI-TV, and had previously reviewed movies for broadcast. He also worked at the St. Croix Avis as a reporter.

Friends described Anderson as highly intelligent and possessing a wildly humorous streak. But he could just as often become verbally abusive, annoying and confrontational.

Friends also said Anderson had been beaten several times while trying to pick up straight men.

nity in the founding of the Gentlemen of Jones, the group which puts Christmas decorations on the lamposts on Christiansted streets. The group was founded in Jonesy's bar, a local hang-out where many "fun-loving schemes and community service projects were hatched," Hodge said.

Through his business and community service endeavors, Forbes developed a reputation as an outstanding citizen of St. Croix.

At the time of his death, he was president of the board for Brodhurst Printery, Inc., the company that publishes the St. Croix AVIS. Before this, Forbes spent 27 years as the deputy in charge of the St. Croix Division of District Court and owned the Peppermint Parlor restaurant in the 1970s and early 80s.

Union sponsors teacher development

By ANGELA BORCHERT
AVIS Staff Writer

Cars crammed the Educational Complex parking lot yesterday for a professional development day sponsored by the St. Croix Federation of Teachers. But by the afternoon only a fraction remained.

The morning's general session featured remarks by Education Commissioner Liston Davis, who said "the governor is working and trying to do his best in identifying funds" to pay teachers' retroactive wages.

"Teachers undoubtedly should be paid on a level second to none," said Sen. Vargrave Richards, a former St. Croix public school teacher. "We are still working diligently to put union workers on step."

The contract for members of the St. Croix Federation of Teachers was last negotiated in 1995. The members' collective bargaining agreement is currently extended on a day-to-day basis, according to Gail Harris-Perez, who led high-powered workshops on "Do you know your union contract?"

Harris-Perez told participants their attendance proved their dedication to improving their job performance. She noted that the union contract requires that teachers have students "in front of your face" for 180 instructional days.

"This is not one of the 180 days," said Harris-Perez. "You are here for professional development. It is not a day to report to your principal."

In one session, Harris-Perez began by clarifying the difference between management and teachers' union membership.

"Your principal is management," she said. "Your principal can't do a thing for you. He can't make you an assistant principal. He can't give you a pay raise. The principal has no power as far as your paycheck is concerned.

"Your union contract makes your principals uncomfortable," said Harris-Perez, holding up a copy of the contract handbook. "This is to make life easier for you. There is a difference in the way your principal will treat you if you know your rights. If you don't know your contract, they will take advantage of you and it's not their fault. It's your fault."

Copies of the union contract are available at the St. Croix AFT headquarters in Christiansted.

Harris-Perez said all building reps should let fellow union members know when they're messing up, but on a one-to-one basis, then they should present a united front to the management.

All St. Croix public schools were closed yesterday so teachers and support staff could attend union's annual Quest (Quality Educational Standards for Teachers). The day was filled with workshops and festivities.

On sale in the main corridor were lots of children's books, and classics by Shakespeare, Hemingway, Fitzgerald, Hawthorne, Frost and Maya Angelou.

Throughout the afternoon, Bully and the Kafooners played their lively music while the Masqueraders sang and danced.

Classrooms were packed for sessions on teamwork and teacher collaboration. Not many took an interest in family planning, though lots of valuable information were available on preventing teen pregnancy and STDs.

Dr. Sarah Mahurt told paraprofessionals how to climb the ladder of success by pursuing higher education at the University of the Virgin Islands.

Oneida Granger offered a workshop on "Inclusion: Welcoming Special Education Students into Regular Classrooms."

A media specialist said the Quest offered a lot of "good-to-know stuff" but did not focus on professional development.

A vocational education teacher felt the event was "all right," but described it as "the same old thing" as in previous years. "We didn't get any answers," he said. "What about supplies?"

Molasses pier construction begins

By JAMIE BATE
AVIS Staff Writer

New pier, more molasses, more exported rum, mo' money: That was the mantra government officials and executives of the Virgin Islands Rum Industries Limited — aka Cruzan Rum — were repeating Thursday.

The day started at St. Croix's Krause Lagoon where Gov. Roy Schneider flipped a switch and drove the first pile for the government's new $8 million molasses pier and bulk cargo facility.

The price of the pier will be split between the V.I. Public Finance Authority's $3.2 million and the federal government.

The day ended at the Cruzan Rum refinery where an array of dignitaries gathered to celebrate the million-dollar renovation of the 147-year-old Diamond Great House — and sample Cruzan's wears.

The pier will play a crucial role by bringing in larger quantities of molasses into St. Croix. That, in turn, means more rum production and sales. Most important, however, is the return of tens of millions of dollars in rum excise taxes to the V.I. treasury. Those funds are in turn used to fund capital improvement projects.

"This investment is a wise one," Schneider said. "We invest $3 million and receive in return approximately $50 million a year. In addition we are hoping to generate an additional $20 million from the operation of the molasses pier for other purposes."

"For 30 years we've been trying to get this accomplished," Donald C. Nelthropp Sr, president of V.I Rum Industries, said about the pier construction. "This is the first serious move we've seen..."

Kenneth Pincourt Jr, chief executive officer of Todhunter International, the parent company of VIRI, said since his firm purchased Cruzan four years ago, it has invested $5 million into the business. Also at that time, the territory was receiving $34 million in returned rum excise taxes from the federal government. Last year $54 million came back, he said.

"We're going to see that turned into $60 million, $65 million, $70 million over the next five to 10 years," Pincourt said.

In order for the government to keep rum revenues flowing, Pincourt said Schneider has been protecting the industry. Schneider acknowledged that, and said the administration has prepared its battle to take to Congress if returns are lessened.

The governor said he will negotiate with investors from Asia to run the St. Croix container port as a transshipment facility.

Standing on the porch of the renovated great house, Lt. Gov. Kenneth Mapp recalled his high school days when he would stop by the rum refinery to see how it was operated.

He said the rum industry, compared to oil refining, is a clean endeavor with a $50 million revenue stream. Because of that and the generations of families employed at Cruzan, it shouldn't have to return every five years to the Industrial Development Committee "begging" for benefits.

"Stop sending them back to the IDC every five years," Mapp said, urging that a long-term plan be developed. "(Cruzan's) success is our success. Their expansion is our benefit."

Mapp added that even though Puerto Rico-based Bacardi Rum owns 70 to 80 percent of the market, "Bacardi can't compare to Cruzan Rum."

In 1920, Peter Christian, the father of Ann Abramson, built a second story and roof on the Diamond Great House. The roof construction was completed without using a single nail. Restoration began two years ago because termites, not years of hurricanes, had taken their toll.

As Nelthropp told the crowd yesterday about the history of the great house, he recounted Christian's words about the construction of the building.

"All the rest will blow to France," Nelthropp recounted Christian saying some 77 years ago, "before this one budges."

His predictions came true, Nelthropp said.

The restored building will be the new home of Cruzan Rum.

Drugged school girl recovers

AVIS Staff Writer

St. Croix police are continuing their investigations into a drugging that left a 15-year-old school girl hospitalized on Tuesday, suffering from shock, trauma and other related injuries.

The girl, a student at the Elena Christian Junior High School, became ill after at least three students reportedly forced a substance into her mouth which triggered hallucinating-like behavior.

Acting Police Chief Howard Daniel told the AVIS yesterday that the VIPD's Criminal Investigation Bureau has requested a lab analysis of tests done by the Juan F. Luis Hospital to help their investigations.

The incident, said Daniel is very serious, and follows a less serious one last week at the Central High School.

Police sources close to the investigation have expressed disappointment with some educators who are apparently attempting to play down the seriousness of the incident or to even dispute the circumstances surrounding it. Meanwhile, the girl continues to recuperate at the JFL Hospital. Family members confirmed yesterday that the drugging has left the girl unable to walk and read.

WICO set to market St. Croix for 1998-99 cruise season

By JAMIE BATE
AVIS Staff Writer

Gov. Roy Schneider and the top executives of the West Indian Company Limited and the V.I. Port Authority met with St. Croix business leaders Friday to discuss marketing of the Frederiksted Pier to cruise lines.

Schneider said WICO will begin marketing the pier beginning with the 1998-99 season. In order for the pier plan to be successful, however, four requirements need to be met, said Edward Thomas, president and CEO of WICO.

- Have land-based tour options
- Ground transportation
- Increase shopping
- Involvement of hoteliers

Gordon Finch, executive director of the Port Authority, has discussed a VIPA board resolution with members of the Florida-Caribbean Cruise Association, according to a recent WICO statement. The resolution would allow cruise ships to dock in Frederiksted without paying port fees if they call on St. Croix after stopping in St. Thomas.

At Friday's meeting, the governor announced a $10 million bond issue which will "turn Frederiksted into a showcase of what a West Indian Danish Town looked like in its glory days," according to a Government House statement.

The plan is to make Frederiksted itself a tourist attraction, Schneider said, making it a must-stop for cruise ships.

According to the FCCA, cruise ship arrivals have increased steadily since 1994. Some 34,000 ships visited in 1994, 111,500 in 1995 — the year ships were diverted from St. Thomas because of Hurricane Marilyn and 220,120 in 1996.

D. Hamilton Jackson honored by Sen. Vargrave Richards

On the eve of D. Hamilton Jackson Day, Senate Vice President Vargrave Richards, reflected on the accomplishments of the trailblazer who is an integral part of Virgin Islands history.

"David Hamilton Jackson was a renaissance man. While many revered leaders are admired for excelling in one career, the late publisher, judge and labor leader worked diligently, during the turn of the century, for freedom on behalf of all Virgin Islanders," said the senator.

"On this special day it is important for each of us to reflect on the result of his dedication to the community. This man who died 51 years ago was instrumental in securing many of the rights we enjoy today. A great philosopher once said, "We are the hero of own story". In the Virgin Islands, there are many great heroes who are responsible for the socio-cultural and economic development of this community. David Hamilton Jackson is one of those heroes and I salute him today," concluded Richards.

Sen. Burke seeks barber and beautician hearing

St. Croix senator Carol M. Burke, the sponsor of Bill No. 22-0123 which amends tittle 27, chapter 17, Virgin Islands code, regarding barbers, beauticians and manicurists would like to inform the general public that she has written to the chair of the senate's committee on Economic Development, Agriculture and Consumer Protection requesting that the bill be removed from this Monday's agenda. Senator Burke is asking that two public hearings be conducted in each district.

The Senator stated, "The bill as drafted, still needs the input of the V.I. Barbers and Beauticians Association on each island, as well as the barbers and beauticians board of the department of Licensing and Consumer Affairs. Burke further added, "if the bill passes, it will affect the way the board regulates the industry and issue licenses. Additionally, it will also set standards for cosmetology schools and requirements for instructors; increase professionalism in the cosmetology industry; focus on general improvement of those involved in beauty culture and also improve the board's efficiency.

Considering how important these issues are, Burke stressed the importance of getting input from consumers, operators and those certified in this industry.

The public will be informed when new hearing dates are set.

Solar Roofs Initiative

Frederiksted, U.S. Virgin Islands— On October 29, 1997, the Department of Energy (DOE) held a national satellite broadcast detailing the President's Million Solar Roofs Initiative. The goal of the initiative is to place one million solar systems on the rooftops of federal, private and industrial buildings by the year 2010, saving as much energy as five to ten power plants burning fossil fuels, the equivalent of 850,000 cars. It will also reduce energy consumption in new buildings by 50 percent and that of existing buildings by 20 percent. Although no funds have been allocated specifically for this initiative, the DOE will help forge partnership between public and private entities that will make these potential savings a reality.

Currently, the U.S. building sector spends $220 billion on energy consumption every year. This accounts for two-thirds of all electricity used in the U.S. and one-third of all greenhouse gases emitted into the air. These numbers poignantly illustrate the urgent need to reduce the level of harmful emissions that are deteriorating the environment at an alarming rate.

While the initiative will reduce harmful emissions, it will also support a growing solar industry in the United States. Presently, 44 percent of solar systems sold are made in the United States. In the next five years, this could translate into $1.5 billion for the U.S. solar industry. Not only will this initiative support a lucrative industry, it will also create 70,000 direct and indirect jobs over the thirteen year project period.

Suspect named in St. Vincent's slaying

By DUGGIE JOSEPH

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent (AP) — A man identified by South African police as a suspect in the death of a South African woman last year has been arrested on unrelated charges, police said Friday.

Dalton Keil, a 21-year-old laborer, was arrested late Thursday by police on theft and assault charges unrelated to the tourist's murder, police said.

Keil was not charged in the Nov. 2, 1996, stabbing death of Lorraine Heath. A police officer in charge of the Heath investigation wasn't immediately available for comment Friday.

Mrs. Heath's death gained international attention when her husband, Allan Heath, said he was held by St. Vincent authorities as a suspect in his wife's murder until he paid $25,000 to attorneys and was allowed to leave.

Citing his claims, attorneys for James and Penny Fletcher, a West Virginia couple recently cleared of murder charges in St. Vincent, said they also were bribery targets by a corrupt official. St. Vincent's government denied the charges.

Heath was never formally charged with his wife's murder. He mounted a campaign, often through the Internet, urging people not to vacation in St. Vincent and the Grenadines.

Two South African police investigators who spent three weeks in St. Vincent investigating Lorraine Heath's death said they found no evidence to support Heath's allegations.

Senior Superintendent Todd Samaroo and Superintendent Allan Alford also identified two people — one of them Dalton Keil — they believed to be involved in Lorraine Heath's death.

Allan Heath said he and his wife were attacked on their yacht by two men wielding cutlasses. Mrs. Heath, 35, was stabbed to death. Heath, then 37, suffered cuts on his hands.

Elderly people to be evacuated in Montserrat

ST. JOHN'S, Montserrat (AP) — An airliner fitted with medical equipment and staffed by medical personnel will be used next week to evacuate 69 elderly residents to Britain.

The evacuees are the latest to take advantage of the voluntary relocation plan offered by the British government to residents of Montserrat who want to escape their Caribbean island, most of which has been made uninhabitable by the Soufriere Hills volcano.

More than 4,000 people remaining on the island have signed up for voluntary relocation, but only 1,795 have actually left the island under the plan, which offers aid in relocating to Britain or another Caribbean island, said Graham Carrington, health field manager for the British Aid Management Office.

Most of the 11,000 residents on Montserrat when the volcano became active in July, 1995, have since left.

Major League players offer support to arrested scout

SAN PEDRO DE MACORIS, Dominican Republic (AP) — A day after the San Francisco Giants announced they were cutting all ties with former scout Luis Rosa, a group of Major League players vowed Friday to help Rosa fight sex abuse charges against him.

Texas Rangers outfielder Juan Gonzalez traveled to San Pedro de Macoris to visit Rosa in jail. The former scout faces charges that he coerced more than a dozen young Dominican players to have sex with him. The players also accused him of robbing them of pay and kicking them off the Giants farm team if they protested.

Rosa has denied the charges and went from his home in Puerto Rico to the Dominican Republic to turn himself in and face the charges.

Gonzalez, the American League MVP in 1996, said Friday that he and several other Puerto Rican players had formed a committee to help Rosa, who faces penalties of up to 10 years in prison and a $36,000 fine.

"It's not true that we are going to leave him there alone," said Gonzalez, citing the many Puerto Rican players Rosa has helped make the big leagues.

Gonzalez, who was signed by Rosa in May, 1986, for the Rangers, said the other players on the committee were Sandy and Roberto Alomar, Benito Santiago, Rey Sanchez and Ivan Rodriguez.

Elections Commission sets filing deadline

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — The 24 political parties planning to contest the Dec. 12 presidential and parlimentary elections must submit their lists of candidates, party symbols and other information by Wednesday, the Elections Commission announced Friday.

Commission officials expect that up to half of the 24 political parties will not meet the minimum requirements for appearing on the ballot.

Parties must submit a minimum of 53 candidates for the 65-seat assembly and 12 candidates for the various regional governments in Guyana, a former British colony on the northeast coast of South America.

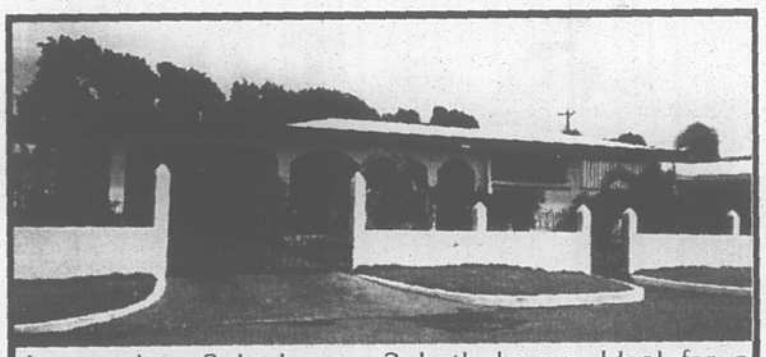

In the most recent elections, in 1992, 11 parties met the requirements for appearing on the ballot.

Head of tourism cleared of shooting

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Charges of firing a gun in a public place were dropped Friday against a former Minister of Tourism who remains a member of parliament.

Cheers erupted from supporters outside the courtroom when Resident Magistrate Rose-Marie Irving dropped the charges against John Junor, a 51-year-old lawyer who was Minister of Tourism from 1992 until he resigned in April this year, two weeks after the barroom altercation.

Garfield Collier had accused Junor of slapping him and then fetching a pistol from his car.

The IRS is a law unto itself

An individual is considered innocent until proven guilty in the American judicial system. But, justice takes a different route for the Internal Revenue Service. Individuals targeted for audits bear the burden of proving their tax returns are in conformance with laws and regulations.

At last, this is going to change. The White House has joined forces with Congress to shift the burden of proof to the tax collecting agency. The White House about-face came less than a month after it opposed suggestions for IRS reform from a bipartisan congressional commission.

Clearly, President Clinton read the handwriting on the wall.

People don't want to have to prove their innocent of wrongdoing when audited by the IRS, they want the IRS to be required to prove they have done something illegal, if the IRS suspects anything from the audit. And, in those instances where the agency is ultimately proven wrong, taxpayers want the agency to pick up legal costs. This would seem obvious — but, unfortunately, this isn't how the system has worked.

Competition is healthy

The Justice Department's move ... against software giant Microsoft is well-timed and appropriate. The outcome could ultimately affect the price and quality of most computer software.

Now, it's up to an impartial third party, a federal district court, to determine whether the Justice Department is right in alleging that Microsoft is abusing its power by trying to extend the virtual monopoly it already possesses. ...

Justice's action is aimed directly at the heart of Microsoft's marketing strategy for industry supremacy. These days, 95 percent of all personal computers sold have Microsoft's Windows 95, essential software that controls storage, retrieval and other key functions. When Microsoft began inserting its own browser in Windows 95, purchasers of new computers had difficulty in using other, perhaps better, browsers.

Competition is healthy for all. It fosters lower prices, allows consumers to pick the best products and permits entrepreneurs to participate in the marketplace. The courts must determine whether Microsoft has gone too far. Many think it already has.

Schneider taking V.I. to the cleaners

Dear editor:

Is it simply me, or does the rest of the residents of the U.S.V.I. realize we are being played? I am only a 17-year-old recent high school graduate, but I know when I'm being made a fool of. I think it's pretty obvious that Schneider is robbing us blind, and smiling at us while he does it.

He's wasting government money every chance he can. What, in all honesty, has he done that is beneficial for us? Earlier this year, he literally closed down the government for carnival. I understand that it is supposedly a time of "fun and frolic" as he himself says, but isn't the state of our economy more important?

We lost millions of dollars because of this. St. Croix has carnival in December-January, so why did we also have the days off? The immediate benefits of leisure time and fun may be enjoyable, but what about the long term effects? Were two and a half days of leisure worth the loss of millions?

And what of his excessive spending of our money? The lavish trips at our expense. Many of us never even get to see the lobby of the hotels he stays in. The majority of us struggle from paycheck to paycheck to pay rent and provide food for our families.

Every year people pay taxes, and where does the money go? Does anyone see how it is helping our islands? In fact, is it even here? Or has our government spent it elsewhere and not told us?

Schneider doesn't care what happens to us. But we should. And we should stop him from destroying us. Many of our lives are based here, in these islands. Is Schneider's? Mapp's? I doubt it.

They are robbing us blind, and after we are barren, they'll move on. All of their assets aren't based here. How much do you want to bet that Schneider has a stockbroker on Wall Street? How many of us do? And how many of us are going to be fooled next year and vote for him?

Has anyone besides me realized that most of Schneider's main people have turned against him, resigned, retired, or plan to run against him. Yeah, I know Mapp hasn't admitted it yet, but he'll run against Schneider. If your own people turn against you, something must be wrong.

To all the teenagers my age, the one's who will be voting in the next elections. Think about what Schneider has done to help us. Do you recall how this past summer he had money to go to the olympics, but had no books, nurse, or band equipment for our school? Does anyone have any idea how much money was wasted--yes wasted--on that ridiculous trip? the students of the complex didn't stand for being second in importance. The day they walked out those gates, they earned my respect. And they made schneider do his job. If high school students can, so can the people who put him in office.

How many voters know that we can impeach Schneider? If we put him there, we can most definitely put him out. I can go for pages stating my case. I've heard others complaining about the effects of Schneider reign. Complaining accomplishes nothing, action does.

By the 1998 election, I will be a registered voter. I will not vote for Schneider. And if he chooses to run again, I will actively campaign against him.

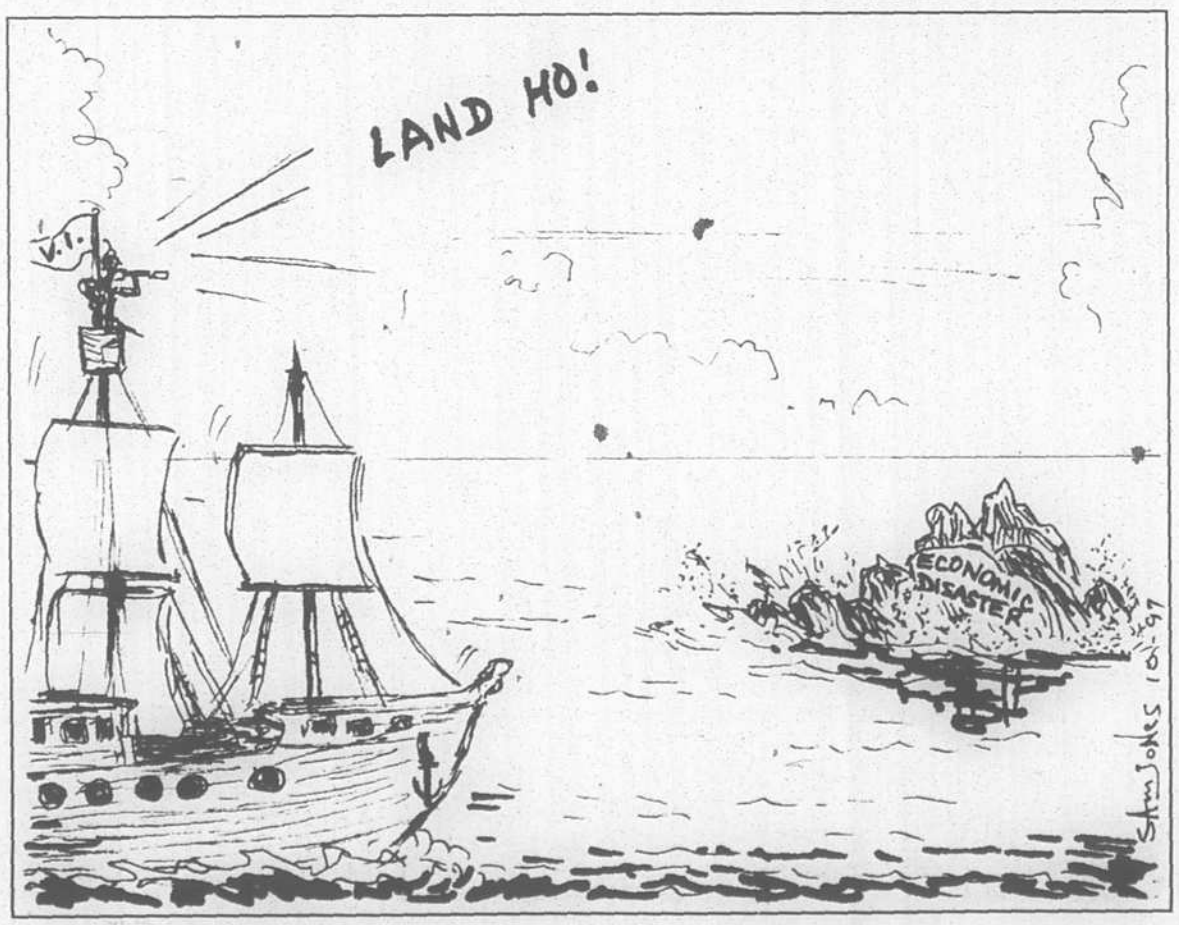

Before I say good-bye, I will say beware. Because of the illusions that Schneider will perform during this year between now and the next election. He will try to make you forget, or disregard the previous three years. Do not forget. First impressions are important. What was his first impression--his first term-- to the Virgin Islands. Look around, what has changed for the better?

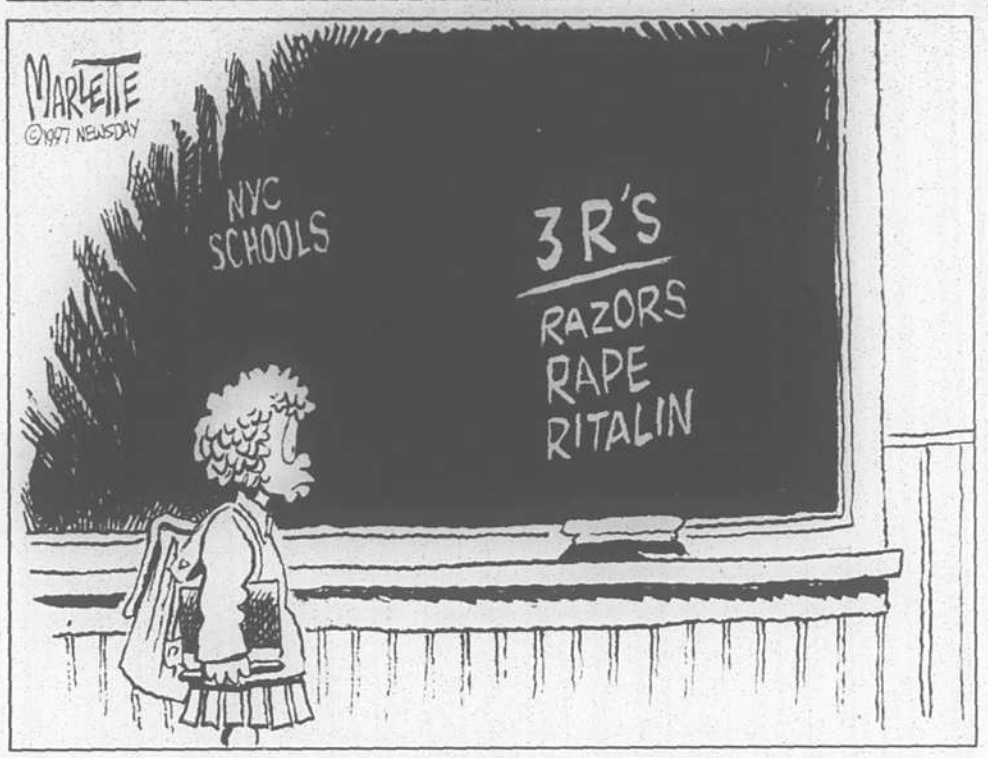

Yours truly,
Yasmeen Yasin

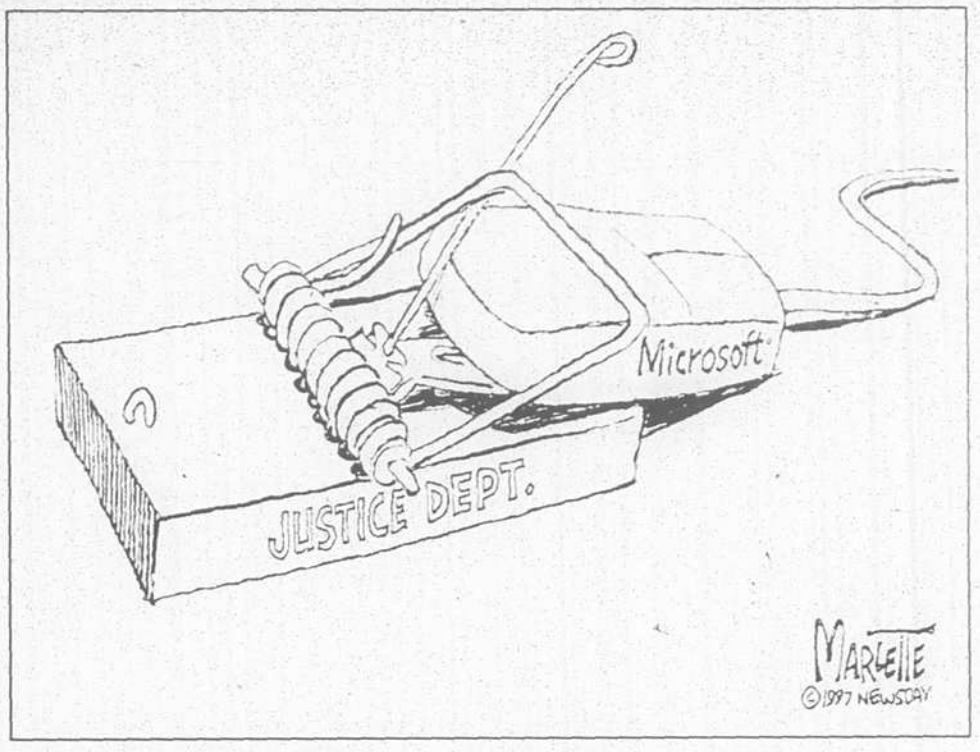

D. Hamilton Jackson

By Richard A. Schrader. Sr

All praise to the memory
Of David Hamilton Jackson.
Dedicated warrior of the poor.
Sword nor club he never used.
The word and the pen
Were his only weapons
His people's rights to defend.
Determined and unafraid
The champion took a stand.
"Sugar barons!" he said,
"You are killing my people
In sugar cane fields
And sucking the sweet.
The two cents you pay them
Can hardly buy food to eat."
A vibrant orator, par excellence,
His words rolled like thunder
In the ears of massa.
Firebrand, trouble maker
They swear he was
And even threatened his life.
But they couldn't hurt the Crucian.
They only strengthened his will to fight on.
Let us today lift high
This apple of the Virgin Isles.
Cherish his ideals, keep a free mind
And as one people, forge ahead.
But most of all, let us always remember
That the name David Hamilton Jackson signifies
Much more than bull and bread.

El Nino doesn't cause all weather events

BY CHARLEY REESE

Well, there's no doubt about it now. If it rains or doesn't rain, if it snows or doesn't snow, if the winds blow or don't blow, if the weather is warm or if the weather is cold, if the cat meows or the cows moo, journalists will blame them all on El Nino.

Give journalists, especially television journalists, a simplistic concept with a short, punchy name and they will go crazy. It's a modern absurdity. It's a good thing television wasn't invented earlier or human progress would have probably stopped at the Stone Age.

The warming of a band of water in the Pacific, which is called El Nino, is apparently a natural phenomenon that occurs on a more or less cyclical basis and very likely has been occurring for millenniums, if not eons.

The only difference is, with the technology to measure the ocean temperature, we know about it now and before we didn't. What has changed is not the weather, but our understanding of it.

Learning why we have the weather we've always had over the centuries isn't quite as an exciting story as implying that some new and strange phenomenon—who knows, perhaps linked to politically correct global warming—is about to unleash its new fury on poor innocent people.

What nonsense.

It was laughable to watch ABC's Ted Koppel, with his basset hound expression and oh-so-serious and grave voice, questioning climatologists about El Nino as if he were interviewing God on the impending doom of mankind. It seemed to me that one of his guests was having a hard time keeping a straight face as he patiently tried to explain that not every weather happening can be blamed on El Nino.

California's problems are not weather phenomena. The weather pattern in California probably hasn't changed in several hundred years. What has changed is development. The normal fires during the normal dry season are now disasters because people have built homes in the brush and they burn down. The normal occasional rainstorms are now disasters because so much of California is under roof and asphalt that the land can't absorb the runoff fast enough. The normal earthquakes are disasters because instead of rocks and trees falling, high-rises, bridges and overpasses fall.

But the variable in all of this has not been the earth or its atmosphere or its weather, but man's presence and man's slowly growing comprehension of what's going on around him in the natural world.

The earth has been warming up and cooling off long before humans were numerous enough to have any effect on it. Official weather measurements only go back to about the 1880s. Nobody knows why the earth has had these cyclical warming and cooling periods.

One of the ancient Greeks wrote that at one time a man could walk across North Africa from the Atlantic to the Indian Ocean and never leave the shade of a tree. Now you can walk across that area and never find the shade of a tree.

Obviously something changed to create the Sahara Desert, but whatever it was, humans had nothing to do it.

Unless you are a pilot, I would advise you not to worry about the weather. There's nothing you can do to change it. It will either rain or not rain, sleet or not sleet, snow or not snow. The temperature will be comfortable or uncomfortable.

The one thing the Army taught me was that whatever you have to do outdoors you can do in the rain, snow or sleet just as well, if not just as comfortably, as you can in mild, sunny weather.

Advances in human understanding of climatology and other fields are interesting enough without embellishment, oversimplification and false melodrama.

From consumer racism to cash register activism

Viewpoint

BY JULIANNE MALVEAUX

WASHINGTON—What is "consumer racism"?

Ask the African-American woman who was subjected to a body-cavity search at a national lingerie chain because a salesperson not only suspected she was shoplifting but that she had carefully secreted undergarments where a perfunctory search would not reveal them.

Or ask those African Americans who have been so egregiously rebuffed in their attempts to rent cars from the company that "tries harder" that the state of Pennsylvania is suing Avis for discrimination.

Or ask Alonzo Jackson, the young African-American man who was forced to take his shin off at an Eddie Bauer store, then told to go home and find the receipt for it before the shirt was returned to him.

Washington, D.C., attorney Donald Temple didn't coin the term "consumer racism," but he has had much success in prosecuting the outlandish treatment of African-American consumers whose attempts to spend their money are too often foiled by security guards and store managers who let their own racism and stereotyping dictate the tone of their behavior.

Just last week Temple won an $850,000 settlement for Alonzo Jackson, with the $500,000 punitive damage award representing the largest such claim to come from a jury in the U.S. District Court in the Southern District of Maryland.

To be sure, Temple's victory was not overwhelming. The seven-member jury did not find that Alonzo Jackson's civil rights were violated when he was forced to remove his shirt because an off-duty police officer moonlighting as a security guard suspected him of shoplifting. But since the racially-mixed jury had to reach a unanimous verdict—and since many whites are still in denial about the existence of consumer racism—the failure to find a civil rights violation is not surprising. Temple still has the option of appealing the finding.

Donald Temple pointed out that the Eddie Bauer chain had a net worth of some $228 million in 1996. From that vantage point, a finding of $1 million in damages (another $150,000 was awarded to the two young men who were detained while Alonzo Jackson was questioned) is less than a slap on the wrist—less than one-half of one percent of Eddie Bauer's annual profits. Still, the finding suggests that when customers are treated unfairly they should pursue every legal remedy available to them. When consumers are willing to litigate unfair treatment, they put companies like Eddie Bauer on notice.

The Eddie Bauer company attempted to distance itself from the behavior of its security guard, suggesting that Prince George's County, Maryland, Detective Robert Sheehan acted on his own instead of as an agent of the company. But a careful examination of the testimony of Eddie Bauer employees reveals prevarication if not outright perjury.

Since the Eddie Bauer company acknowledged wrongdoing in its treatment of Alonzo Jackson, why didn't they clean up their mess? Why didn't they try to settle the lawsuit out of court? One might wonder if they thought a jury would agree that their treatment was, somehow, acceptable.

Anybody can make a mistake, but the Eddie Bauer company seems to have compounded its mistakes with willful obfuscation. One month after Alonzo Jackson was mistreated so shamefully, Eddie Bauer's senior management met with a public relations company at its headquarters in Redmond, Washington, to do some "damage control." They offered a public apology, but never apologized individually to Alonzo Jackson and his friends. Then to show their contrition they gave 550 items of winter clothing to homeless shelters.

What was Eddie Bauer President Richard Fersch thinking? That a gesture to homeless shelters was an acceptable substitute for the violation of a young black man's dignity?

This kind of case strikes the racial divide with alarming clarity. Too many African Americans have had the experience of being followed, hassled, or treated with rudeness and discourtesy. Too many security guards have bought into racist stereotypes. African-American customers chafe under intrusive scrutiny, but Detective Sheehan crossed the line from scrutiny to illegality.

Eddie Bauer says it is not company policy to ask people to remove their clothing when they are suspected of shoplifting. Indeed, their employee handbook says a customer should never be accused. Still, there is a gulf between policy and practice, between customer service and consumer racism.

Eddie Bauer received a $1 million slap on the wrist. Customers can transform consumer racism into "cash register activism," though, by signaling their displeasure with Eddie Bauer by withdrawing support from the company that doesn't seem to understand that the color of money is green, and that all customers deserve fair treatment.

Au pair sentenced to life for murder

By ERICA NOONAN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — A teen-age British au pair received the mandatory sentence of life in prison yesterday, a day after a jury decided she had murdered an 8-month-old baby by violently shaking him because he was being fussy. Louise Woodward will be eligible for parole in 15 years.

Judge Hiller Zobel set a hearing for Tuesday to consider defense motions to set aside the verdict, order a new trial and reduce the charge.

Before Zobel pronounced the sentence, the baby's mother, Deborah Eappen, read an emotional statement saying her other son, 2 1/2-year-old Brendan, "cries, and I have no answers."

She said Woodward "didn't seem like a monster, or a child abuser or a murderer." And she said her own faith in life has been shattered: "The unthinkable has happened; now anything can happen."

"I'm not responsible for this death. I did not kill Mattie," the sobbing 19-year-old Woodward told the judge.

Ms. Eappen called Matthew her "sunshine," and spoke of the unforgettable moments of motherhood, such as planning for the future of two boys, and how those plans ended when they had to take their infant off life support, five days after he was hospitalized with brain damage.

"On February 4th, all our hopes and dreams were torn apart," Ms. Eappen said.

The child's father, Sunil Eappen, said his family's lives had been changed forever. Despite his "disdain" for Woodward, he said, he hoped she would find forgiveness.

"I think that Louise has done a brutal thing," Eappen said. "I truly hope that she may someday find the peace of God in her life again."

When the verdict was announced Thursday evening, Woodward wailed "Why?" and buried her face in her hands.

"I didn't do anything!" she cried out as defense attorney Andrew Good embraced her. "Why did they do that to me?"

The parents, both physicians, watched the verdict on television.

One alternate juror denounced the verdict.

"I was wondering if these people were sitting in the same courtroom as I was for the last three weeks," Robert Mangold told WBZ-TV.

The verdict also stunned Woodward's attorneys, who lost a gamble that the jury be allowed to consider murder charges but not a lesser charge of manslaughter. They said they would ask the judge to reject the jury's decision.

As Woodward's wracking sobs pierced the silent courtroom for several minutes, thousands of miles away, there were tears of dismay from friends and supporters in her hometown of Elton, England, where the case garnered gavel-to-gavel coverage.

Behind Woodward in the courtroom, her parents sat without expression after the verdict was announced. Gary Woodward, a carpenter, and his wife, Susan, an employee at an English college, had said their daughter wasn't capable of murder.

"The parents are devastated like we all are," defense attorney Andrew Good said.

Woodward, jailed since her arrest in February, later spent 30 minutes with her parents in an isolation cell — something observers said was unheard of in Massachusetts courts.

"She does believe that God will deliver her. She is coping in a way that sometimes amazes me," defense lawyer Elaine Whitfield-Sharpe said.

It took jurors 27 hours over three days to reach a verdict. Matthew died in the hospital Feb. 9, five days after Woodward called an emergency operator to say he was unconscious.

Woodward's attorneys admitted they had lost an all-or-nothing strategy.

At their request — one that Woodward approved — the judge did not tell the jury they could vote to convict her of manslaughter, which carries a lighter sentence. That left jurors with three choices — convictions on first- or second-degree murder or acquittal.

The defense defended their strategy.

"The fact of the matter is, most people at the time felt we were making the right decision," defense attorney Barry Scheck said.

Another defense lawyer, Harvey Silverglate, said Woodward also turned down several plea-bargain offers because she was confident that she could convey her innocence to a jury.

Prosecutors, however, said evidence that Matthew was a victim of child abuse was clear.

"This case wasn't really a close call before it got into the courtroom," prosecutor Martha Coakley said. "The jury was able to see through the medical evidence that this child had been harmed."

The prosecution's case relied on doctors who treated the baby and testified that medical and autopsy reports showed his injuries were caused by his head being violently shaken and slammed against a hard surface.

Prosecutors contended Woodward was frustrated with the fussy infant and a job that hampered her social life. Police officers also testified that Woodward told them she had been "a little rough" with Matthew, a statement she denied making.

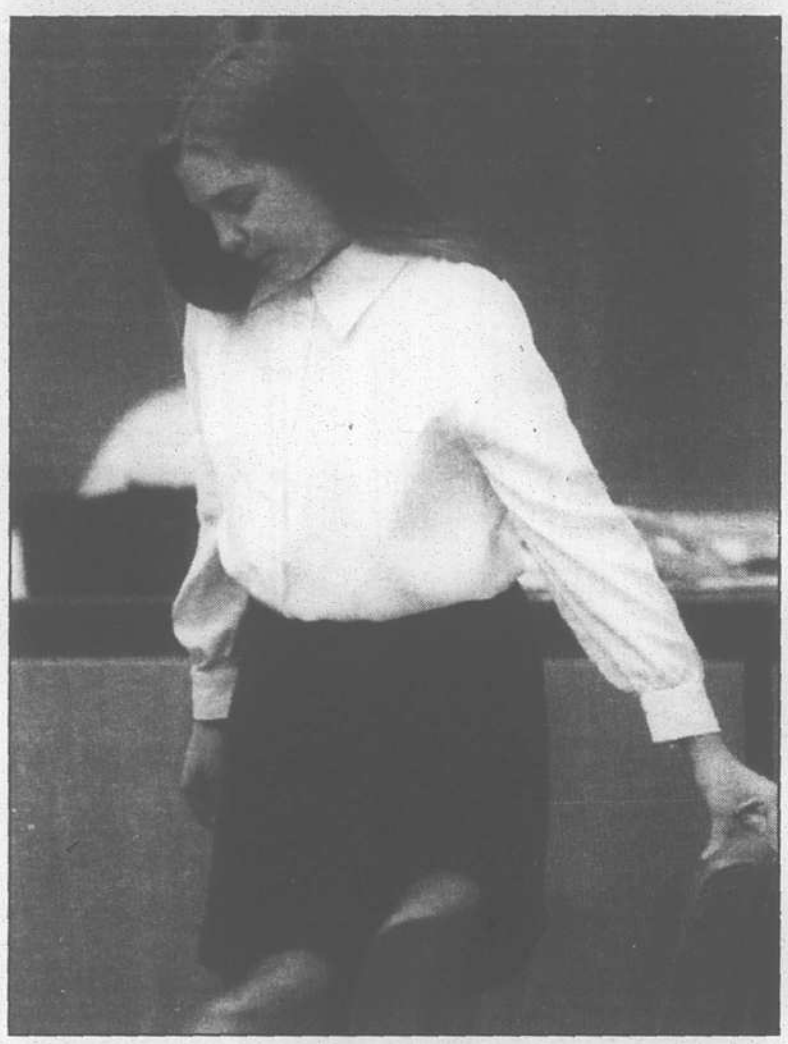

Woodward herself was unflappable during her testimony, denying she did anything to harm Matthew. Defense medical experts testified that Matthew had no external signs of trauma; they said he had a previously undetected head injury that could have been reopened by minor jarring.

In the United States, the case raised questions about child care. Some questioned whether parents should leave their babies in the hands of teen-age strangers, while others criticized the Eappens for working instead of staying home to care for Matthew and his brother.

In Britain, the murder charge was seen by many as a rush to judgment against Woodward. To some in Woodward's hometown, a conviction seemed unfathomable for the young woman who took a year off before college.

"We just can't believe the verdict and now we will carry on fighting for Louise," said the Rev. Ken Davey, vicar of St. James' Anglican church.

Added Kate Hagan, Woodward's best friend in high school: "She could not have done this."

British au pair Louise Woodward leaves the Cambridge, Mass. courtroom after receiving a guilty verdict.

Wife charged with murder following grisly discovery on family ranch

By E.N. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

GLENROCK, Wyo. — When Martin Trusky first disappeared from his family's isolated ranch in central Wyoming, his wife's suggestion to neighbors that he'd run off with another woman seemed reasonable.

Moody with friends, violent toward his wife, jobless and uncomfortable with being alone to the point that friends said he'd keep his kids home from school now and then, Trusky was the kind of guy who just did quirky things.

"It wasn't strange for him to take off and go and do something, whether it be with the family or without the family," said Patti Kambestad, a neighbor and family friend. "It was never a strange thing for him to do."

But now suspicion in this town has shifted toward Trusky's wife, who police say crumbled sleeping tablets into her longtime husband's mashed potatoes one snowy night, shot him with a .22-caliber rifle and stuffed his body behind a barn on their windswept farm.

Wendy Trusky turned 40 in Converse County jail Thursday, charged with first-degree murder and held on $100,000 bail. She has pleaded innocent to the killing, though her lawyer filed court papers emblematic of a battered woman defense; in one filing, he described her and their two young sons as being "systematically and routinely verbally, emotionally and physically abused."

The filing echoes a complaint Mrs. Trusky filed against her husband in June 1995. In it, she says he drove her car through a gate in a fit of rage and that he kicked and choked her and threatened to break her legs on several occasions. She won a 90-day restraining order to keep him away, though he returned three days later and took the whole family to his mother's until the order expired.

After finding Trusky's decomposing body, wrapped in blankets and baling twine, beneath a tire pile, prosecutors are confident they can prove that his wife, 5-foot-4 and 189 pounds, killed her 6-foot-3-inch, 300-pound husband, then dragged his body outside in a snowstorm.

Their strongest piece of evidence appears to be from Mrs. Trusky's own son — 15-year-old Eric. In an affidavit, the boy told investigators that he saw his mother crumble the medication into his father's food. The boy said his mother told him that after the father fell asleep, she shot him.

Eric is charged in juvenile court with conspiracy to commit murder and is undergoing counseling at a children's center. Another son, 12-year-old Jesse, is staying with relatives. The couple also has two older sons.

Friends describe a complex picture of the Truskys, who had been together more than 22 years and lived on a 64-acre subsistence ranch 13 miles from the nearest town — Glenrock, a town of 2,000 mainly populated by workers at the nearby power plant.

Unemployed, he spent a chunk of his time searching junk yards for parts for the variety of old heaps he kept on the ranch. Mrs. Trusky mainly worked as a nurse. Kambestad describes Trusky as "a bear," who was fun, intelligent, interesting and helpful.

"He was a likable person, but it was like a switch. If he was not in a good mood you knew it," she said.

But Kambestad had suspected he was abusing his wife, and eventually Mrs. Trusky came to her neighbor for help. Once, Kambestad took her friend to the hospital for injuries Mrs. Trusky said were caused by her husband.

Kambestad feared him as well.

"Almost all of the animals were starving to death," she said of a period in 1995 after the restraining order. "It was real bad, but I wasn't stepping foot on that property because Marty was pretty angry when he left."

Once they returned, everything seemed fine until Dec. 16. That's the day Trusky disappeared.

When neighbors asked about him, Mrs. Trusky said she suspected he was off having an affair. She told Kambestad she was afraid of her husband coming back, and moved into an apartment in Glenrock with the children.

"I didn't think anything of it at the time," police Lt. Owen Frank said of the family's move. "After she was arrested, it clicked."

Then in March, Trusky's mother called county officials to say she hadn't heard from her son in several months. Police looked for him through the summer, but it was their discussion with Eric in September that led to Mrs. Trusky's arrest.

No trial date has been set. Prosecutors have not said the death penalty will be sought.

Gambling panel selects executive director, sets tentative agenda

By HENRY STERN
Associated Press Writer

HERNDON, Va. — A national gambling study commission that has been criticized for its slow pace agreed yesterday on an executive director, enlisting a former top lobbyist for the United Way.

The National Gambling Impact Study Commission unanimously approved the selection of Nancy Mohr Kennedy, who also held political posts in the Reagan and Bush administrations.

This will be the veteran lobbyist's first involvement with the issue, and she said she is approaching it as a "blank slate."

The nine-member panel, created by Congress to conduct a two-year study into the explosion of legal gambling in America, has been sharply divided since its first meeting in June between anti- and pro-gambling factions.

Chairwoman Kay James' first selection for executive director was rejected for voicing anti-gambling sentiments in the past.

"Where we're going, I have no idea, but at least it's starting to function in some fashion," said Commissioner John Wilhelm.

The first place the commission will go is Atlantic City, N.J., in January.

Among the stops suggested by commissioners and staff were the city's rescue mission, a pawn shop and the Trump Taj Mahal Casino Resort.

Other proposed visits include Mississippi, Connecticut, California, Nevada, Louisiana and the Chicago area. Among the issues to be studied in those visits are Indian casinos, riverboat and dockside gambling, lotteries, parimutuel betting and the social and economic impacts of gambling.

Several commissioners pointed out that the broad scope of the panel's mandate may require Congress to appropriate more than the $4 million put forth so far, and perhaps extend its 1999 deadline.

James said much will depend on the research the commission decides it wants to undertake, a goal the panel hopes to settle soon.

Commissioners debated whether the research should focus on the largest current parts of the gambling industry, or those that show the greatest growth potential such as betting via the Internet.

"We're charged with looking at all gambling in America," said Commissioner Robert Loescher. "I'm troubled that the committee and the staff is so focused on casino gambling."

Since a national commission last studied gambling in 1976, the industry has grown from an estimated $25 billion business to one that generates $500 billion annually and has spread to all but two states.

The panel's new executive director served as a special assistant to President Reagan for legislative affairs. Kennedy was also an assistant secretary in the Education Department.

One killed in school bus accident

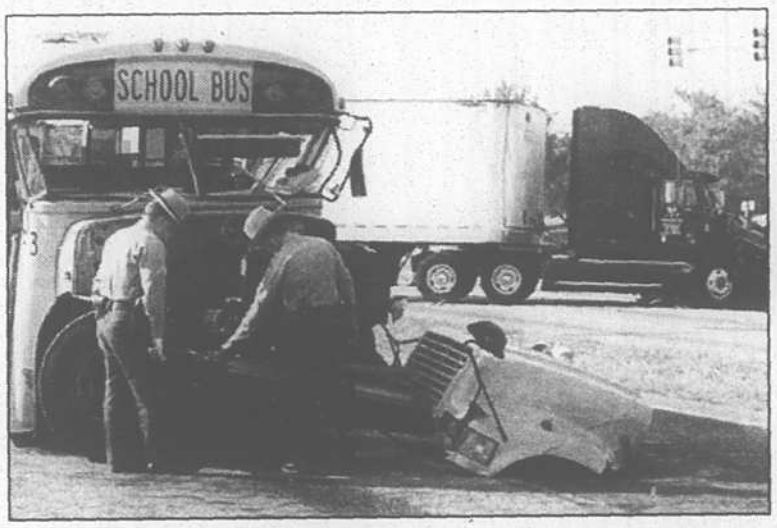

By TOM STUCKEY
Associated Press Writer

EASTON, Md. — A tractor-trailer broadsided a school bus yesterday morning on a fog-shrouded highway, killing the bus driver and sending more than two dozen children to the hospital.

The bus was crossing U.S. 50 about 7:30 a.m. when it was hit on the driver's side, nearly severing the front of the bus.

The bus was carrying 32 students, most heading to elementary schools. Of the 27 taken to hospitals, 10 were admitted, mostly for broken bones.

The truck driver was charged with going too fast for the road conditions. But some parents also blamed the school system for not delaying classes because of the fog.

"They had no business having school on time and I'm not the only one that feels that way," said Bill Sinclair, whose 12-year-old son suffered bumps and bruises.

George Pringle, transportation supervisor for the county schools, said it was clear at 6 a.m. when the decision was made not to delay classes, and the fog rolled in 45 minutes later when it was too late to do anything. Some nearby school district did delay classes.

Bus driver Wardell John Brice Sr., 61, of Easton, died at the scene.

Huey Leon Lamb, 57, a driver for A&B Trucking of Shannon, Miss., was charged with failure to grant the right of way as well as driving too fast for conditions, Police Chief Walter Chase said. Chase did not know how fast the truck was going or if it ran a red light.

"What he told me was that it was zero visibility out there," A&B President Bill Ethridge said. "He's OK, but he's really shaken up about the kids."

Ethridge would not comment on the charges against Lamb, who is from Okolona, Miss.

Advil blamed for kidney failure in $150m suit

By SAMUEL MAULL

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Sosna started using Advil seven years ago to relieve the chronic pain he suffered after he smashed his finger in a door.

Now, he's suing the makers of Advil for $150 million, alleging the painkiller caused his kidneys to fail and forced him to have a transplant.

Sosna, 36, used Advil from 1990 to December 1994, when he was diagnosed with kidney failure, said his lawyer, Henry Simon.

"I wanted people to have a warning that I did not have," Sosna said Thursday in a telephone interview from his home in Great Neck.

In papers filed in court this week, Sosna alleges Advil is an unsafe over-the-counter medication and that its manufacturers have known for years of its toxic properties. The suit says Advil's packaging does not warn consumers that long-term use can cause kidney problems.

The suit accuses Advil's makers of "selling and promoting a dangerous product with deleterious and toxic side effects ... without warning the medical profession and the public at large."

Carole Dornbush, a spokeswoman for Whitehall-Robins Laboratories, which makes Advil, had no comment on the lawsuit.

But speaking generally about Advil, Ms. Dornbush said the pain reliever's label gives very specific directions for low-dose, short-duration use — no more than six tablets a day for 10 straight days.

It was not clear how much of the drug Sosna had taken.

Ms. Dornbush said Advil has an excellent, safe use record and a low incidence of side effects, and any kidney problems associated with its use are almost always reversible. Advil's active ingredient is ibuprofen.

Sosna had transplant surgery at New York University Medical Center in July 1995.

Vietnam's deadly dangers

Land mines and Agent Orange still plague Southeast Asia 20 years after end of conflict

By IAN STEWART
Associated Press Writer

LAM XUAN, Vietnam — Efforts to rid Vietnam's battlefields of countless unexploded bombs and land mines may be unleashing a long dormant enemy — Agent Orange's deadly toxins.

Old bombs, artillery shells and land mines litter the wasteland just south of what was the demilitarized zone during the Vietnam War, killing innocents long after the conflict's end.

Yet the work to locate and destroy the war's leftover ordnance is churning up soil saturated with the American military's war-era herbicide, Agent Orange. Experts are concerned that the ensuing release of poisonous chemicals could produce an environmental and health disaster.

Vietnamese army engineers routinely detonate the bombs and mines they uncover in their campaign to make the land of central Quang Tri province safe again.

"The process of de-mining frees up this soil, destabilizes it, and soil erosion then carries those toxins into the water system," says Donald Price, a graduate research fellow from James Madison University in Virginia. He is in Vietnam to study the long-term environmental consequences of the mine removal.

Agent Orange, used by the U.S. military to clear away the forest canopy its enemies hid beneath during the war, contains a cancer-causing byproduct, dioxin. It has been linked with a growing number of medical ailments in both U.S. war veterans and their Vietnamese counterparts.

Once in the water system, the dioxin may readily pollute the entire food chain, Price warns.

Working through the U.S. Department of Defense-chartered Humanitarian De-mining Information Center, Price is the first scientist to examine the combined effect of chemicals and explosives on Vietnam's ecology.

His findings, while preliminary, point to potentially dangerous repercussions if Vietnam goes headlong into an all-out mine removal campaign.

"You want to do the humanitarian thing and clear the land mines, but with the toxins present in the area you'll do more harm than good," he said.

Along Quang Tri's Highway 9, which bends and winds with the curves of the Cua Viet River, hamlets and villages are scattered throughout one of the most heavily bombed parts of the planet.

The same stretch of road — once dotted with U.S. artillery fire bases — was also doused with Agent Orange.

Dubbed Operation Ranch Hand, U.S. military C-123 cargo planes blanketed the South Vietnamese countryside with Agent Orange. By 1971, the United States had sprayed about 12 million gallons of the defoliant over parts of southern and central Vietnam. The total load included about 375 pounds of dioxin; a mere trace of dioxin can cause cancer.

Vietnam says Agent Orange has poisoned its former troops and is also responsible for countless birth defects in children of war veterans.

Similar findings are apparent among U.S. combat troops exposed to Agent Orange.

Although no definitive link between Agent Orange, birth defects and other illnesses has been established, evidence is mounting.

The U.S.-based Institute of Medicine released a study last year that suggested a strong connection between the herbicide and a serious birth defect called spina bifida. Earlier studies tied exposure to Agent Orange with cases of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, Hodgkin's disease and soft-tissue sarcoma.

Vietnamese studies and independent research by Syracuse University's Dr. Arnold Schecter indicate Quang Tri is tainted with dioxin — often in areas laden with unexploded bombs.

Down Highway 9 near the tiny hamlet of Lam Xuan, young soldiers scour the side of the road looking for bombs.

"In most cases we explode old bombs we find," said army Col. Le Doan Luc. "It's safer than trying to handle the aging and fragile bombs."

One day's work across a 100-yard stretch finds 32 unexploded U.S. 122-mm artillery shells in this area alone.

In Vietnam, at least 5,000 people have been killed by old bombs and land mines since the war ended in 1975.

"I can only say they are everywhere," said Luc, who leads the effort to rid Quang Tri of the remaining millions of unexploded bombs.

Although he agrees with Price's concern for the environment, his pressing interest is more immediate — to make the rice paddies and village roads of his home province safe from explosives.

"We don't have the manpower or the technology to deal with this problem any other way," he said.

For Quang Tri, the options are grim: Clear the land mines and risk a potential environmental crisis — or live, if they can, with an army's arsenal worth of unspent explosives just under foot.

Hillary honors late Irish Catholic peaceworker

By SHAWN POGATCHNIK
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Hillary Rodham Clinton is honoring a Catholic woman who lost 11 members of her extended family to violence in Northern Ireland — and died herself just months after meeting the first lady.

Mrs. Clinton was scheduled to deliver a lecture yesterday at the University of Ulster in suburban north Belfast in memory of Joyce McCartan, whom she met in November 1995.

The first lady once joined McCartan at the Lamplighter, a coffee shop the Belfast woman founded to encourage Protestant and Catholic women to socialize together.

Militants on both sides in Northern Ireland's 28-year-old conflict killed eleven of the woman's relatives. She died of a sudden illness two months after meeting Mrs. Clinton.

In a letter of condolence, Mrs. Clinton wrote, "Joyce's energy and commitment were an inspiration to me and to men and women throughout Northern Ireland, and indeed, throughout the world."

Mrs. Clinton arrived Thursday night in Dublin, the capital of the neighboring Irish Republic, for a gala reception at Dublin Castle. Her visit comes 23 months after she and President Clinton visited both parts of Ireland in the wake of cease-fires by the IRA and pro-British paramilitary groups in the British-ruled north.

The Irish Republican Army abandoned that truce in February 1996 but called another one in July, making it possible for the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party to join other parties in talks on Northern Ireland's future.

Israel pressed to hand over part of West Bank

By KARIN LAUB
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — The United States is pressing Israel to give the Palestinians more of the West Bank and commit to a starting date for a troop pullback, Israeli newspapers reported yesterday.

The United States appears to be siding with the Palestinians, who say the scope of Israeli redeployment in the West Bank must be the key issue in peace talks that begin Monday outside Washington.

"This is the main issue, the substance of these negotiations," Ahmed Qureia, the speaker of the Palestinian parliament, told The Associated Press. "If they will not succeed, it will be a catastrophe."

Meanwhile, the Islamic Militant group Hamas offered yesterday to suspend attacks if Israel frees its members from jail, stops demolishing Palestinian homes and stops confiscating land for expanding Jewish settlements. Hamas attacks have been one of the greatest obstacles to the peace process.

The offer was made in a Hamas leaflet.

Israel wants the Palestinians to shelve demands for a West Bank troop pullback, and in exchange offers to slow Jewish settlement construction in the West Bank and Gaza Strip while the two sides negotiate a permanent peace agreement.

However, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat said yesterday that he would not go to final status talks unless Israel first pulled back its troops as promised.

Such talks would deal with final borders, Jerusalem, the fate of Palestinian refugees and the future of Jewish settlements.

The Yediot Ahronot and Haaretz dailies reported yesterday that U.S. officials would not support Israel's attempt to get out of a pullback. Haaretz said the United States wants Israel to commit to a reasonable starting date for the pullback, with spring floated as an acceptable time.

Under the U.S.-brokered accord, the first phase was to have been in March 1997, followed by a second pullback this fall. However, the first stage was never carried out because the Palestinians angrily rejected Israel's offer of 2 percent of the land.

The Yediot Ahronot said the United States expected Israel to agree to a troop pullback from 10 percent of the West Bank in the second stage.

Israel's Cabinet had decided after two suicide bombings by Islamic militants in Jerusalem this summer that it would not hand any more West Bank land to Palestinian control until Arafat has cracked down on the Hamas and Islamic Jihad groups.

Under a U.S.-backed accord reached with the Palestinians in Jan., Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had committed himself to a three-stage pullback in the West Bank, to be concluded by mid-1998.

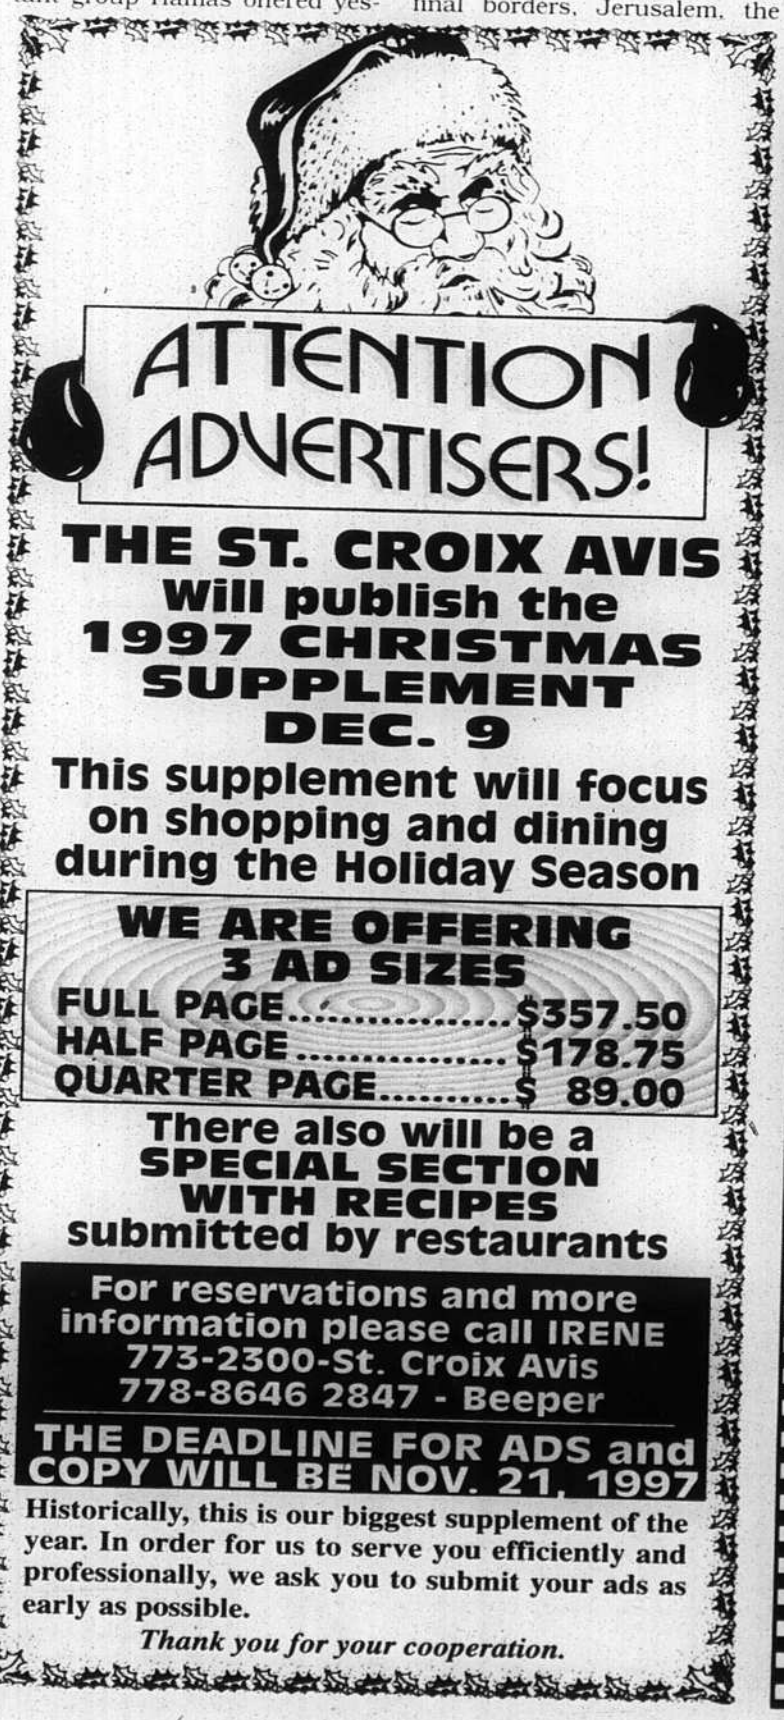

Israel's trade minister, Natan Sharansky, had warned Palestinians that they would gain nothing by refusing to skip the troop redeployment and head into final status negotiations.

"If they insist on a further redeployment, our message is this: no redeployment will take place until they have destroyed the terrorist infrastructure," Sharansky said.

DEAR ABBY

Jimmy Stewart's Ode to Beau Expresses His Gentle Nature

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1997 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago at the request of an elderly woman, you published a touching poem that Jimmy Stewart had read on the Johnny Carson show. In the past few weeks, the media have said much about his various roles in the movies, but I've heard no mention of this poem, although it truly reflects the type of man he was.

Could you please run it again as a tribute to the late Jimmy Stewart?

KATHY LONG, READING, PA.

DEAR KATHY: With pleasure. Jimmy Stewart was loved by many people. The touching poem is titled "Beau" — and here it is:

"Beau" by Jimmy Stewart

He never came to see me when I would call —
Unless I had a tennis ball.
But mostly he didn't come at all.
When he was young, he never learned to heel or sit or stay.
He did things his own way.
Discipline was not his bag.
But when you were with him, things sure didn't drag.

He'd dig up a rosebush to spite me
And when I'd grab him, he'd bite me.
He bit lots of folks from day to day.
The delivery boy was his favorite prey.
The gas man wouldn't read our meter.
He said we owned a real man-eater.
He set the house on fire, but the story is long to tell.
Suffice to say, he survived, and the house survived as well.

On evening walks, and Gloria took him,
He was always first out the door.
The old one and I brought up the rear because our bones were sore.
He'd charge up the street with Mom hanging on —
What a beautiful pair they were!
And if it was still light and the tourists were out,
They created a bit of a stir.

But every once in a while he'd stop in his tracks
With a frown on his face, and look around.
It was just to make sure the old one was there
To follow him where he was bound.
We're early bedders at our house,
I guess the first to retire,
And as I would leave the room,
He'd look at me from his place by the fire.

He knew where the tennis balls were upstairs.
I'd give him one for a while.
He'd push it under the bed with his nose,
And I'd push it out with a smile.
Before very long, he'd tire of the ball
And he would be asleep in his corner in no time at all.
And there were nights when I'd feel him climb upon our bed
And lie between us and I'd pat his head.

There were nights when I'd feel his stare,
And I'd wake up and he'd be sitting there.
I'd reach out to stroke his fur,
And sometimes I'd feel him sigh.
I think I know the reason why.
He'd wake up at night and he would have this fear
Of the dark, of life, of lots of things
And he'd be glad to have me near.

And now he's dead, and there are nights when I think
I feel him climb upon our bed.
And be between us, and I'd pat his head.
And there are nights when I think I feel that stare
And I reach out my hand to stroke his hair
And he's not there.
Oh, how I wish that wasn't so —
I'll always love a dog named Beau.

Hoch takes midway lead at Tour Championship

By RON SIRAK
AP Golf Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Scott Hoch might be short off the tee but he's long on accuracy and long on cash.

Another day of pinpoint iron play gave Hoch a 65 on yesterday to be at 9-under-par 133 for the midway lead of the Tour Championship by one stroke over Jim Furyk and two better than Mark Calcavacchia and David Duval.

Hoch, a rock-solid player with a great short game who made the cut in all 21 tour events he played this year, might be one of the most under-appreciated players in professional golf by fans.

"They like the long hitters," Hoch, who ranks 163rd in driving distance, said. "I played with Duval yesterday and he was four clubs longer than me." Hoch, considered by his peers to be one of the best players in the world from 100 yards in, has won nearly $7.8 million in his career, 10th-best on the career list.

He proved once again at the Champions Golf Club that good scores are made by good play close to the green with a great display of golf when he made four consecutive birdies and five in six holes beginning on No. 8.

"I left it in some good spots where I was going uphill," he said about his approach shots to those greens. "The key was that on the holes I made good reads, I made good putts."

The only blemish on Hoch's round was a bogey on the final hole when he drove into the rough. "I let one shot get away from me a little bit," Hoch said, "and I had a terrible lie in the rough."

Hoch would finish the year with $2,002,988 if he picked up the $720,000 first prize and still not win the money title. The $64,000 last-place check means the worst Tiger Woods could end the year with was $2,033,233. Tom Lehman set the season earnings record last year with $1.7 million.

Woods would break Lehman's record by nearly $1 million if he won here and he made that a possibility yesterday when he moved into contention with a 68 to get to 5-under-par 137, four strokes behind Hoch.

The only two players who could overtake Woods on the money list are Davis Love III, who was at 136, and Justin Leonard, who was at 139.

Walsh and Lara are friends again

By GARY De FREITAS

Reports from Pakistan state that all is well between West Indies skipper, Courtney Walsh and star batsman, Brian Lara.

Walsh told reporters that the difference between himself and Lara has been amended. Lara and Walsh were engaged in a "cold war" battle in Jamaica while the two were leading their respective countries in a Red Stripe Bowl match after Lara openly made comments that he should have been appointed captain of the West Indies team instead of Walsh. This angered the Jamaican skipper that he refused to walk out of the pavilion to spin the toss with Lara.

The rift forced President of the W.I Cricket Board, Pat Rousseau, to intervene and he had separate and joint meetings with the two top cricketers.

Skipper Waklsh said that he was happy that he has no problem with Lara, and he is absolutely under no pressure in Pakistan. He said that he is now ready to take on the three top one day countries in One Day Cricket: Sri Lanka, Australia, and Pakistan.

Sri Lanka is currently the One Day World Champion. West Indies won the first and second World Cup tournaments in 1975 and 1979.

Today the West Indies oppose Sri Lanka. On Monday they will do battle with Pakistan and on Tuesday they will clash with Australia.

Antilles closed the gap to 20-12 after Frank Mullins hauled in a 30 yard pass from Chris Marshall. But Antilles was too late in its bid to overhaul CAHS. Peter Lawrence put CAHS ahead 26-12 on a 35-yard TD run. The game finally ended with the Hurricanes securing 18 points and CAHS 26.

Ultimate Crucian Taekwon Do of St. Croix celebrates win at Junior Olympics

By TERRY MONAGHAN
AVIS Staff Writer

All the training and strict regimen prepared them to be winners. And they didn't fail. They brought home seven medals.

Members of the Ultimate Crucian Taekwon Do School on St. Croix received more than just honors at the Junior Olympics held in Puerto Rico over the weekend.

They got experience and confidence. All that according to the school's sensei Angel "DJ" Garcia, a triple black belt, who has been with the group of 25 students for three years.

"I try and train the kids as hard as I can without over doing it," Garcia said. The kids train four times a week for an hour each session.

"I do it to help build up the kids but I tell them that it is important for them to keep up their grades in school as well."

At the Junior Olympics, which is the largest competition that the school has participated in, they won seven medals.

Another eight medals were won for the Virgin Islands from members of the Frederiksted and Harbor View Taekwon Do schools.

"It was such a great feeling having all of us march in together to represent the Virgin Islands," Garcia said. He added that he was not surprised by the results of his students.

Winning gold medals for kumite, which means sparing or fighting, are: Augustin Encarnacion III, ,13, a green belt; Elizabeth Munoz, 11, a yellow belt; and Ligia Cruz, 13, a yellow belt. Munoz also received a gold medal for kata figures.

Those receiving silver medals for fighting are Luis Daniel Munoz, 13, a green belt; and David Munoz, 11, a yellow belt. Winning a bronze medal in sparing is Norma Brito, 9, a yellow belt.

Along with Garcia the students are instructed by black belts Jose Linares and Clemente Munoz, who keeps the martial arts in the family with three of his children in the school.

"We try and enter as many competitions as we can," Garcia said. "We want to be able to take more kids to the tournaments, but it depends on money and sponsors."

Garcia is still looking to the future when there can be a tournament of St. Croix. "This is all about promoting and bringing business to the Virgin Islands."

Will Cougars fall with leaves?

By The Associated Press

It's November, and the leaves have turned color. Will the Washington State football team take a turn for the worse?

The Cougars (7-0), ranked 10th, go into today's game at 20th-ranked Arizona State (5-2) with a dismal November record of 4-19 since 1989.

"We're not concerned about it; we're only concerned about how we play," said Mike Price, who's been the Cougars coach for all 23 of those November games.

The Cougars, led by the passing of Ryan Leaf, have won their first seven games for the first time since 1930, the last time they went to the Rose Bowl. But they did get a 35-34 overtime scare at home against Arizona last week.

Arizona State, which had a bye last week, beat Southern Cal 35-7 and Stanford 31-14 in its previous two games.

Washington State is winless in five of the last eight Novembers. The Cougars' only winning November in that span was in 1992 when they went 2-1 and finished 9-3 — their best record since they were 9-3 in 1988.

Other games involving the Top 10 have Oklahoma at No. 1 Nebraska, No. 2 Penn State at Northwestern, North Carolina State at No. 3 Florida State, Minnesota at No. 4 Michigan, No. 14 Georgia at No. 6 Florida, Southern Cal at No. 7 Washington, South Carolina at No. 8 Tennessee and No. 9 Ohio State at No. 21 Michigan State.

Games involving other ranked teams are Mississippi State at No. 11 Auburn, No. 12 UCLA at Stanford, No. 13 Kansas State at Texas Tech, No. 18 Purdue at No. 15 Iowa, No. 16 LSU at Kentucky, No. 17 West Virginia at Syracuse, No. 19 Oklahoma State at No. 25 Texas A&M, Miami (Ohio) at No. 22 Toledo, Alabama-Birmingham at No. 23 Virginia Tech, and No. 24 Southern Mississippi at Cincinnati.

The Oklahoma-Nebraska game marks the temporary end to a rivalry that dates back to 1928. Even though the Cornhuskers beat Oklahoma 73-21 last year, the worst loss in Oklahoma (3-5) history, Nebraska is not overlooking its longtime rival.

"It's Oklahoma week," said Aaron Taylor, a guard for Nebraska (7-0). "It's still a big deal around here."

Penn State (6-0) has had a week off to recover from a 16-15 scare by Minnesota and think about the dangers of looking ahead. Northwestern (3-6), coming off a 49-6 battering by Ohio State, faces the Nittany Lions.

North Carolina State (3-4) is banged up, and that's no condition to be for a trip to Tallahassee for a game against Florida State (7-0).

Lloyd Carr, coach at Michigan (7-0), has spent the week reminding his players about what Minnesota (2-6) almost did to Penn State.

Georgia (6-1) goes into a game against Florida with an identical record for the first time in five years. The Georgia loss, however, was to Tennessee, a team Florida manhandled.

Washington (6-1) looks to have too many weapons for Southern Cal (4-3). The Trojans, however, should be able to do better than the 124 yards of total offense on 29 plays they achieved in a 21-10 loss last year.

South Carolina (5-3) will try to shock Tennessee (5-1) with Boo Williams the day after Halloween. Since Williams has taken over at tailback, the Gamecocks have won three straight, scoring at least 35 points a game.

Michigan State (5-2), bidding to snap a two-game losing streak, will count on sophomore running back Sedrick Irvin, the heart of its offense. Ohio State (7-1) will counter with sophomore linebacker Andy Katzenmoyer, the soul of its defense.

Marlins will not pick up options on Conine, Daulton

MIAMI (AP) — The Florida Marlins decided yesterday not to exercise their $5 million option on Darren Daulton or their $3 million option on Jeff Conine.

Daulton, who gets a $500,000 buyout, becomes eligible for free agency. Conine, the last of the original Marlins' starters, becomes eligible for salary arbitration. Florida, however, is expected to either sign Conine before the Dec. 20 deadline to offer contracts to unsigned players or to allow him to become a free agent then.

Conine, 31, is the team's career leader in several offensive categories, including games played (718), hits (737) and RBIs (422). He hit .242 with 17 home runs and 61 RBIs during the regular season. He hit .214 with three RBI in 15 postseason games.

Daulton, 35, was acquired by the Marlins from the Philadelphia Phillies on July 21.

Decision on Johnson not coming soon

Orioles coach under fire for Alomar fine

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — Baltimore Orioles owner Peter Angelos said yesterday that he will take his time deciding whether to bring back manager Davey Johnson for the final year of his three-year contract.

Johnson has led the Orioles to the playoffs in each of his two seasons at the helm. This season, he guided Baltimore to its first AL East title since 1983.

But the manager has come under fire for fining second baseman Roberto Alomar $10,500 and instructing the player to donate the money to a charity that retains Johnson's wife as a fund-raiser.

Asked if he expected to arrive at a decision soon, Angelos told The Associated Press, "No, afraid not. It's sort of a long process in a sense. There's a grievance filed by the player, which relates to the fine and other ingredients in that situation. This has to work itself through in an orderly and proper procedure."

Alomar was fined $10,000 for missing a July exhibition game between the Orioles and their Triple-A farm team. Alomar did not inform Johnson of his plans to skip the game; the second baseman had hoped to join his family in Puerto Rico following the death of his grandmother.

Alomar was also fined $500 for missing a team banquet in April. He went to the Major League Baseball Players Association to protest the fine, which has not been paid.

Now, it's up to Angelos to sort out the situation.
