Drug-free fun draws kids and their families

KC BURGARD

ST. CROIX — Hundreds of children of all ages played games, listened to music and picnicked on the grounds of the Lionel J. Jackson National Guard Armory Saturday.

The children and their parents were there to participate in the Red Ribbon Week concluding activities, co-sponsored by several government agencies.

"This is just a day of drug-free fun for families and everyone else," said Denise Lewis, of the Department of Human Services. The DHS is the lead agency for Red Ribbon activities on St. Croix.

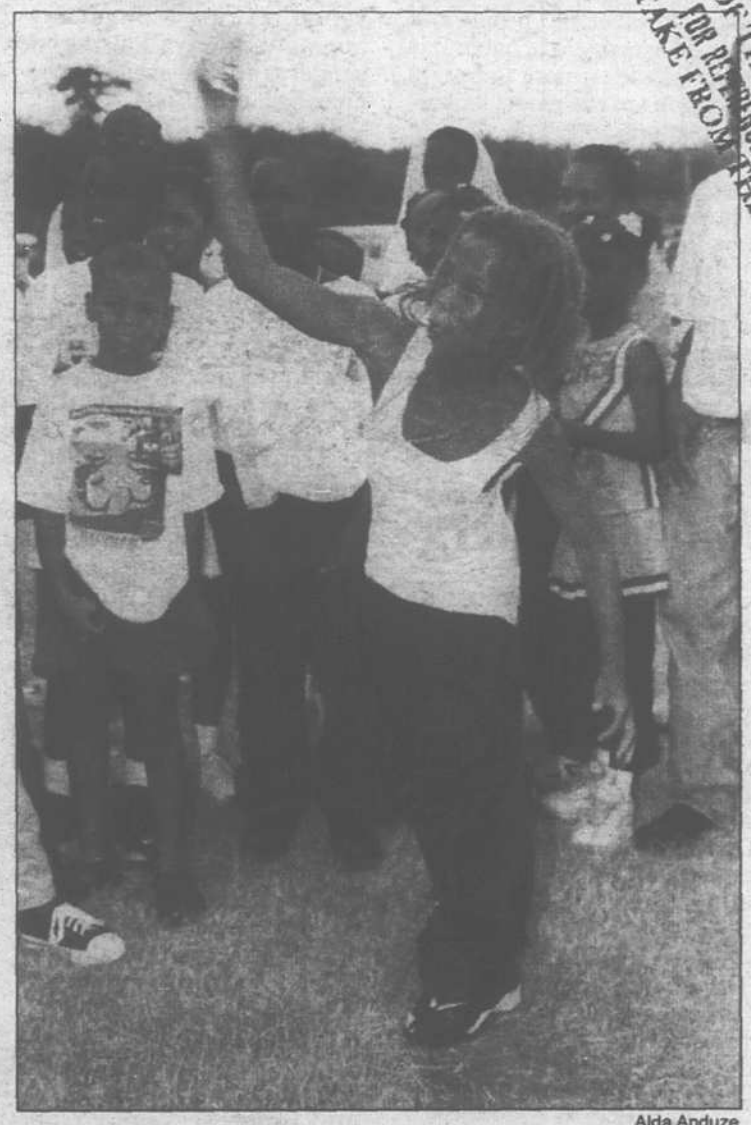

This year, however, the fun day was a collaborative effort between the DHS and the Virgin Islands National Guard, as well as the VI Housing Police, U.S. Customs, the Department of Justice's Weed & Seed program and the D.A.R.E. program, which educates students about drug abuse.

For the VING, the fun day is a new tradition, according to Master Sgt. Glenda Mathurin-Lee, assistant counter-drug coordinator for St. Croix.

"This is our first annual event," Mathurin-Lee said. The day drew a large crowd of revelers because so many groups came together to put it on.

"So often we work in isolation of each other," Mathurin-Lee said. "When we work together, we tend to do something bigger and better for the whole community."

In addition to sack races, spoon races and ring tosses, the kids were entertained by demonstrations from the Sunny Isle Baptist Steel Orchestra, the Eulalie R. Rivera School Steppers and the most popular activity — the dunking booth, donated by the Queen Louise Home for Children.

Jahrique Thomas, 10, throws a softball at the dunking booth where Major Eugene Canegata sits during the Red Ribbon drug-free fun day at the Lionel J. Jackson National Guard Armory on Saturday.

The crowd seemed enthralled by the VIPD's K-9 Unit's reenactment of a traffic stop and drug bust. Sgt. Carlos Rosario, assisted by Officers Heraldo Charles, Juan Cruz and K-9 Officer Cassis, showed the kids how a life of crime can lead to a fateful meeting with a police dog.

Terrence "Positive" Nelson, led members of the King Cobra Tae-Kwon-Do Club through a martial arts demonstration.

"It may seem like violent moves, but it gives you the discipline not to fight," Nelson said of the sport. "It builds self-esteem and develops the mind."

St. Croix Rescue, Isle 95 radio station, the Civil Air Patrol, the Central High School ROTC and the St. Croix Educational Complex Band were also on hand for the day's event.

Red Ribbon Week is dedicated to the memory of a drug enforcement officer who was murdered by drug traffickers in 1985. It was recognized by the U.S. Congress in 1988.

Sen. Golden slams Turnbull's sacking of Michael Bornn

ST. THOMAS — Describing the move as "business as usual" and detrimental to the territory, Sen. Ariel Golden condemned Gov. Charles Turnbull's decision to withdraw Michael Bornn as his nominee for Commissioner of Tourism.

"Score one for politics as usual and zero for the people of the Virgin Islands," Golden said in a prepared statement released on Friday. "This sends a message to all other administration officials that innovative thinking is out, and anyone thinking outside the box constructed by discredited politicians of the past will not be tolerated."

The move, which comes at the beginning of the tourist season, also sends the wrong message to the travel industry and calls into question all tourism advertising that has been planned, she said.

"The governor is relying on 'business as usual,' apparently directed by a staff composed of individuals who have contributed to the fiscal mess which surrounds us," the senator said. "Whatever the differences that may have existed between Gov. Turnbull and Bornn, it is very clear that new ideas, different approaches and a turn from business as usual is the only solution, and the governor must have an

Divi recruits workers at job fair

JEREMY EKBERG

ST. CROIX — Several hundred people squeezed through the doors of store Number 4 next to the Department of Labor Office in the Sunny Isle Shopping Center Saturday for the Divi Carina Bay Resort job fair.

Hopeful employees lined up outside the building, waiting for the opportunity to fill out an application and be interviewed by the hotel or casino.

"We have all kinds of jobs to offer," Terry Hogan, director of human resources for the hotel and casino, said. "They (prospective employees) can knock out everything in one stop."

At the job fair, hopefuls had the opportunity to not only fill out applications and be interviewed for employment, but to be informed on what the jobs entail and to be registered or licensed with both the Casino Control Commission and the Department of Labor.

"The licensing ensures that employment goes to the local population," Eileen Petersen, chairperson of the Virgin Islands Casino Control Commission, said. "We are ensuring that all those employed are trained or will be trained."

Petersen also said she felt the housekeeping, security, restaurant, slot attendant and cashier jobs will be beneficial to the ailing economy.

Jeremy Ekberg

Potential employees file into the Divi Carina Bay Resort's job fair Saturday to apply for various positions at the hotel or casino and be interviewed.

"If they hire 125 people, that's 125 more jobs in the Virgin Islands," Petersen said. "We want to help people get hired so they can care for their families."

More than 300 prospective workers were interviewed or licensed by the Casino Control Commission or Department of Labor at the fair.

There are about 100 jobs open at the casino and another 35 at the hotel, according to Hogan.

She added that the hotel will employ a total of 120 people and that the Department of Labor has already provided more than 600 applications to the resort for various positions.

The CCC issues licenses to people in supervisory positions and registrations to people who work under the supervisors, according to Petersen.

A background check is also done on each individual applying for a license. The license also ensures that anyone seeking employment has a high school education or a General Equivalency Diploma.

Labor says new MOU language good for workers

SCOTT FRANK

ST. THOMAS — A controversial provision in the Memorandum of Understanding between the Department of Interior and Gov. Charles Turnbull has been deleted. It has been replaced with language local labor leaders say is in the best interest of the workers and people of the Virgin Islands.

Local unions were vehemently opposed to Standard 7 of the MOU, which called for the governor to submit legislation to the Senate no later than June 30, 2000, that would conform Virgin Islands labor relations law, including Act. No. 4440, with federal public relations law.

At a meeting Thursday between Turnbull, John Barry of the Department of the Interior and others, Standard 7 was deleted and replaced with, "Recognizing that salaries and benefits are a portion of overall local government expenditures, the governor and union representatives are encouraged to pursue through collective bargaining reform initiatives to assist in the fiscal solvency of the government of the Virgin Islands."

Luis Morales, president of the VI Central Labor Council, said the amendment was good for the people.

Luis Morales

"This means the unions in the Virgin Islands can negotiate changes, if any, to Act 4440," he said.

He said the modification came about as a result of the efforts of the CLC, with the assistance of George Becker, president of the United Steel Workers of America, and the cooperation of the Department of Interior and the VI government.

"We were able to achieve this as a result of the meeting with the White House on Oct. 18. I think this is a step in the right direction, and it shows a willingness to work with the unions," Morales said. "Hopefully, we will be able to attain similar success with five other measure we have pending from our meeting with the White House."

The other measures the unions are pushing to have addressed include a request for $1 million; return of all or part of the gas-excise-tax money; the return of the rum-excise-tax money; elimination of the federally mandated earned-income-tax credit and forgiveness of the Hugo and Marilyn hurricane debt of more than $190 million.

"We are hopeful that we will get these measures addressed," Morales said. "It is in the best interest of the workers and all the people of this territory so that the government can put its house in order."

Morales said that he hopes the cooperation shown in dealing with the MOU will carry over into other issues on which his union and the government disagree. This includes the retroactive pay owed to government employees.

"We are going to continue to apply the pressure to ensure that the obligations owed to our members are met," he said. "I view this change in the MOU as a sign of willingness and as a starting point that we can sit down and get this settled for all involved.

"I hope this cooperation is continued and in every effort that is what I am trying to do," he said. "Any other action by the government would be confrontational and union busting."

open ear and mind in order to find a solution. Why are we so afraid of new ideas and independent thinking?"

Golden said that Bornn represented the future in his vision for what the territory can become and has demonstrated the ability to construct the road to the future, she said. "The structure of the Virgin Islands government must be changed and Michael Bornn would have been a leader in the restructuring," she said. "Now he is out.

"Michael had the enthusiasm, the drive and most importantly the infectious optimism on the future available for the people of these islands," she said. "When are we going to stop destroying every idea and individual offering a bright ray of hope? We always kill the messenger if the message is one of changing directions."

The senator said that Bornn obviously understood the fiscal and structural predicament of the Virgin Islands for he repeatedly said, "It takes more than rearranging the chairs on the Titanic." She said he knew that without changing the course of the Titanic it was sure to hit the iceberg, and just as surely if we do not change the course of this government it will surely collapse.

"Bornn's appearance before the Rules Committee was a breath of fresh air from the usual constipated testimony and that coupled with his honesty and candor earned him high praise," Golden said. "I am sure he would have been confirmed by the full Senate body if only the governor had not withdrawn his nomination.

"The people and the government of the Virgin Islands have lost," she said. "This is a tragedy."

BENCHES: Lions Club pitches in

Hurricane Hugo in Sept. 1989.

"I used to run around here," said Lions Club president Lucien Downs. "When I saw the state of things, I brought it up to the membership and suggested that we refurbish it and make it nice."

Downs said the club organized Saturday's project in recognition of World Service Lions Club Day, a day during which Lions Club organizations worldwide devote to community service.

"We were here on Oct. 8 (World Service Lions Club Day) and we refurbished six benches," he said. "Today we're finishing up the last two."

Downs said one of the old benches was overrun with grass.

"We did not know that they (ruins) were here until we cut the grass," he said.

Club director Gerald Evans said the refurbishing process is simple but labor intensive.

He said club members had to dig up heavy cement slabs, dig trenches in which to set them and, once set, pour cement around the slabs to form a foundation.

Evans said cement for the project was donated by VI Cement and Building Products.

The company's manager, Allan Klingen-Smith, who assisted with the project, said that VI Cement was pleased to be a part of the club's event.

"We're a very community oriented business," he said. "When the organization approached us about rebuilding these benches, we were very happy to donate the cement."

Klingen-Smith said he would like to see more St. Croix residents take care of shoreline scenery.

"I'd like to see more people people chipping in to improve beach fronts," he said.

Klingen-Smith said the cost of materials for the organizations project is about $1,000.

Evans, who said he collected more than a dozen empty beer bottles before beginning Saturday's work, said he would also like the community to help out with beach-front beautification.

"We would like the community to feel free to use these benches, but please keep the area clean," he said.

Downs said the high volume of traffic passing through the area is taking its toll on the site's natural beauty.

"We have been granted permission from the Department of Housing, Parks and Recreations to barricade the road," he said, pointing to the dirt path closest to the site's north shore.

Evans said within the next six weeks the club will continue its beautification efforts by refurbishing six more benches in the Little Bay area.

Female judge to oversee Territorial Court system

Chief Justice Hodge retiring after 22 years

CHRISTIAN WADE

ST. THOMAS — For the first time in Virgin Islands' history, a female judge has been nominated to preside over the Territorial Court system.

Territorial Court Judge Maria Cabret was appointed as presiding judge by Gov. Charles Turnbull at a ceremony at Government House Friday. Cabret fills the vacancy left by retiring Chief Justice Verne Hodge, who leaves the post after 22 years of service.

"One of the most important and awesome duties performed by a chief executive of a state or country is that of selecting members of the judiciary," Turnbull said during the ceremony. "After appointment and confirmation, judges do not and should not serve at the pleasure of governors.

"They are free to dispense justice. They often serve terms beyond that of the governors who appoint them, and their decisions affect the lives of the citizenry and the body of accumulated laws, even after they leave the bench," he said.

Cabret, a native of St. Croix, has served as a Territorial Court Judge since 1987 and brings to the position a wealth of legal experience. She praised the work of retiring Judge Verne Hodge and said she had learned a lot from him during his tenure.

"I aim to continue to maintain the very, very high standards set by Judge Hodge for the operation of the Territorial Court," she said. "The Territorial Court has come from a municipal court to a court of first and last resort in this community. It is a court that has gained a lot of respect."

Cabret will be responsible for the administrative oversight of the court system, which includes its budget and personnel. Her nomination must be confirmed by the Senate before she can assume the post.

"I aim to continue to maintain the very, very high standards set by Judge Hodge for the operation of the Territorial Court."

Judge Maria Cabret

Turnbull also announced the appointment of Attorney Rhys Hodge as a Territorial Court Judge. Hodge is a past president of the Virgin Islands Bar Association, past chairman of the Ethics and Grievance Committee and currently serves as a member of the Bar Examiners' Committee of the Territorial Court.

"This is not an easy decision. There are a lot of things to consider when one leaves private practice," Hodge said. "But this is something that I look forward to and I look forward to joining my colleagues on the bench to do the best job I can."

Judge Ive Arlington Swan, who was reappointed by Gov. Turnbull for another six-year term as a Territorial Court Judge for St. Thomas and St. John, also praised the work of retiring Judge Hodge.

Loanna Morrison
Territorial Court Judge Maria Cabret was appointed as presiding judge of the Territorial Court by Gov. Charles Turnbull during a ceremony at Government House Friday. If confirmed, Cabret will be the first woman to fill the top judicial post.

"He has been a friend. He has been a mentor and a person of great brilliance," Swan said. "I would just like him to know that for all those years I cherished his words of wisdom and his big-brother advice."

Swan said he was honored to have been reappointed to the bench for another term.

"I am acutely aware of the awesome responsibility of being a judge," Swan said. "I have been there for twelve years and I have seen it all unfold in the courtroom. I intend to be fair. I intend to dispense justice and do the very best job I can."

Departing Judge Verne Hodge, who ruled out a potential run for the U.S. Supreme Court, had words of both encouragement and advice for his younger colleagues.

Loanna Morrison
Retiring Territorial Court Judge Verne Hodge, who leaves the court system after 22 years of service, had words of both encouragement and advice for his younger colleagues during a ceremony at Government House Friday.

"When you're a judge, you are a decision maker," he said. "We are the court of first resort here, and people come to court expecting fairness ... you've got to let them speak, let them say what they have to say, let them express themselves freely and when you make your decision explain your reasons for the decision."

Hodge, considered by many to be a visionary in the territory's court system, also used the opportunity to comment on the state of the courts in the Virgin Islands and its future direction.

"We believe we ought to get our own magistrates so that our judges can be freed up to handle their cases on a more timely basis," he said. "We should have our own appellate court system, so that we can make our own decisions on appeals here just like any other state."

The retiring judge said the court system must remain independent and should not become an advocate for any cause other than justice.

"It is wrong for advocacy groups to try to get the court to take their side," he said. "The court must be independent so that anybody coming into our court must know that they are going to get a fair trial. They must know that they are not prejudged and convicted in advance. We need judges that will stand to those principles and protect the integrity of the court."

Danish cultural minister tours St. Croix history

Danish minister of culture Elsebeth Nielsen walks through the hurricane exhibit at Fort Frederik Museum Saturday in Frederiksted.

VINCENT BRYDON

ST. CROIX — Historic Christiansted, the Danish Cemetery and the Whim and Fort Frederik museums were some of the sites that Danish Minister of Culture Elsebeth Nielsen visited on St. Croix Saturday.

Nielsen arrived in the territory on Wednesday to sign a historic agreement between Denmark and the U.S. Virgin Islands that would return historic colonial archives to the territory.

Nielsen said she was pleased to visit the island.

"It's a wonderful place and it's very interesting to see remnants of the Danish culture," she said.

Nielsen said her visit to Fort Frederik stirred mixed emotions within her.

"This is the history of good and bad moments," she said.

She said she was especially impressed with the slave ship Fredensborg exhibit.

According to museum curator Bruce Tilden, the vessel met an ironic demise.

"The slave ship Fredensborg sunk off of the coast of Norway over 200 years ago after dropping a cargo of slaves on St. Croix," he said.

"The Fredensborg exhibit is very interesting because it tells the story of enslaved Africans," Nielsen said.

Nielsen said she was also struck by the modern art exhibits.

"Though historic connection is important, it is also important to make new pictures of the future. That is what our (Danish) artists do, and you (St. Croix residents) have all of it here. You have good building blocks for the future," she said.

St. Croix Landmarks Society Executive Director George Tyson accompanied the minister of culture on her site seeing.

"We've had a leisurely tour of St. Croix," he said.

Nielsen's private secretary, Mark Ivo, said Nielsen was to speak briefly at a reception held in her honor at the Lawetz Museum in Little LaGrange Saturday evening and would deliver a full length address to the Lord God of Sabaoth congregation in Christiansted at 9:30 a.m. on Sunday.

Rotary, 4-H Club team up to plant trees at elderly home

JEREMY EKBERG

ST. CROIX — Members of Rotary Harborside and the 4-H Club teamed up Saturday to plant trees at the Flamboyant Gardens community for the elderly in Barren Spot.

More than 100 trees, including flamboyant, almond, coconut palm, frangipani and Christmas palm were planted. Funding for the project was provided by a $2,200 grant from the Virgin Islands Anti-Litter and Beautification Commission and a contribution by 4-H Club.

"We want to increase the number of trees on St. Croix," Don Nehlsen, president of Rotary Harborside, said. "It will help cool things down and beautify the area."

In addition to the trees planted at Flamboyant Gardens, about 20 were sent to the Queen Louise Home for abandoned children.

"This is a great experience for me. It allows me to give something back to the community," Kira Smith, a 4-H'er, said. "It is a lot of work, but fun."

The project is the second one sponsored by Rotary Harborside this year. In August, the group planted more than 100 trees in the Whim Gardens housing community for the elderly.

Rotary has been planting trees for three years and hopes to achieve its goal of planting 2000 trees this year on St. Croix.

Three new ships sailing to St. Croix

KC BURGARD

ST. CROIX — Three new cruise ships will be calling on the island next week, according to Gordon Finch, executive director of the Virgin Islands Port Authority.

The Norwegian Majesty and Splendour of the Seas will make their inaugural visits to St. Croix on Monday, Nov. 1. The Carnival Triumph will make its first visit to the island on Nov. 3.

"This is excellent news for St. Croix and proof of the cruise industry's growing interest in the island," Finch said. "It is up to us to make them feel welcome so that they will have a memorable experience and consider making a long-term commitment to St. Croix."

In a written statement, Finch appealed to people in the service industry to make a good first impression.

"If the cruise-ship passengers and crew do not have a good experience, they will not be encouraged to come back," he said. "We have to work with what we have and accentuate the unique qualities of our culture."

The Triumph is the only ship that made a long-term commitment to visit St. Croix. The ship plans biweekly calls until 2001. It has a 2,594 passenger capacity.

The Carnival Destiny, which currently visits the island regularly, will discontinue service in April 2000. The Nordic Empress will continue its weekly visit, however.

"We expect to have more cruise-ship activity in the coming months," Finch said. Information about new ship schedules will be released to the public as it becomes available, he said.

Prison cells arrive at Golden Grove

KC BURGARD

ST. CROIX — The Golden Grove prison addition took a major step forward this week with the arrival of cells.

About half of the prison cells needed arrived by boat Wednesday, according to Jerry Enos, assistant director of the Virgin Islands Bureau of Corrections.

Steadily throughout the day, O'Neale's Trucking hauled the cells from the dock into the Golden Grove Adult Correctional Facility. The prefabricated cells arrived from a Jacksonville, Florida company, Rotondo Precast Modular Group.

"We've used this product many times before in the states and it's a fantastic product," said Bob Naylor, Hyde Park/Perini's construction manager. HPP is the contracted construction company for the prison project.

The design of the modular product makes it as simple as possible for the contractor to set up the units, according to Doak Conn, Rotondo's project manager.

"They're all steel-reinforced concrete," Conn said. "They're fully painted and furnished. The wiring is put in and the lighting installed."

Each cell includes two bunk beds attached to a wall, a stainless steel toilet, a desk and a permanent stainless steel screen on the window. The units are stackable, with the roof of the first floor serving as the floor of the second.

"The quality (of the cells) is incredible," Enos said. "All we have to do is put the locks on the doors."

The cells will be set up beginning Monday, Naylor said, and should be in place by the end of the week.

"The project is moving ahead nicely," Naylor said.

The prison project, which was started about six months ago, includes the construction of a 320-bed addition, as well as a new jailhouse which will replace the Anna's Hope Detention Center.

WAPA halts water service

ST. CROIX — The VI Water and Power Authority announced an emergency water interruption on St. Croix.

"There is a leak in the 10-inch line at the five million-gallon water storage tank in Kingshill," WAPA spokesman Patricia Blake Simmonds said Friday in a statement. "The water will be off until 9 p.m. in Aureo Diaz Heights and Castle Burke. Paradise and Adventure Hill will experience low water pressure until the repairs are completed."

Simmonds did not say when repairs would be finished.

OAS blasts Dominican Republic government

Human rights report finds fault with policy toward children born to Haitian immigrants

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The Organization of American States harshly criticized the Dominican Republic on Friday for allowing children of Haitian migrants who are born here to be considered illegal residents.

The organization's Inter-American Commission on Human Rights urged the Dominican government to give Haitian migrants work and residency papers and to make their children born in the country legal residents.

According to the commission, the government uses a "restrictive interpretation" of the constitution that considers children of foreign nationals born in the Dominican Republic to be "in transit."

"It is not possible to consider in transit people who have resided numerous years in a country where they have developed ties of all kinds," the report said.

The Dominican Office of External Affairs declined to comment Friday, saying only that officials were preparing an official response to the report.

Pedro Manuel Casals Victoria, director of the country's Nationalist Union, called it "a vulgar intrusion into internal affairs."

Haitian diplomat Guy Lamothe said as many as 280,000 children born to undocumented Haitians in the Dominican Republic live there illegally. An estimated 1 million to 1.5 million Haitians live in the Dominican Republic, which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti.

Festival showcases Creole music

La Cel Diffewans, which means "The Only Difference" in Creole French, plays in Roseau, Dominica, Tuesday, during a show that preceded the World Creole Music Festival. The festival is a marathon of concerts that began Friday and ends around breakfast time Monday. Now in its third year, the festival showcases music from throughout the 12 million-strong Creole-speaking world, and includes acts from Dominica, Martinique, Guadeloupe and Haiti.

Cuban, Mexican lawmakers meet in Havana

HAVANA (AP) — Cuban and Mexican lawmakers agreed Saturday to cooperate more on the economic front, to encourage more Mexican investment on the island and more Cuban exports to Mexico.

Wrapping up the third annual Mexico-Cuba Interparliamentary Meeting, the legislators also agreed to work on ways to protect their developing nations from the effects of economic globalization, as well as competition from large international corporations.

Mexican and Cuban lawmakers said in a joint resolution that increased education would help provide that protection. They agreed to promote laws and policies aimed at providing people with the level of education needed to compete in an increasingly globalized economy.

"Today we must be capable of rechanneling our relations so as not to be victims of pitiless world trade, which has no ethical or social boundaries," Mexican Sen. Rodolfo Elizondo said at the start of the two-day session on Friday.

The legislators also agreed to cooperate more in the areas of science, environment, agriculture, tourism, culture and sports.

Mexico has remained one of Cuba's best friends and a key trading partner since the 1959 revolution that brought Fidel Castro to power. Mexico was the only Latin American nation that did not break with Cuba under U.S. pressure in the 1960s.

Ricardo Alarcon, president of Cuba's National Assembly, headed the Cuban delegation. Deputy Jorge Lezcano Perez headed the Mexican delegation.

Chavez enters Venezuelan debate on press freedom

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — President Hugo Chavez said Saturday that press freedom in Venezuela is not in danger even though a constitutional panel called for "truthful information" in the media.

An assembly rewriting the country's constitution approved the measure last week, alarming critics who said it could result in an attack on the free press.

Chavez

In a speech, Chavez criticized opponents of the measure but at the same time appeared to oppose it himself.

"I believe in absolute freedom of the press. I practice it and I respect it, and because of that I cannot agree with any qualifier that would limit it," Chavez said. He added that "there is still time to correct this."

Last week, the assembly passed the article, which is still subject to final approval, giving Venezuelans "the right to opportune, truthful, impartial and uncensored information." It also guarantees the right to rebuttal by anyone identified in a news report.

Journalists groups, including the Inter American Press Association, condemned the measure, calling it a prelude to censorship.

But Chavez said Saturday that the Venezuelan media often abuse their power.

"The truth is there has been a lot of cynicism here. Many of the media owners who today scream and yell about freedom of expression in Venezuela have themselves crushed the freedom of expression of their own journalists," he said.

And he defended the assembly's decision calling for the right to rebuttal, saying "it's nothing more than a mechanism to defend citizens, who have the right to repel abuses by the media."

French islands to get more autonomy

On visit to Guadeloupe, premier also promises continued support for Caribbean banana exports

LAMENTIN, Guadeloupe (AP) — France will not allow the United States to dictate the international commerce rules in the escalating trade dispute on bananas, French Premier Lionel Jospin assured French Caribbean banana farmers on Saturday.

Jospin's four-day visit, which concludes Saturday, was marked by protests and a boycott by the little-supported independence movement, despite his promises that the islands would get more autonomy under a proposed new law that aims to reconstruct the way Paris governs its former colonies.

He reassured farmers in Guadeloupe's northern town of Lamentin that France would stand strong against the United States in what's being called the "banana war" — a U.S. challenge to the European Union's preferential imports of Caribbean bananas.

He did not say how France would proceed, but the issue is sure to flare up next month during the World Trade Organization's meeting of trade ministers in Seattle.

The conflict has escalated since the United States imposed sanctions this year amounting to $191.4 million a year in punitive tariffs on selected European goods. Washington acted after the WTO ruled the preferential banana trade was unfair to U.S.-owned banana plantations in Latin America.

It is difficult for Caribbean islanders, who farm mostly small plots in mountainous terrain, to compete with huge Latin American banana plantations. Losses to Latin America could be catastrophic for the French Caribbean's already depressed economies.

The U.S. challenge has implications for some 71 former European colonies in Africa, Asia and the Pacific that export numerous goods to Europe under similar rules.

Also Saturday, Jospin castigated protesters who called a two-day strike against his visit, saying blocked roads of burning tires and a mass march Friday were "excessive displays" and "intimidation tactics" from the minority who want the islands to be independent.

After World War II France gave its former colonies in Africa, the Caribbean and the Pacific the status of French provinces; residents are considered French citizens and are subject to French law.

Northern Honduras braces for Tropical Depression Katrina

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Northern Honduras was on alert as Tropical Depression Katrina approached on Saturday, exactly a year after the country was hit by Hurricane Mitch.

Katrina, with sustained winds of near 30 mph, had nowhere near the force of Mitch, which killed nearly 10,000 in Central America, including more than 5,600 in Honduras alone. But it could dump 5 to 10 inches of rain in parts of Honduras, Nicaragua and El Salvador, and there was a danger of flash floods and mudslides in mountainous areas, according to the U.S. National Weather Service in Miami.

Rain could also affect Guatemala, Belize and Mexico's Yucatan peninsula, which was still recovering from floods this month that have killed more than 400 people.

Katrina was downgraded earlier Saturday from a tropical storm to a tropical depression, meaning its wind speeds ducked below 40 mph.

Honduran officials late Friday declared a high alert in four northern provinces and a lesser alert for the rest of the country. "The projections indicate that the storm could produce flooding and landslides, especially on the Atlantic coast," said Arturo Corrales, director of Honduras' national emergency response agency.

EDITORIAL:

The bounties of nature

For many Virgin Islanders, in the midst of this uncertain and financially troubled period in our history, concerns for the environment might seem irrelevant and even sublime. But the point that many of us might overlook, as we read the headlines about the current fiscal crisis, is that the natural environment of the territory is one of our greatest assets.

Next week, when the U.S. Coral Reef Task Force meets on St. Croix, over 200 government officials, scientists and environmentalists will converge on the territory to discuss ways to study, preserve and protect our coral reefs. This initiative should be welcomed and praised by all Virgin Islanders — not as another attempt by the federal government to exert its will over the territory — but as the first step in saving the future for our children.

The U.S. Coral Reef Task Force was created by executive order signed June 11, 1998, by President Clinton. The order directs all federal agencies to protect coral-reef ecosystems to the extent feasible and tells agencies to come up with coordinated, science-based plans to restore damaged reefs, both in the United States and around the globe.

Federal agencies are tasked with working closely with representatives from territorial, commonwealth and state governments, recognizing that more than 90 percent of coral reef resources under U.S. protection are located in their waters. Other members of the Task Force include researchers, commercial interests and non-governmental organizations.

While coral reefs cover less than two-tenths of the ocean floor, scientists estimate that coral reefs contain approximately 25 percent of the ocean's species and are among the world's most fragile and endangered ecosystems. Almost 5,000 species of reef fish have been identified — and more than 2,500 species of coral, of which almost 1,000 are reef-building hard coral.

In the last few decades, mankind has destroyed over 35 million acres of coral reefs. Reefs off of 93 countries have been damaged by human activity. If the present rate of destruction continues, 70 percent of the world's coral reefs will be killed within our lifetimes.

Due to rapid development over the last 50 years, most Caribbean reefs are threatened by adjacent densely populated islands. Construction along coasts, inshore construction, mining or farming upstream, or logging in tropical forests causes soil to erode and rush downstream into the ocean and onto coral reefs. This dirt, silt or sand can make the water cloudy or muddy, smothering the coral which can't get enough light to survive.

Mangrove depletion has been prominent in the majority of the Caribbean islands. Mangrove trees and sea grasses that normally act as filters for sediment are also being rapidly destroyed. This has led to an increase in the amount of sediment reaching coral reefs. Mangrove forests are often cut for firewood or removed to create open beaches.

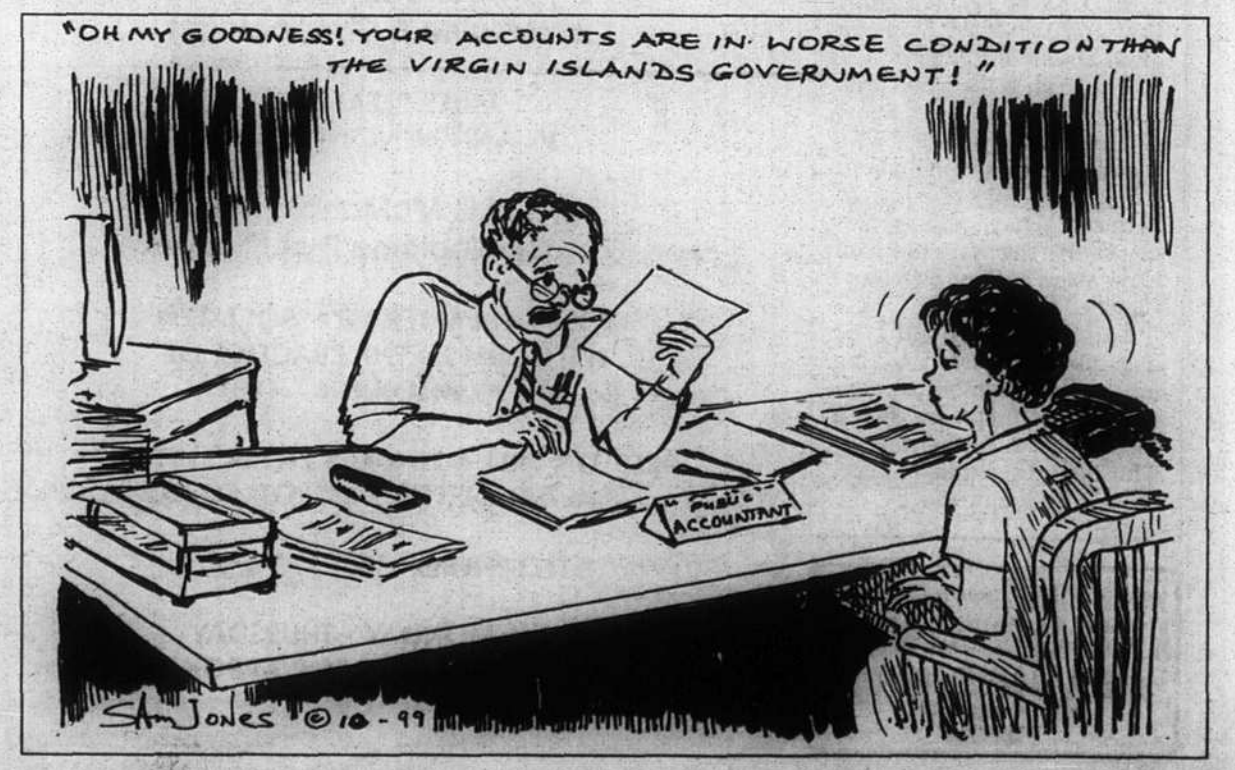

We in the Virgin Islands owe it to our children to support the efforts of the federal government to preserve this delicate feature of our natural environment, and we should look beyond the present financial woes to the future.

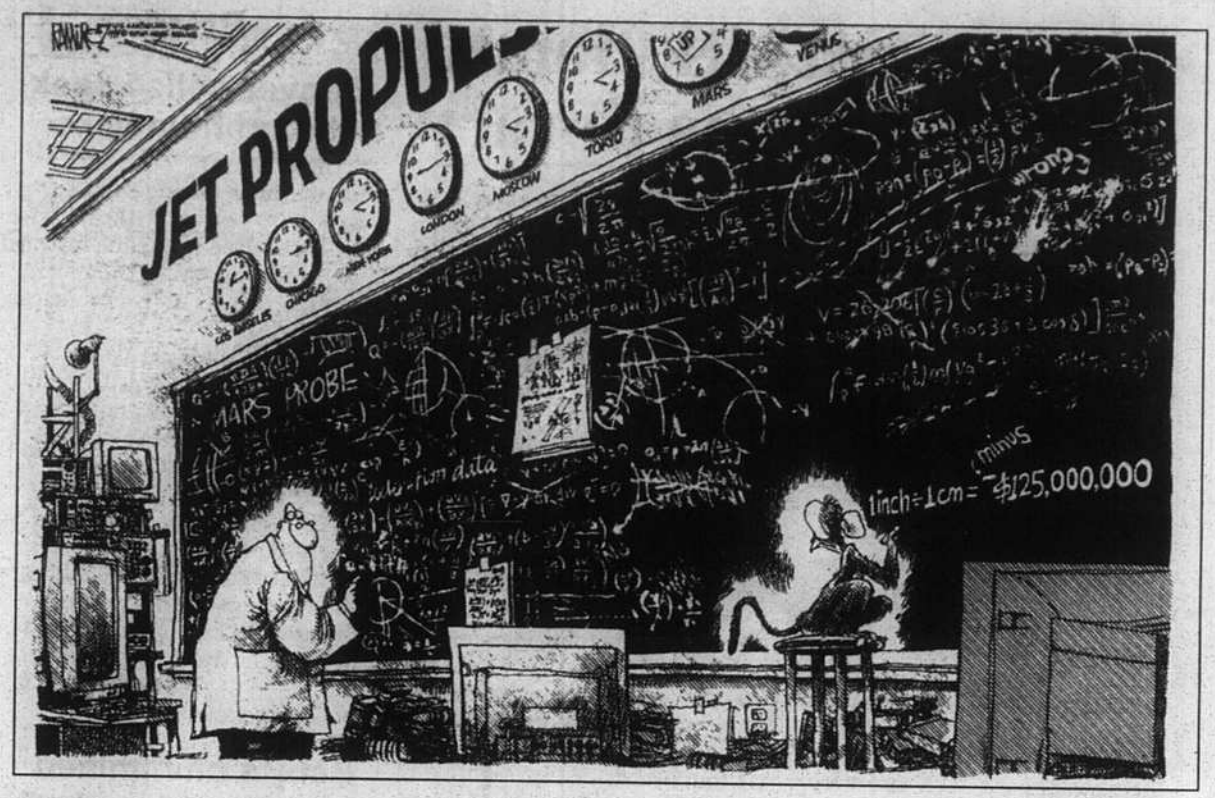

If we continue to squander our most important resources solely for the purpose of fostering economic growth, we will be depriving coming generations of a future rich in the bounties of nature.

When 'whites only' helps diversity

Clarence Page

WASHINGTON — If you live long enough, my grandmothers used to say, you see life begin to come full circle.

That thought came to mind as I learned recently about Alabama's "whites only" scholarships.

Like other members of my generation, the term "whites only" stirs a knee-jerk reaction in me, especially when mentioned in the same breath with Alabama.

I can recall vividly how the late Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace quite literally stood in the doorway to prevent blacks from enrolling in the University of Alabama in the early 1960s.

Alabama now has something that is quite the opposite of segregation. It has affirmative action, not only for blacks, but for whites, too.

It has a scholarship program exclusively for whites who will enroll at one of the state's two historically black universities, Alabama State University and Alabama A&M University. U.S. District Judge Harold L. Murphy created the program, which is similar to ones in some other Southern states, in 1995 to encourage whites to add some diversity to the black student bodies the way blacks have been adding color to the state's white universities.

Some black Alabamians had sued the state in the hope that a larger white enrollment would enhance the educational atmosphere at the two black universities. That sounds about right. If you believe racial diversity enhances the educational experience of students at mostly white colleges and universities, you can hardly believe it wouldn't at predominately black schools.

White-student enrollment at Alabama State has risen since the 1995 decision from about 7 percent to 10 percent.

Now, in a color-reversal of college-desegregation cases elsewhere, the same judge has allowed a black Alabama graduate student to challenge the constitutionality of the scholarships.

The student, Jesse J. Tompkins, who is studying education part time at Alabama State, unsuccessfully sought a scholarship in 1996. Now he is claiming the "whites only" scholarship violates his rights under the 14th Amendment, which guarantees equal protection under the law.

Ominously for affirmative action advocates, he is being defended by the Center for Individual Rights, a Washington-based legal group that crusades against what it calls "racial-preference" programs across the country.

Tompkins says he had to turn to the conservative organization because none of the liberal civil rights organizations would help him. Small wonder. If he wins his case, it could help unravel affirmative action programs across the country, regardless of which race is involved.

Tompkins essentially argues that racial opportunity has become so well-equalized in America that we need no longer to take race into account. I hope he's right, but I doubt it.

For example, when the story was broadcast recently on "60 Minutes," a white Alabama State official recalled how he was embarrassed while recruiting potential white applicants at a college fair. One white girl who looked interested was snatched away by her mother who shouted, "That's a (N-word) college."

Yes, unfortunately there is plenty of evidence that the races in America still have a lot to learn about how to get along with each other. That's the virtue of diversity-minded recruiting, whether in schools or in the workplace.

Besides, there's nothing new about preferences in scholarships. Hundreds are awarded for all sorts of reasons, some of them pretty oddball. When Emerge magazine ran a list of unusual college scholarship "preferences" four years ago, they included:

Children of harness racers.
Newspaper delivery boys.
Tupperware dealers.
Senior citizens.
Non-athletes who don't drink, smoke or do drugs.
Undergraduates with the last name "Gatlin" or "Gatling."
Relatives of dog breeders.
Displaced homemakers.
Golf caddies.
Descendants of signers of the Declaration of Independence.
Descendants of Confederate soldiers.

Compared to that list, a scholarship to encourage whites to attend a black college looks remarkably unremarkable.

My grandmothers were right. We haven't come full circle yet, but we seem to be getting there. The late Gov. Wallace eventually changed his tune and became a fierce advocate for desegregation in Alabama. Who knows? Maybe someday Jesse Tompkins will, too.

100 years of juvenile justice now in jeopardy

William G. Paul
My Turn

As we celebrate the 100th anniversary of the nation's first juvenile court, we face the real prospect of eviscerating the unique character of juvenile courts and abandoning the protections that help steer juveniles away from crime.

In recent years, various states have embarked upon a series of "get tough" policies. These initiatives increased punishments, reduced the informality of 'juvenile courts, and transferred many thousands of children to adult court.

While procedural safeguards have helped ensure fair juvenile proceedings, many, juveniles tried as adults are denied access to treatment, education and vocational training, and are exposed to hardened criminals.

Juveniles in adult facilities are also at great risk of being assaulted. In adult prisons they, are often victims of physical and sexual attacks, or can be driven to suicide. Studies looking at Florida and New Jersey/New York reveal that juveniles tried as adults are more likely to be rearrested. In addition, experts estimate that detaining, prosecuting and incarcerating additional juveniles as adults will cost states hundreds of millions of dollars.

The current debate in Congress has frequently emphasized trying more juveniles as adults. Last year, Congress passed the Juvenile Accountability Incentive Block Grant program. It conditioned states' receipt of funds upon efforts to subject juveniles as 15 to adult criminal prosecution. This year, Congress is considering a bill that would give U.S. Attorneys the power to decide whether children in federal court should be tried as adults.

Violent crimes account for less than 6 percent of juvenile arrests in this country. These legislative proposals undermine state and local governments, which need to be able to deal effectively with the 94 percent of juveniles arrested who are non-violent offenders. They need prevention programs providing, alternatives to criminal activity.

A juvenile should be transferred to the adult system only as a last resort, and then only after a hearing on the record and a judicial determination spelling out why this is the best approach.

What steps should Congress adopt in crafting, its juvenile justice bill?

Children must be kept in facilities separate from adult prisoners. Weakening this 25-year-old requirement is a recipe for disaster. For example, Robby Horn was a 16-year-old boy from Kentucky, who was put in jail after being arrested for truancy. A deputy paraded Robby before the adults in that jail in order to "scare him straight." He committed suicide a half-hour later. No legitimate correctional interest is served by exposing, children to incarcerated adults.

Congress needs to pay attention to the research showing what works. We know that comprehensive. Community-based programs have reduced juvenile crime. Congress should help states fund these balanced programs. For example, in Boston a three-pronged program of after-school prevention, intervention, and enforcement aimed at violent youth, reduced the number of youth homicides by 80 percent over five years.

Children must have access to effective and affordable legal counsel. Last year in Chicago, a 7- and an 8-year-old boy gained national attention after they wrongly "confessed" to killing an 11-year-old girl. Both were questioned outside the presence of an attorney, or an adult-guardian. Given the high stakes involved in today's juvenile court proceedings, effective legal representation is critical to ensure due process and basic fairness.

Congress must take meaningful steps to keep guns out of the hands of children. The rates of homicide and injury among young people in the U.S. far exceed all other industrialized nations combined. A critical aspect of preventing violent crime is preventing children's easy access to guns and curbing the trafficking of firearms to minors.

The 100th anniversary of the juvenile court presents a splendid opportunity to reflect upon the successes and shortcomings of the juvenile justice system.

Casting children into the adult criminal justice system must only happen after great consideration.

A society that tolerates, even encourages, children learning the culture of violence in adult prisons will fully reap what it has sown.

William G. Paul is president of the American Bar Association.

Mars flight is still on course

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Mars Polar Lander successfully performed a 12-second thruster firing Saturday to fine-tune its flight path to arrive on the Red Planet's south pole on Dec. 3.

Preliminary data showed that the adjustment, which began at 10:28 a.m. PDT, achieved the desired change in trajectory, said Mary Beth Murrill, spokeswoman for NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena.

Scientists and engineers had checked — and double-checked — the thruster firing process in order to avoid a repeat of the problem that doomed NASA's Mars Climate Orbiter.

Trajectory correction maneuvers are routine in solar system flights but the procedure for Mars Polar Lander has come under greater scrutiny since the loss of its companion mission in September.

Prices that speak for themselves.

Web camera seeks famed ghost in Indiana library

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — On a cold winter morning in 1937, a janitor grabbed his flashlight and headed down into the pitch-black basement of the Willard Library to stoke the coal furnace.

But then, so the story goes, he was stopped cold in his tracks by the ghostly vision of a woman dressed in gray, from the veil covering her face down to her shoes.

Since then, a number of Willard staff members have reported seeing the shadowy "Lady in Grey" or witnessing weird happenings among the shelves.

And now anyone can try for a sighting. The Evansville Courier & Press has installed a video camera in the 114-year-old library and still pictures are posted on the newspaper's Web site every 30 seconds.

"Ghostcam" was intended to generate more traffic at the Internet site during the Halloween season, said James Derk, new media editor for the newspaper.

CHECK IT OUT
The "Ghostcam" address is www.courier-press.com/ghost.

But the page has been so popular that Derk wants to continue it indefinitely.

One image, digitally enhanced several times, appears to show the gray form of a woman returning a book to a shelf.

Derk is at a loss to explain how the camera, which is mounted on a bookshelf about 8 feet above the floor, ended up pointing in a different direction one day. All of the library workers said they hadn't touched it.

"I think something is out there, to paraphrase 'The X-Files,'" Derk said. "We stand ready and willing to believe."

Denver police seek killer of homeless

DENVER (AP) — An anonymous donor has offered a $100,000 reward with the hope that someone will come forward with information in the recent beating deaths of five homeless men.

Mayor Wellington Webb announced the reward Friday.

So far police have not found any evidence linking the five deaths dating back to Sept. 7. But they are not discounting the possibility that a pattern might emerge.

Police have no new leads in the beatings but hope the reward will cause more people to come forward with information, said Lt. Frank Conner, a police spokesman.

Baby's mummified body found in shed

HUGO, Colo. (AP) — Authorities were investigating the death of a baby boy whose mummified body was found in a cardboard box inside an old shed.

Authorities believe the baby was born in 1964 since a newspaper from that year was found with the body.

The baby was dressed in a night shirt and diaper and his umbilical cord had been tied off. He was wrapped in a pink baby blanket and there was a blue blanket under the body.

"It looks like there was some feeling for this child," said Arapahoe County coroner Mike Dobersen, who performed an autopsy Friday. Authorities said the baby may have been stillborn and that there was no indication of foul play.

Mfume's son pleads guilty in drug case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A son of NAACP President Kweisi Mfume could face up to seven years in prison after pleading guilty to drug conspiracy and weapons charges and admitting he sold cocaine for more than two years in the nation's capital.

Ronald T. Gray, 29, entered the plea Thursday in U.S. District Court here to a grand jury indictment charging him with three counts of distributing powdered cocaine and three charges of using the telephone to arrange drug sales.

Gray was arrested last May at his home by agents with the Drug Enforcement Adminis tration. Assistant U.S. Attorney John Crabb Jr. said DEA agents recovered a 12-gauge shotgun and drug paraphernalia after arresting Gray.

Prosecutors said Gray came to the attention of the DEA last spring after another area man was caught with drugs and said Gray had provided him with cocaine on at least 70 occasions, prosecutors said.

Lawyer says closing Cleveland school was overreaction

CLEVELAND (AP) — A school closed for one day because of a threat of violence from a group of teens was never in danger, says a lawyer for two youngsters.

Dan Shields, who represents a brother and sister who were questioned in the alleged threat, contends that Mayor Michael R. White overreacted in canceling classes Friday.

"South High School is not Columbine," Shields said in reference to the nation's deadliest school shooting last April.

"There's no weapons at school, no violent acts. We understand there may have been some talk from one child regarding some actions against other students, but that's it."

Shields also noted that no charges have been filed against his clients, a 14-year-old boy and his 15-year-old sister.

Police did arrest four other students and questioned seven other teens Friday in the alleged plot, which White said may have been motivated by racial bias. Seventy percent of South's 1,500-student population is black.

The mayor declined to comment on a report that the attack planned for Friday was similar to the one by Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold at Columbine in Littleton, Colo. Armed with guns and bombs, the two teen-aged gunmen killed 12 students and a teacher before killing themselves.

At South, the 11 students — all suspended for 10 days — are white and planned to disrupt the school with "violent acts," according to the mayor, who said only that the students felt alienated.

White

White said the students planned to get weapons from an area gang but are not gang members. Police found two guns at one student's home but would not say where.

White would not elaborate on details of the alleged plot or confirm a report by The Plain Dealer that the students gave written statements to police that they planned to use guns and homemade explosives to kill teachers, administrators and fellow students.

The newspaper said the massacre was planned for just before noon Friday, when students would open fire in the cafeteria and the principal's office. The students also planned a suicidal shootout with police in a school courtyard, the newspaper said.

Harlem school wants apology for depiction in Streep film

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of an East Harlem school says Miramax Films should apologize for a new Meryl Streep film that depicts the school as plagued by violence and shoddy teaching.

"In retrospect, we probably should not have used the name of the school," Elizabeth Clark, senior vice president of Miramax, said in response to objections raised by some educators about "Music of the Heart."

The film, which opened Friday, stars Streep as Roberta Guaspari, who received widespread notice for teaching violin at the Central Park East 1 elementary school.

Educators say the film misrepresents the school, citing scenes such as a drive-by shooting, a racially hostile parent and an incident involving a student with a knife.

"We're taking it very seriously," said Larry Speigel, the school's assistant director. "There's a lot of dissension about what has happened."

School director Jane Andreas, who said she has not seen the film, said others had told her the school and its "vibrant and wonderful neighborhood are portrayed as very dangerous."

"Before the initial credits, (Miramax) should make an apology saying, 'This is a misrepresentation,'" she said.

"Music of the Heart" tells how, after a school board threatened to cut off funding for Guaspari's program, concert violinists Isaac Stern, Itzhak Perlman and Arnold Steinhardt stepped in to help by performing with her students at a Carnegie Hall benefit. Her violin program is now partially supported by a foundation, Opus 118.

Clark of Miramax said the film's producers had not intended to create a false impression.

"It is not really about the actual school," she said. "The school is just the canvas. ... There is no violence that occurs in the school. It's a fictionalized school, and the name shouldn't have been used."

Feds challenge Boeing's late release of safety report

NTSB says fuel tank findings could have helped their inquiry into Flight 800 crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal safety investigators say they are dismayed the Boeing Co. would study fuel tank problems on its jumbo jets but then fail for years to disclose their findings.

The Washington Post, in Saturday's editions, quotes National Safety Transportation Board officials as saying the Boeing report could have helped them focus on the problem — fuel tank overheating — that was an apparent factor in the explosion of TWA Flight 800 over Long Island Sound in 1996.

According to the Post, Boeing produced the report in 1980 but did not give it to the NTSB until this June.

The four-volume report focused on a key issue that preoccupied TWA Flight 800 investigators — excess heat from the air conditioning bay of its E-4B jet, the military version of its 747, possibly creating highly flammable fuel vapors in the plane's central fuel tank.

In a written statement Friday, the NTSB expressed "displeasure" and "dismay" about Boeing's delay.

A Boeing spokesman said Saturday that the differences between the two versions of the airframe make the report largely irrelevant to the TWA investigation.

Russ Young said the report was missed by investigators in the company's commercial airplane group because it dealt with a military aircraft. The company's procedures have been changed so that will not happen again, he said.

"In retrospect, although the relevance of that (report) is questionable, we wish we had found it earlier and passed it along," Young said. "There didn't seem to be any realization on the military side (of the company) that the investigation was relevant or potentially relevant."

The General Accounting Office, which conducts congressional probes, in recent months has been interviewing employees at Boeing and the Air Force, which commissioned the 1980 report. The Post quoted sources as saying the investigators have no evidence of an intentional cover-up.

Clinton plans stricter rules for reporting toxic chemicals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government will require fuller reports from industry about toxic chemicals released into the environment so the public can learn more about companies' potential to pollute, President Clinton said Saturday.

The tighter rules, effective Jan. 1, apply to 27 substances and, for the first time, cover the industrial byproduct dioxin.

Clinton, in his weekly radio address, also announced two other executive actions, both land acquisitions: 14,000 acres in a California desert national park and a 95,000-acre ranch in New Mexico where one of the world's largest herds of elk roams free.

Clinton also repeated a threat to veto the Interior Department spending bill if the Republican-controlled Congress does not remove provisions on logging in national forests, oil production, and toxic-waste mining rules on federal lands. The president also wants more money for voluntary community river restorations.

The GOP believes the bill is friendly to the environment while protecting Social Security, Rep. J.C. Watts, R-Okla., chairman of the House Republican Conference, said in a statement responding to Clinton.

The new chemical rules from the Environmental Protection Agency will apply to a company based on the amount of "persistent bioaccumulative toxics" it uses. Those are chemicals that do not break down easily and build up in the environment to the point where they are passed through the food chain.

"One of the simplest but most potent tools in our fight against pollution is public information," Clinton said. "By requiring industries to tell communities how much they pollute the air and water, we empower citizens to fight back and create a powerful incentive for industry to pollute less."

Proof, he said, is that industry's toxic pollution has fallen almost 50 percent in the decades since reporting requirements took effect.

From tough talk to diplomacy

Counterterrorism expert with military background tries his hand at persuasion

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael A. Sheehan once kicked down doors to confront terrorists.

Years later his mission is the same, but his technique has changed: He recently led diplomatic overtures to Afghanistan's ruling Taliban army in hopes of winning its help in seizing suspected terrorist Osama bin Laden.

And diplomacy on Capitol Hill will be needed if Sheehan is to address what he calls the "unconscionable" 36 percent reduction by Congress in the budget of the U.S. counterterrorism office.

The retired Army lieutenant colonel is the nation's latest coordinator for counterterrorism — a post that carries the rank of ambassador at large in the State Department. He is the point man in the government's efforts to prevent attacks like last year's bombings of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania that killed 224 people, including 12 Americans.

Sheehan, 44, is a veteran of world hot spots: Central America, Korea, Somalia. In Panama, he was the leader and youngest member of a U.S. Army Special Forces counterterrorism "door-kicking team" whose actions he says he cannot discuss.

But while tough talk and swift action are still part of fighting terrorism, so is persuasion.

"The bread and butter of what we do is diplomacy," Sheehan said in an interview after the Senate approved his appointment without dissent. "We try to depoliticize terrorism around the world, criminalize its behavior and work with other countries to close off terrorists."

The task includes building an international consensus against terrorist organizations, isolating states that sponsor or shelter them, and sharing information with law enforcement officials in other countries.

It includes the economic sanctions recently imposed by President Clinton against the Taliban government in Afghanistan for harboring bin Laden, the suspected terrorist mastermind behind the embassy bombings.

And it includes military force, such as last year's U.S. missile assaults against camps in Afghanistan and a factory in Sudan after the embassy bombings.

Since the Office of Coordinator for Counterterrorism is located at the intersection of military might and diplomatic finesse, prospective coordinators are drawn from either arena. Sheehan, a military veteran, succeeded a career member of the

Terror suspect bin Laden offers to leave Afghanistan

JALALABAD, Afghanistan (AP) — One day after accused terrorist Osama bin Laden offered to leave Afghanistan, residents of this rugged eastern city say they've seen him and his men at a training camp nearby.

On the dusty, clogged streets of Jalalabad, a man who refused to give his name splayed his fingers, pointed them toward his eyes and said: "with these two eyes I saw him" in a community called Farmada, near Jalalabad, which is barely 45 miles from the Pakistani border.

Nearby was Mohammed Naseem, who said "bin Laden is bringing bad things to Afghanistan."

With a flick of his hand Naseem said bin Laden should go, "he is taking the food from our mouths."

Bin Laden's request to leave, sent Saturday to the Taliban religious army, comes as the United Nations has threatened to impose sanctions against Afghanistan if it doesn't turn over bin Laden by mid-November. The Saudi-born bin Laden is suspected in the bombings of two U.S. embassies.

bin Laden

Afghanistan's economy has already been shattered by the protracted civil war. Most wealthy and educated people have fled the country, while investments are halting because of the fighting.

Earlier this year, the United States banned U.S. trade with and investment in Taliban-controlled parts of Afghanistan, barred Americans from using the Taliban-run Ariana Afghan airlines and started seizing the airline's $500 million in U.S. assets.

On Friday, bin Laden asked the Taliban for permission to leave Afghanistan. He also asked them to provide him security while he is moving out and not to disclose his destination, Taliban spokesman Tayyab Agha said by telephone from the southern Afghan city of Kandahar.

A Clinton administration official, who insisted on anonymity, said the U.S. government had seen the report of bin Laden's request, but that it "falls far short" of the U.N. resolution that the militia deliver him for trial in the United States or another able country.

At the Taliban's foreign ministry, a stark cement building tucked at the end of a maze of narrow, dusty streets, the man in charge, Gul Omar said: "it is difficult to say the address of bin Laden because America will close in on him with cruise missiles," a reference to last year's U.S. assault on eastern Afghanistan.

In that attack, the United States fired dozens of Tomahawk cruise missiles in an effort to destroy suspected training camps of bin Laden's group, Al Qaids. Several people were killed, but bin Laden escaped.

Since then Washington has launched an economic and diplomatic assault on the Taliban, imposing sanctions and pushing the resolution through the United Nations to threaten further sanctions.

The United States accuses bin Laden of masterminding the twin bombings of its embassies last year in East Africa. Washington is offering a $5 million reward for his capture, and wants him expelled to a country where he can stand trial on charges in connection with the bombings.

foreign service, Philip Wilcox Jr., who held the post from 1994 until his retirement in 1997.

Sheehan joined the military after high school and began a career that would send him around the globe.

After Panama, Sheehan served as a company commander in an Army unit on the demilitarized zone between North and South Korea. He then worked as a military adviser in El Salvador before seeking a master's degree in international relations at Georgetown University.

There he took a class taught by now-Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, who would become a major influence on his career.

He worked with Albright in New York after she became U.S. ambassador to the United Nations in 1993. As part of United Nation's peacekeeping efforts, Sheehan spent seven months in Mogadishu, Somalia's ravaged capital, in 1993 and 1994, and four months in Haiti in 1994.

Albright became secretary of state in 1997. When the job of counterterrorism coordinator became vacant last year, she named Sheehan to the post on an acting basis while his nomination worked its way through Congress.

State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said Albright "hand-picked Ambassador Sheehan for this post precisely because he has a unique combination of field experience and Washington policy experience."

The 1998 embassy bombings in Kenya and Tanzania put terrorism on the front burner in Congress. The House in July unanimously authorized $1.4 billion for security upgrades at embassies.

Sheehan said the challenge will be maintaining that attention.

"I think it's the type of effort that we have to sustain over the long time — indefinitely really," he said. "You can become exhausted if you're at a heightened state of security all the time."

Ship found off Lebanese coast with 73 passengers, no crew

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — A ship carrying 73 passengers and abandoned by its crew off southern Lebanese coast was intercepted by the Israeli navy Saturday and brought ashore in Israeli-occupied Lebanon, a U.N. official said.

Timur Goksel, a spokesman for U.N. peacekeepers in southern Lebanon, said U.N. medical personnel and officials of the International Committee of the Red Cross provided food and blankets to the passengers, who were brought ashore at Naqoura, on the border with Israel.

The passengers included 70 men and three women from Iran, Iraq, Bangladesh, India, Sri Lanka and Egypt, Goksel said. There was no crew on board, he said.

There was no immediate explanation how the ship was abandoned at sea by its crew. No details about the passengers were available.

"Health Tips" SYMMETRY:
Enriching people's lives for a better tomorrow

CHILDREN'S PROTECTION

Today's parents are faced with several obstacles that seriously challenge our children's lives with their health and development. We try to provide our children with a healthy diet, good morals and educational experiences. Yet popular culture bombards them with negative influences such as:

JUNK FOOD is full of unnatural ingredients, food coloring, preservatives, sugars and fats.

POLLUTED WATER increases the rise of parasites and other infections in child's immune system that forces the child's growing body to focus on filtering toxins and other impurities from the system instead of focusing on growing a healthy and strong body.

SEDENTARY LIFESTYLE inclusive of TVs, computers, video games and the internet tempt children into becoming "couch potatoes" by offering immediate gratification, while promoting short attention spans and stifling creativity. It is known that 85% of the brain development - essentially the "programming" that we rely on for the rest of our lives - takes place before we graduate from high school. It is during the formative years that the body's basic physical structure develops. Complete nutrition is essential to build strong and healthy skin, muscles and bones. The earlier you begin to build a solid foundation, the better, but it is NEVER to late to START.

If your child or children suffers from the following health related problems-

*Asthma
*Diabetes
*Menstrual (period) cramps
*Allergies
*Obesity
*Depression
*Constipation
*Lack of energy
*Learning difficulties

St. Peter's Square at the Vatican is filled Saturday during a rally for Catholic schools. The rally was one of the biggest at St. Peter's Square in years.

Catholic school supporters rally at St. Peter's Square

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Cheered on by thousands of children and teachers, Pope John Paul II on Saturday called for equal funding for Catholic schools in one of the biggest rallies at St. Peter's Square in years.

Estimates ranged as high as 200,000 for the lively crowd, which filled the piazza and spilled out onto the long boulevard leading into the Vatican.

Italy's bishops and John Paul have pressed for government financial help for Catholic schools through tax credits to parents or other means.

Recent moves in that direction "unfortunately were not enough," John Paul said.

The turnout from across Italy far surpassed the prediction of 80,000. Politicians attended as well, with Italy's education minister among those applauding when John Paul urged parity between state and church schools.

Calling the current setup "ever less bearable," John Paul said the solution was "full recognition of legal and economic parity between state and non-state schools, overcoming the old objections, which are foreign to the basic values of the European cultural tradition."

The issue of state support for church schools has divided Italy's center-left government. Leftist opponents to the funding sent schoolchildren marching through Rome in their own, much smaller demonstrations earlier in the week.

The children's rally — on a sunny autumn morning — drew a rare, wide smile from the pope, whose face as he has aged has stiffened, which some attribute to Parkinson's disease.

Colombian drifter admits to killing 140 children

PEREIRA, Colombia (AP) — Twelve freshly planted palms stand as a memorial to the 25 children whose skeletal remains were found here last year, leading police to a man who may be one of history's worst serial killers.

Brightly-painted figures of children at play are carved into an overlooking hillside, and a sign at the bottom of the grassy gully reads: "If we continue with the indifference and the abandonment, we'll never know what happened to the children of Pereira."

The gruesome findings at this overgrown city lot in Colombia's bustling western coffee belt last November sparked a public outcry that prompted a nationwide investigation into more than a hundred missing children over the past several years.

This week, the break came: A 42-year-old drifter confessed to killing 140 children during a five-year rampage, chief federal prosecutor Alfonso Gomez said.

Garavito

Luis Alfredo Garavito, who was jailed on attempted rape charges in April, confessed to the killings after being presented with overwhelming evidence linking him to the killings, the prosecutor said.

Luring his victims with a myriad of disguises — a cripple, a monk, a beggar, a priest, a charity worker — Garavito gained his victims' confidence by offering them soft drinks and money. In several of the 59 towns he drifted through, Garavito earned nicknames including "El Loco" and "Goofy."

Most of his victims were boys from poor families between the ages of 8 and 16. Many had their throats slit, and some of their remains were found tied to trees with nylon rope. Others were buried in shallow graves and investigators presume a large number were sexually abused.

Prosecutors have not yet formally charged Garavito, who lived in neighboring Ecuador during part of 1998 and is being investigated in connection with child slayings there. Nor have they identified all of the 114 bodies found so far.

Prosecutors said Garavito was himself a victim of child abuse, and would undergo extensive psychological testing. Although not yet formally facing murder charges, Garavito still faces charges of attempting to rape a 12-year-old boy.

For a mother whose son and nephew, aged 11 and 8, were among those whose remains were found, Garavito's announced confession was no comfort. "They should kill him, not put him in a prison where he'll get fat like a pig," Maria Consuelo Velez, 34, told The AP. Colombia does not have the death penalty.

Amanda Usma Pelaez, whose nephew is missing sits with family in Pereira Saturday, the day after learning that a man confessed to killing 140 children in Colombia.

Associated Press

One expert said the killings were probably facilitated by the overall environment in this strife-torn country.

UNICEF official Nidya Quiroz said that of the thousands of children who beg at stoplights and walk unattended, many are refugees from the growing violence between leftist rebels and right-wing paramilitary groups. "These children are living in constant fear and danger," she said.

COME ALIVE ST. CROIX

REVIVAL CRUSADE

"COME ALIVE ST. CROIX", a revival crusade, is scheduled for November 7-21, 1999 in a 1200 seat tent which will be located on the FREE WILL BAPTIST HIGH SCHOOL Campus.

Through a series of evening services and seminars, the Life Action Revival Team, made up of twenty persons, will through thought provoking messages and music direct our focus on practical truths out of God's Word to help make a lasting difference in our lives at such a time as this.

The crusade begins on Sunday, November 7 at 7 p.m. and will continue each night at 7 p.m. Monday through Friday. This crusade will feature special instructional messages, family seminars, youth seminars, and special discussion times. At the same time, special meetings are going to be taking place for children four years old to six grade. Other sessions will be held to help the youth, college and career, and adults.

These meetings are specially designed to help our island at this difficult time and by the help of God is guaranteed to yield results.

Come and see and you will want to keep coming to the end.

Iranian reformer goes on trial

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — A popular reformist went on trial in Iran Saturday, in what was seen as a bid by hard-liners to cast him aside before key legislative elections in February.

Abdollah Nouri, a middle-ranking cleric and close ally of President Mohammad Khatami, is being tried in a special clerical court, said the official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Dubai.

Nouri is a former interior minister and head of the popular Khordad daily newspaper. The charges he faces are some of the most serious ever brought against a senior politician in Iran's Islamic government.

They include insulting Islamic sanctities and opposing the teachings of Iran's revered revolutionary leader, the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, through his paper. A 44-page indictment also charges him with publishing lies and advocating better ties with Iran's archenemies, the United States and Israel.

The trial is yet another twist in an ongoing power struggle between hard-liners and Khatami's reformist allies.

The hard-liners, already losing popularity amid growing demands for reform, are fighting for survival in February's elections for the Majlis, or parliament. Khatami's allies are expected to sweep the polls if the elections are fair. The hard-liners are trying to use the judiciary and other institutions they control to disqualify leading reformists from running.

Nouri was certain to win a seat in parliament at the polls. Hard-liners focused their attacks on him after learning that reformist groups wanted him to contest the position of Majlis speaker.

Hard-liner Ali Akbar Nateq-Nouri has been the speaker of the 270-seat house since 1990.

David Hamilton Jackson, St. Croix's Man of the Millennium

Cherra Heyliger
Culturally Speaking

Personally speaking, David Hamilton Jackson ranks among the greatest Crucian patriots of all time. David Hamilton Jackson's St. Croix's "Man of the millennium." David Hamilton Jackson came on the scene. David Hamilton Jackson — "The U.S. Virgin Islands Man of a thousand years." Jackson was born just six years after the "St. Croix Fireburn."

He must have heard his parents and friends discussing all about the social upheavals on St. Croix as he grew up. Boys of his time must have discussed and discussed what their future was going to be like. D. Hamilton Jackson seemed to have been highly inspired by God and by men.

If you really do some diligent research on this Crucian patriot you will find him almost restless like someone possessed by the Holy Spirit to go on and on and on. To rise to heights that most people of that time feared to test. Personally speaking, the acquisition of land by and for the people of the St. Croix Labor Union in those very early years of basic human rights extended to former slaves really stands out. The acquisition of the many estates and who they were purchased from can all be attested to by a trip to the Office of the Recorder of Deeds right here on St. Croix. You need not journey to Denmark to see the records, which show everything.

It was fascinating to find out how many people were leaving St. Croix and getting rid of their large land holdings. It seems quite evident that Jackson's parents educated him very well. In Rev. Aldersley Papers on Jackson he explained how D. Hamilton Jackson's father used the Holy Scriptures to teach the young adult. At one point it was believed that Jackson had become so knowledgeable in the Christian religion that he was encouraged by the Moravian brethren to become a minister.

Jackson had to have been a highly intelligent person from boyhood into adulthood. Can you believe that a son of slaves was specially selected by his peers to represent the people of St. Croix and the entire Danish West Indies, before the government of Denmark? It seems almost unbelievable knowing the conditions of those times. Jackson and the St. Croix Labor Union were coming into prominence just a few years before the Danish flag was lowered and the flag of the United States began flying over these islands.

Jackson and the St. Croix Labor Union reached great heights by 1915. By 1917 Denmark was gone and the United States had taken over. One need not be a historian or a social scientist to understand what such a change created, and remember it was the Department of the Navy to which the United States president had assigned the islands. Jackson was not alone. He had many highly intelligent men and women who fully supported his movement.

Don't fool yourselves — many of the early supporters of D. Hamilton Jackson later became intimidated and had to stay away from the movement. Our great grandmothers and our great grandfathers used to tell us all those true stories about the movement. Yes! There was lots of blood, sweat and tears.

In certain circles, D. Hamilton Jackson was called down to the lowest but, by his blood, sweat and tears, he has proved to have been one of St. Croix's greatest patriots.

The Sunday when Jackson returned from Denmark and landed at Frederiksted was one of the greatest celebrations ever seen on St. Croix. The first grand celebration of Liberty Day (Freedom of the Press) was first held at Mannings Bay. There is so much that should be taught in the schools about Jackson and other great sons and daughters of the soil and is not being taught — it makes many of us Crucians feel sick at times. Our children need to know more about him and many, many others.

This weekend we are honoring the memory of the great D. Hamilton Jackson who was teacher, judge, councilman, lawyer and labor union leader. Let's not just stop with the superficial part of his life. Let us find out more about him so that we can find out more about ourselves.

Have a jolly good weekend!

Beware the buzzing honeybees

USVI — Look out for bees. That's the latest alert from the VI Department of Agriculture, which has been receiving an "increased number of telephones calls" reporting bee sightings.

The insects in question are being called European Honeybees, not the dreaded Africanized Honeybee, also know as the killer bee.

Nonetheless, the department is warning territory residents to make things less hospitable for the invaders. The advice is to fill potential nesting cavities (like holes in trees and outside walls of houses), placed wire netting in the tops of down spouts and openings around plumbing lines that come into the house. Piles of debris (and junked cars) are also homes for the creatures.

All great prophets have seen the coming of 'The Kingdom of God"

Jerry Weninger

Spirituality

The driving force behind the civilizing of human nature, Baha'u'llah asserts, has been successive interventions of the Divine in history. It has been through this influence that the innate moral and spiritual faculties of humanity have been gradually developed and the advancement of civilization made possible.

It is an intriguing fact that each major world religion — Hinduism, Judaism, Zorastrianism, Buddhism, Christianity and Islam — has given birth to a great civilization.

Each of these religious systems arose from the teachings of a single remarkable individual. Moses was the founder of Judaism, Jesus of Christianity, Muhammad of Islam, Krishna of Hinduism, Buddha of Buddhism and Zoroaster of Zorastrianism. These spiritual guides or manifestations of God are easily the most influential figures in history, for it is they who shaped and inspired the civilizations that followed them. Their lives and teachings display uncanny similarities.

Each claimed to derive his influence and authority directly from God. Each was known for saintly character and vast intuitive knowledge. Each was bitterly opposed by the civil and religious authorities of his time. Each attracted a small community of followers who, often after centuries of struggle, triumphed over persecution to establish their faith as a major force in society. Each taught the same spiritual concepts regarding belief in God, life after death, prayer, self-discipline, ethical principles such as the Golden Rule, and the like. Each, however, modified the previous religion's social laws and regulations according to the needs of the changed time. Each reaffirmed the divine origin of previous religions, and each promised that God would send future messengers with new and fuller revelations.

The most remarkable parallel among these religions is found in their prophecies concerning the "last days." Each faith anticipates a culmination of human history when the earth will be transformed into paradise. Cataclysmic changes will produce the "Kingdom of God on earth." The various religions will be gathered under "one fold and one shepherd" and "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord." Substantially identical prophecies abound not only in the Old and New Testaments but in the scriptures of all the world's historic faiths.

These same prophecies, with one voice, foretell the appearance of a World Reformer or Divine teacher destined to initiate the promised changes. The central hope of every world faith revolves around the coming of such a spiritual leader, often identified as the "return" of the founder. In Judaism this Promised One is known as the Lord of Hosts, in Christianity as the return of Christ; in Islam as the Mihdi or Twelfth Iman; in Hinduism as the return of Krishna or the Kalki Avatar; in Buddhism as the fifth Buddha; and in Zoroastrianism as the promised Shah-Baharam.

The histories, teachings and prophecies of these religions offer parallels far too numerous and too remarkable to be explained as mere coincidence. Does this not suggest that all of them are truly divine in origin, that their founders were each inspired by a merciful God as agents of one vast civilizing process guiding humanity towards maturity? Would it not follow that their latter-day prophecies foreshadowing the radical transformation of society through the influence of a promised redeemer, all point to the same Manifestation of God?

Baha'is believe that such is indeed the case. The hallmark of their faith is acceptance of Baha'u'llah's claim that he himself is the Promised One of all religions. "The Revelation which, from time immemorial, hath been acclaimed as the purpose and promise of all the prophets of God, and the most cherished desire of his messengers, hath now been revealed unto men, "writes Baha'u'llah. "The advent of such a Revelation hath been heralded in all the sacred scriptures. Behold how, not withstanding such an announcement, mankind hath strayed form its path and shut out itself from its glory."

Baha'u'llah says the upheavals and convulsions of today are those foretold in the sacred books of all past religions, that they are preparing the world for the promised era of peace and justice, and that his revelation has set in motion the forces that will gradually bring it about. He has also given to the world approximately 100 volumes of guidance on how individuals and institutions can best meet the challenges of this time.

Baha'u'llah upholds the right and responsibility of each individual to verify independently his faith's central premise, namely, that "This thing is not from me, but from one who is Almighty and All-knowing." He invites seekers "to consider his clear evidence" and to "gaze, with an open and unbiased mind, on the signs of his revelation, the proofs of his mission, and the tokens of his glory. Baha'u'llah writes, "The evidence of his effulgent glory are now actually manifest. It behoveth you to ascertain whether or not such a light hath appeared." If this claim is true, then clearly it marks the most important turning point in human history.

Jerry Weninger is vice-president of the Interfaith Coalition and a member of the Baha'i community He is also a teacher in the public school system.

Armenians mourn murdered leaders

Prime minister, seven others were shot to death Wednesday in parliament

YEREVAN, Armenia (AP) — Thousands of Armenians packed Yerevan's central square on Saturday to mourn the prime minister and seven others who were gunned down in parliament.

Soldiers carried the open coffins through a throng of about 20,000 people in Freedom Square and into the black crepe-draped opera house on Saturday morning. They were laid side by side on the stage, with large portraits of the victims propped in front and candelabras lit behind.

The families of Prime Minister Vazgen Sarkisian, parliamentary speaker Karen Demirchian and the other officials and legislators who were killed Wednesday sat in the front rows of the opera house, while dignitaries including Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin filed in and placed flowers near the coffins.

An orchestra and choir played mournful music by Johann Sebastian Bach, Franz Schubert and Armenian composers.

Members of the crowd were rotated in small groups every 10 minutes or so to sit behind the mourning families. Many wept. Others filed slowly by the stage.

"Our people have suffered an irreparable loss," said Armenak Badalian, who bowed in prayer before the coffins.

Putin expressed condolences on behalf of his country, saying "today is a difficult, sad and mournful day for Armenia. Millions of Russians empathize with you."

One of the slain lawmakers, Armenak Armenakian, was buried Saturday in a churchyard near his home in Yerevan. The seven others will be interred today in four separate cemeteries.

The victims were killed Wednesday when five gunmen burst into the parliament and opened fire. Shortly before they surrendered Thursday after an all-night standoff with security forces, the gunmen said they had taken the action to punish corrupt officials.

The attackers have been charged with terrorism and attempting to weaken state power. The charges carry a prison sentence of 10-15 years with confiscation of property, or the death penalty — although there has been a moratorium on capital punishment since 1994.

Following Sarkisian's death, President Robert Kocharian has assumed the powers of prime minister until he names a new premier, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported Saturday.

Red Cross says Russian rockets killed civilians

Agency says clearly marked relief vehicles were also fired upon

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — A Russian airstrike on a convoy of civilians fleeing Chechnya killed at least 25 people, including two Red Cross workers, the Red Cross reported Saturday.

The report came as Russian jets and artillery continued to pound the breakaway republic on Saturday in an attempt to root out Islamic militants.

Russian forces shelled the capital, Grozny, from hills 6 miles northwest of the city, concentrating their fire on suspected guerrilla positions in the northern and southern outskirts. In the east, they were closing in on Gudermes, Chechnya's second largest city. They also shelled the mountains near the western guerrilla stronghold of Bamut.

The Red Cross said in a statement that Russian rockets on Friday hit a five-vehicle convoy near Shami-Yurt, about 12 miles west of Grozny. In addition to those killed, 70 were wounded, it said. The convoy included Red Cross vehicles, clearly marked on their roofs with the red cross emblem, the organization said.

Chechen officials had said about 50 civilians were killed in the attack.

The Russian air force denied that its planes had hit a refugee convoy. Instead, it said the target of its attack was a rebel convoy, from which militants had fired unsuccessfully on a Russian Su-25 attack jet. Two trucks packed with militants were destroyed, the air force said.

Last Indonesian troops depart East Timor

DILI, East Timor (AP) — Under cover of darkness, the last Indonesian troop ship sailed out of Dili's nearly deserted harbor early Sunday, ending a bloody 24-year military engagement in East Timor.

"They are all leaving tonight," Indonesian marine Capt. Raja, who used only one name, said shortly before the rusty gray vessel slipped clear of the harbor, lit only dimly with generator-powered lights on the crumbling dock.

The departure of the Indonesian troops closes a chapter of history that has left as many as 200,000 East Timorese dead since the Indonesian invasion of the former Portuguese colony on Dec. 7, 1975. About 5,000 Indonesian troops died.

Indonesia has effectively relinquished its claim to East Timor, which was left ravaged by a wave of violence surrounding its independence referendum on Aug. 30.

Only a small contingent of Australian peacekeepers watched the scene, casting off the heavy ropes mooring the ship. A voice from the ship shouted, "Thank you, sir."

In the moments before the ship sailed at 12:55 a.m., Indonesian troops wearing heavy packs crammed themselves into the ship's already crowded hold.

The last few soldiers waded through a few feet of water to scramble aboard the tank-landing ship, the Kri Teluk Banten, as a loud speaker cried out: "The ramp is being raised."

Because the waterfront has been ruined, the scene was enveloped in almost complete darkness, save for the the generator-powered floodlights on the dock and spotlights shining from the ship.

As the ship left, two East Timorese on a motorcycle drove by, saying: "Thieves leaving in the night."

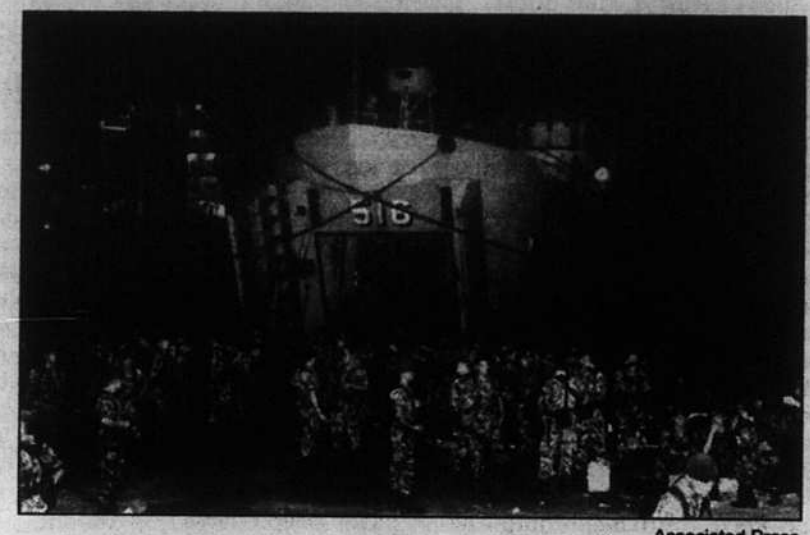

In an extraordinary farewell gesture, East Timor's rebel leader clasped hands with senior Indonesian military officers today as Indonesian forces spent their final hours in the territory they occupied for 24 years.

Guerrilla chieftain Jose Alexandre "Xanana" Gusmao and officers from the military his followers battled for years met and talked intently in a lounge at the Dili airfield, as the Indonesians were making their final preparations to leave.

An Indonesian cargo plane full of troops and equipment flew back to Jakarta, and a troop-transport ship was ready to set to sail from Dili's harbor.

The bearded, graying Gusmao, clad in neatly pressed combat fatigues, said the Indonesian departure marks the end of difficult era for both sides.

"It ends a historical error. A mistake between two countries," the 53-year-old guerrilla commander told reporters. "Now we have to look at the future."

At least 54 die in blaze in Korean port city of Inchon

INCHON, South Korea (AP) — Fire swept through a three-story building crowded with weekend diners and drinkers in a South Korean port city on Saturday, killing more than 50 people, many of them teen-agers.

Some 70 people were also injured in the blaze, which broke out in the early evening in Inchon, South Korea's second largest city, 30 miles west of Seoul, authorities said.

"I heard a blast and then saw smoke filling up the building and people scrambling out," Park Hyun-sok, a witness, said on the cable network YTN.

Most of the victims were trapped inside the second-floor beer bar and a billiard parlor on the third floor, police said. The victims were mostly high school students who were out enjoying themselves after school festivals.

"All windows facing the street in the beer bar were blocked, forcing those inside to try to flee through the only door leading to the narrow corridor," said witness Kim Jun-kyu, 58.

The building, located in an entertainment district in the city center, was about 20 years old and lacked basic fire prevention facilities such as sprinklers, state-run KBS-TV reported. Many disasters in South Korea have been blamed on lax safety regulations.

Police tentatively put the casualty figure at 54 killed and 71 injured. The death toll could rise, because some of the injured were in critical condition, they said.

The fire started in a karaoke salon in the basement and spread rapidly upward, police said, quoting witnesses. Everyone in a ground-floor restaurant managed to escape but more than 120 people in upper floors were trapped, they said.

TV footage showed firefighters carrying injured people on their backs and racing to nearby hospitals.

"The fire spread so quickly that by the time we got into the beer bar, we found many people already dead. They appeared to have suffocated from the smoke," said local police chief Park Myong-hwan.

The cause of the fire was unknown.

YTN reported that workers had been renovating the basement karaoke salon, where the fire started, and were using paint thinners.

Deadly storm pounds India for 2nd day

Hardest-hit areas still inaccessible

BALESHWAR, India (AP) — A cyclone battered a broad swath of eastern India for a second day Saturday, knocking out power and telephone lines and flattening thousands of homes.

Hundreds may have died, said officials in Orissa state, which bore the brunt of the storm. While the storm was weakening as it moved inland, it wasn't possible to assess the death toll and property damage because the area was still inaccessible and cut off from communication.

"We are treating it as a national calamity," Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee said. He said the government planned assistance equaling $23 million to the region.

As many as 1.5 million people have been displaced or affected by the storm. Just two weeks ago another cyclone battered Orissa, killing 100 people and injuring 1,000.

"Hundreds must have perished," Press Trust of India news agency quoted Orissa state Chief Minister Giridhar Gamamg as saying.

Rescue operations were thwarted as the storm pounded the area for a second day, dumping rain from eastern India to Bangladesh and parts of Myanmar. Air force helicopters and ground troops, loaded with food packets, waited for a break.

The highway leading south from Baleshwar on the state border with West Bengal was littered with fallen eucalyptus trees and swamped with water. Long lines of trucks lined up on the roadside.

Local reports said two-thirds of Baleshwar district was submerged.

Nearly 300 army engineers and doctors dispatched by land from West Bengal began rescue and relief work, Press Trust of India quoted officials as saying. On Friday, 2,000 army soldiers were flown to Bhubaneswar, Orissa's state capital, for rescue operations, it said.

Rescue ship brings island girl to South Africa for emergency care

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — An ailing child plucked from an Atlantic island by a cargo ship arrived Saturday in South Africa, where medical experts will test her siblings to find a bone marrow match.

Danni Clifford, a dark-haired, slender six-year-old, was carried down the gangplank of the Nomzi just before dawn, ending her four-day journey on the cargo ship.

The children, their grandmother and a nurse made the 2,170-mile journey from their home on the remote island of St. Helena, a British protectorate northwest of Cape Town with no airport. Danni needs emergency treatment for a rare and potentially fatal blood disorder.

Her illness might be curable with a bone marrow transplant from her brother Rhys, 8, or sister Terri, 9, who also made the voyage.

"We are keeping our fingers crossed," said Ursula Johnson, the children's grandmother.

Upon arrival, the girl looked first puzzled, then pleased, at the group of journalists who met her. She nodded her head when asked if she was feeling fine. She was then rushed by ambulance to a private clinic, where doctors will perform tests to confirm her diagnosis.

Associated Press
Six year-old Danni Clifford is carried by a paramedic as she arrives in Cape Town, South Africa Saturday for emergency treatment.

A week ago, Danni collapsed at her island home and was provisionally diagnosed with aplastic anemia, a life-threatening condition where the bones no longer contain enough marrow to make the blood required.

The Nomzi, part of a seven-ship fleet that provides weekly container service between North America and South Africa, made an emergency 360-mile, 18-hour detour to collect the children on Tuesday after a call for help.

The captain, Peter Wierling, said the child had to be transported over breaking waves to board the ship. Danni was kept in isolation to protect her from infection.

"Sometimes she (felt) not so good, the next day she was doing fine," Wierling said.

John and Cherie Clifford, the girl's parents, arrived Saturday by air from the Falklands Islands, where they are doing contract work.

"The patient is comfortable and her parents are with her," said a nurse at the Constantiaberg Medi-Clinic on the condition of anonymity.

Dr. Gayle Sherman, a Johannesburg-based blood expert, said people suffering from the condition had a good chance of survival if a suitable blood marrow donor could be found. She said Danni's siblings each had a one-in-four chance of providing a blood marrow match. However, complications such as infection could occur.

US troops in Bosnia to be reduced by 30 percent

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — About 30 percent of U.S. troops taking part in NATO-led peacekeeping forces in Bosnia will be sent home by next April, NATO officials said Saturday.

The reduction is part of an overall plan by NATO to reduce the number of troops because of improved security conditions in Bosnia, according to a statement by Maj. Gen. James Campbell, commander of Multinational Division North.

About 6,200 U.S. troops are now part of the 31,000 NATO-led peacekeeping forces in Bosnia, charged with helping to carry out the Dayton peace agreement, which ended the 1992-95 war.

The plan calls for the closure of Camp Demi, 22 miles south of Tuzla, and for some of its personnel to return to the United State. Some soldiers from Eagle Base will also return home.

The reduction will start in November.

Horoscope

By Francis Drake

ARIES
(March 21 to April 19)
Instead of worrying about what you lack, find a way to make the most of what you do possess. You'll be surprised at what a small amount of effort it really takes to entirely alter your reality.

TAURUS
(April 20 to May 20)
It's likely that you're getting so caught up in your own drama that you're forgetting to look at the bigger picture. Start putting your priorities in the right places, and make amends with a friend.

GEMINI
(May 21 to June 20)
A very charming stranger makes you an offer that seems entirely too good to be true. Research the offer extremely carefully before you accept — he could well be a wolf in sheep's clothing.

CANCER
(June 21 to July 22)
You are feeling particularly calm, clear-minded and in control of your destiny. Your insight will be of enormous value to a friend who is trapped in an unfortunate situation.

LEO
(July 23 to Aug. 22)
You will need to be extremely cautious and tactful when dealing with a difficult family member. Be patient and keep communicating your feelings — you'll get through to them, eventually.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22)
Your actions have an adverse effect on another, much to your distress. While it's wonderful that you're so sensitive to other peoples' needs, it isn't really your problem.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)
It's important that you make time for creative projects and thinking, since a period of tremendous inspiration is upon you. Let yourself go with whatever comes, rather than trying to force life into a mold.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)
A relationship which is usually tranquil and loving unexpectedly becomes quite troubled. Don't let an argument go unresolved for too long, lest a rift become permanent.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
An action that you took some time ago finally generates an equal reaction. You find yourself delighted to commit to a new course of action, large-scale project or meaningful relationship.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
Your biggest problem right now is choosing between all the many social invitations being extended to you. Don't let a bout of apathy get in the way of making the most of a good time to come.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
Look sharp; this is your time to shine in the sun. Everyone is drawn to your magnetic presence — single Aquarians should make the most of this unique opportunity to woo new lovers.

PISCES
(Feb. 19 to March 20)
While your intentions are good, you may just be muddling an already complicated situation. Bear in mind the proverb, "Too many cooks spoil the broth," and let the head chef do his or her thing.

Locket with picture of baby brings pain for rape victim

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: A pregnant 18-year-old wrote to you because her husband was having a hard time accepting the fact that she wears a locket with a photo of the baby boy she gave up for adoption three years before. You advised her that you thought it was because the necklace "served as a constant reminder that 'he wasn't the first man in her life.'"

Abby, that girl told you she had been raped and the baby she gave up was a result of a crime committed against her. How can you even insinuate that the heartless coward who fathered this child was a "man in her life"?

I can assure you that a rapist, and the experience of being raped, becomes a permanent part of your life. However, when a child is raped, that rapist does NOT become the "first man in her life."

I hope you will print this letter along with an apology for offending all victims of rape. — TAMIE IN MARIETTA, GA.

DEAR TAMIE: After an editor expressed concern about my terminology after that letter and answer were sent to my newspapers, I issued a correction. However, not all of them used my alternative wording. If you or anyone else was offended by my language, I apologize. "First man in your life" was not intended to imply that the baby was the result of consensual sex. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: In response to the young wife whose husband wants her to remove the locket containing the picture of the baby she gave up for adoption, my next question would be: How dare he? What does he want her to give up next — her friends and family? If he can't see that the locket is important to her, he may never see ANYTHING that is important to her.

My feeling is that he's using this as emotional blackmail because he is insecure in himself. I have had three children, and never loved any of them less than the others. Is this husband an only child? If not, have him ask his mother if she loved any of her children less because she already had one. A parent's heart is too big for something that petty, and "Too Young" has already proven how big her heart is.

This young woman should hold her head up proudly, because her daughter will, too — and so will her son. She has already proven what a terrific parent she is. She did not blame her unborn child and gave him the greatest possible gift, life!

Keep your locket, dear lady; you earned it. — INSULTED PARENT OF FOUR, PHOENIX

DEAR INSULTED PARENT: I second the motion. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Most lockets have room for TWO pictures. I think she should add the daughter's photograph to the one of her son. Or, even better — the husband should buy a new locket and put the pictures of both children in it. — DIANE D., LAKELAND, FLA.

DEAR DIANE D.: That's a wonderful idea. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: That young woman's husband should applaud and support her for getting through the terrible ordeal of rape in such a mature and responsible way. As for her loving her new daughter as much as her son, I'm sure she will discover that a mother's love is like no other — and can be equally distributed to all her children. Her insight and thoughtfulness prove that she is already well-suited for the job. — DANIELLE M., FAIRLESS HILLS, PA.

DEAR DANIELLE: You've summed it up very well.

Author tells about accident in interview

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Horror author Stephen King says he's thankful to be alive after being hit by a van last June, but it has been a struggle to return to his craft of writing.

King

"After the accident, I was totally incapable of writing," King says in an interview with NBC's Katie Couric to be aired Monday. Excerpts were released Friday.

"At first it was as if I'd never done this in my life," he said. "It was like starting over again from square one."

King, 52, of Bangor, Maine, has had multiple surgeries and faces a long rehabilitation. He was hit by the van while walking along a country road.

The interview, conducted earlier this month, suggests King has had much more difficulty writing than was previously revealed. In late July, he said he had begun writing an hour-and-a-half a day.

His latest book, "Hearts in Atlantis," which was just released, was written before the accident and already is a best seller.

Former Playboy Playmate is bankrupt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Playboy Playmate Anna Nicole Smith broke down on the witness stand when asked about her late husband's burial.

Questions that shattered Smith's composure during a bankruptcy hearing Friday focused on why she never claimed the ashes of billionaire oilman J. Howard Marshall II, her husband of 14 months, after his death in August 1995 at age 90.

She said after his death, a legal tug-of-war developed between herself and the billionaire's son, E. Pierce Marshall.

Smith said she wanted her husband buried, but the younger Marshall wanted him cremated. The ultimate decision came down to an order which she called "disgusting."

"He ordered half his ashes be granted to me and the other half be granted to Pierce Marshall, and I couldn't deal with that," she said, crying softly.

Testimony in the bankruptcy hearing is scheduled to resume next week. Smith's attorneys contend fraudulent handling of her late husband's estate left the former model broke, and she is owed as much as 820 million.

Ricky Martin says stop the bombing

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Puerto Rican pop star Ricky Martin has a message for President Clinton: Stop bombing runs on the territory's island of Vieques.

Martin

"Puerto Rico is united in this cause and I'm part of it," Martin said in Friday's El Mundo newspaper.

The "Livin' La Vida Loca" singer has a tentative meeting scheduled next week with Clinton when he is in Washington for a benefit concert.

The Navy owns two-thirds of Vieques, a tiny island off the eastern coast of Puerto Rico. The military has conducted exercises using live bombs and other artillery on Vieques for decades.

Opposition to the bombing intensified in April when a Marine Corps jet dropped two bombs off target and killed a civilian security guard. Exercises were suspended after protesters set up camps on the range.

Simpson's invitation to CSU is withdrawn

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — A California State University at Fullerton professor withdrew his invitation to O.J. Simpson to address his criminology class after the head of his department raised concerns.

Simpson was to speak to Professor James Lasley's criminology and delinquency class this week. But Lasley agreed with Phillip Gianos, acting chair of the department, that the visit would require extra security and planning for an overflow crowd.

Simpson was acquitted of the 1994 murders of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ron Goldman. He was found liable in a civil case filed after the murders.

"He's a walking criminology case," Lasley said, adding that he would still try to work out the logistics of a Simpson lecture.

Reeve is thorn in side of scientists

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Christopher Reeve may be paralyzed and in a wheelchair, but it doesn't stop him from getting under the skin of medical researchers.

"I'm really quite a thorn in the side of scientists," Reeve says in an interview scheduled to air Monday on "Dateline NBC."

"They're doing well," Reeve, 47, says of the researchers.

Caribs end fine season with drub of Pirates

RASHIDI CLENANCE

ST. CROIX — A year ago when tackle football resurfaced on St. Croix most fans assumed that Central High School would return to the prominence they established almost two decades before. Of course they didn't, with the Educational Complex Barracudas steamrolling the competition.

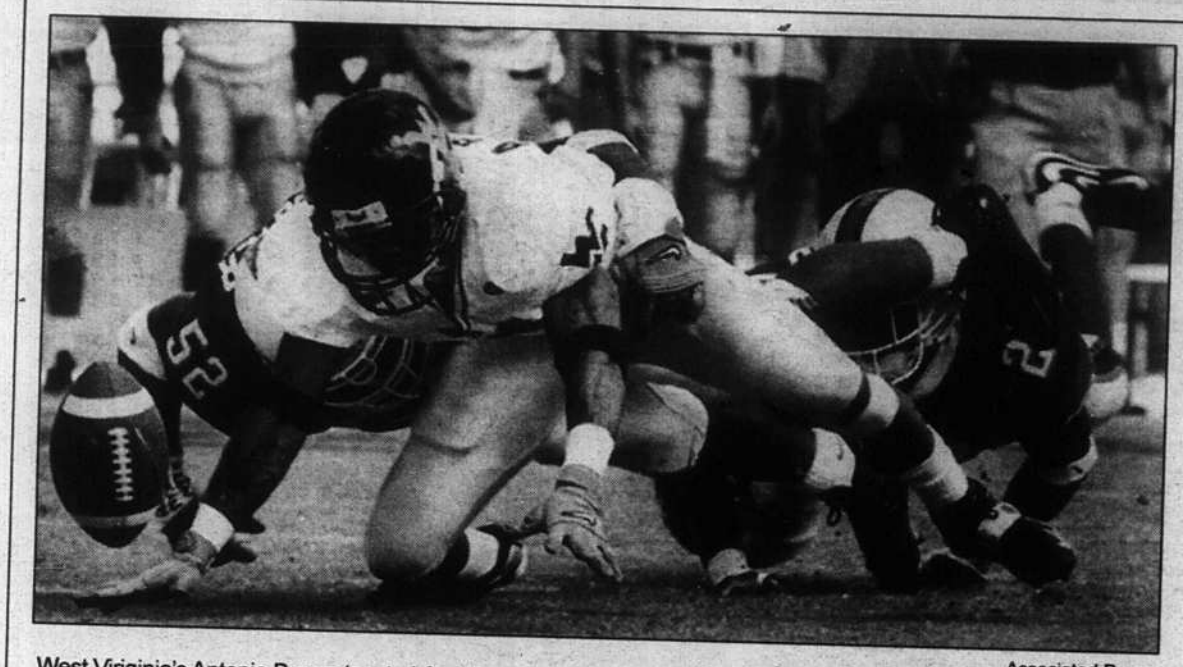

This year, behind the instruction of head coach Pastor Dwayne Murphy, the Central High Caribs returned the favor and hurt the Private School Pirates feelings along the way. The Caribs finished the regular season Saturday with a 38-6 win to cap off a perfect season in front of a small crowd on their home field.

The Pirates got their lone highlight early when Brian Pederson caught a short pass and ran 55 yards for the score. At the end of the first quarter, the score was 6-6. By halftime, the game was over, with the Caribs taking a 28-6 lead into the intermission.

The Caribs got it done on both sides of the ball. Patrick McFarland, Carlos Samuel, Edison Frazer and Eugene Brown all scored offensive touchdowns. The defense did their share with Devon Murphy and Carlos Samuel both getting interceptions, while Kenny Rene was outstanding with four solo tackles, an assist, a hurry and a blocked punt. The Caribs' special teams were also involved when Frazer blocked a punt and returned it for a score.

Once again the Pirates' offensive line didn't allow quarterback Steve Hutchins the time to show his skills at the position. Hutchins may be the most skillful quarterback in the three-team league, but one would never know by watching a Pirates game. The multi-talented Country Day senior will get his last chance to show his worth Saturday in his team's playoff game against the Barracudas.

The Caribs will be awaiting the winner of the semi-final game.

Hurricanes roar back once again

MIAMI (AP) — Miami is becoming comfortable falling behind.

Kenny Kelly completed 21 of 34 passes for 268 yards and two second-half touchdowns as No. 23 Miami beat West Virginia 28-20 on Saturday, the Hurricanes' second come-from-behind victory in as many weeks.

"Sometimes you fall into a trap," Miami coach Butch Davis said. "When you have big-play people, you always know you can come back because there is always someone to bail you out."

Miami (4-3, 2-0 Big East) trailed 13-0 at halftime, the first time it had been scoreless at home at halftime in 15 years.

The deficit wasn't insurmountable to a team that overcame a 28-point deficit in beating Boston College 31-28 last Saturday.

On first down at the Mountaineers 44, Kelly found Reggie Wayne for a 27-yard gain. James Jackson broke a tackle and rambled 17 yards for a touchdown on the next play.

West Virginia (3-5, 2-2) struck right back, driving 80 yards in eight plays, capped by Avon Cobourne's 5-yard run.

Kelly shrugged off his only interception of the game and took Miami on a 52-yard scoring drive. Kelly completed all three of his passes to tight end Bubba Franks, including an 8-yard corner route for the touchdown.

Kelly's best play of the game came on Miami's next possession.

With Miami trailing 20-14, Kelly, facing second-and-6 at the West Virginia 9, rolled right and escaped the grasp of Antwan Lake with a spin move. Kelly rolled back left and found running back Clinton Portis wide open for the game-tying score.

"He got his hands on me and the first thing that came to my mind was to protect the ball and take the sack," said Kelly, who missed the majority of practice last week with a sprained left ankle. "But at the last minute, I got away and was going to throw the ball away. Then I saw Portis in the end zone, so I thought I'd throw the ball up and then he'll catch it."

Portis did, and Andy Crosland's extra point gave Miami the lead.

Portis broke a tackle and ran 45 yards with about two minutes remaining and added a 1-yard plunge on the next play to seal the victory.

"It's been a roller-coaster season and we haven't been able to get into a rhythm," said Franks, who had five catches for 74 yards.

Portis, subbing for the injured Jackson, finished with 104 yards on 17 carries.

West Virginia led 13-0 at the half, but it could have been worse.

The Mountaineers had three turnovers, including a fumble at the Hurricanes 5. Marc Bulger threw two first-half interceptions after completing his first pass to Jerry Porter for a 43-yard score.

Boston College can't get the ball, yet knocks off Orangemen 24-23

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — When you reel off four drives that take 55 plays and use up more than 25 minutes on the scoreboard clock against a 19-point underdog on your home field, you should win the game. Not Syracuse.

That's what the Orangemen did on Saturday against Boston College, yet lost 24-23. John Matich kicked a 34-yard field goal with 2:57 remaining for the victory.

It was the first victory by Boston College (6-2, 3-2 Big East) in five games against Syracuse (5-3, 2-2), which lost its second straight. It also guaranteed the Eagles a winning season for the first time since 1994 and the sixth victory made them eligible for a bowl.

It was sweet redemption for the heartache of a week ago, when the Eagles blew a 28-0 third-quarter lead and lost to Miami.

"This shows a lot," said quarterback Tim Hasselbeck, whose 40-yard completion to Derrick Crittenden set up the winning kick. "It was tough for me to get over that game. It shows a lot about the types of guys we have on this team."

Syracuse, humiliated 62-0 by No. 3 Virginia Tech two weeks ago, got just three fields goals by Nate Trout and one touchdown on the fateful four drives. The loss sent the Orangemen even deeper into the doldrums, but at least Temple and Rutgers remain on the schedule.

Two Kansas City Chiefs arrested

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Two members of the Kansas City Chiefs were arrested in separate incidents Friday night and early Saturday, police said.

Rison

Wide receiver Andre Rison was one of six people arrested early Saturday for fighting outside a Kansas City nightspot, said Sgt. Floyd Mitchell, a Kansas City police spokesman.

Just hours earlier, reserve tight end Lonnie Johnson was arrested for assault involving a female police officer posing as a prostitute.

Both players were released on bail.

In Rison's case, Mitchell said officers were called about 2 a.m. Saturday to a disturbance at the Have A Nice Day Cafe in the city's Westport entertainment district. Security guards detained several people before police made the arrests.

"Let the legal system run its course."

Bob Moore, Chiefs spokesman

Mitchell said the six were taken to police headquarters and booked for disorderly conduct by fighting in public. No further details about the fight were released.

Chiefs spokesman Bob Moore said he had no information about the incident. He said it would be a personal matter involving an individual, not the team, and that the team policy is not to comment.

"We don't talk about these issues," Moore said. "Let the legal system run its course."

Johnson was arrested just after 8 p.m. Friday in an area where undercover officers were operating a prostitution sting. Johnson stopped his car near an officer posed as a prostitute, who approached Johnson and started talking with him.

Mitchell said Johnson reached over, allegedly grabbed the officer and was arrested for assault.

Rison, 32, signed with the Chiefs as a free agent in 1997, after being released by the Green Bay Packers.

He played earlier for Jacksonville, Cleveland, Atlanta and Indianapolis.

Rison, a five-time Pro Bowl selection, has not been a factor for the Chiefs this season, with only seven catches for 75 yards and no touchdowns. He caught 112 passes in his first season with the team.

Barras chomp Chickenhawks

RASHIDI CLENANCE

ST. CROIX — Saturday night in the Central High School gym was a very eventful one. The Central High School boys' varsity volleyball tournament was in full swing with a pair of barn-burners to close out the day.

The Central High Caribs needed five sets to down the feisty Country Day Tigers in the fifth match of the day. As good as the Tigers — Caribs match was, the crowd anticipated a match that would be as good, if not better, between the Educational Complex Barracudas and the Charlotte Amalie Chickenhawks. The interscholastic heavyweights did not disappoint.

The Barracudas won the five set thriller 25-14, 25-17, 14-25, 18-25, 15-11. St. Croix's interscholastic leaders were sharp in the opening set. The Chickenhawks, on the other hand, were sluggish and had a hard time getting their offensive schemes in sync. The Barracudas had no problems with their offense early, registering 12 kills to start the match, four of which belonged to Jelani Richards.

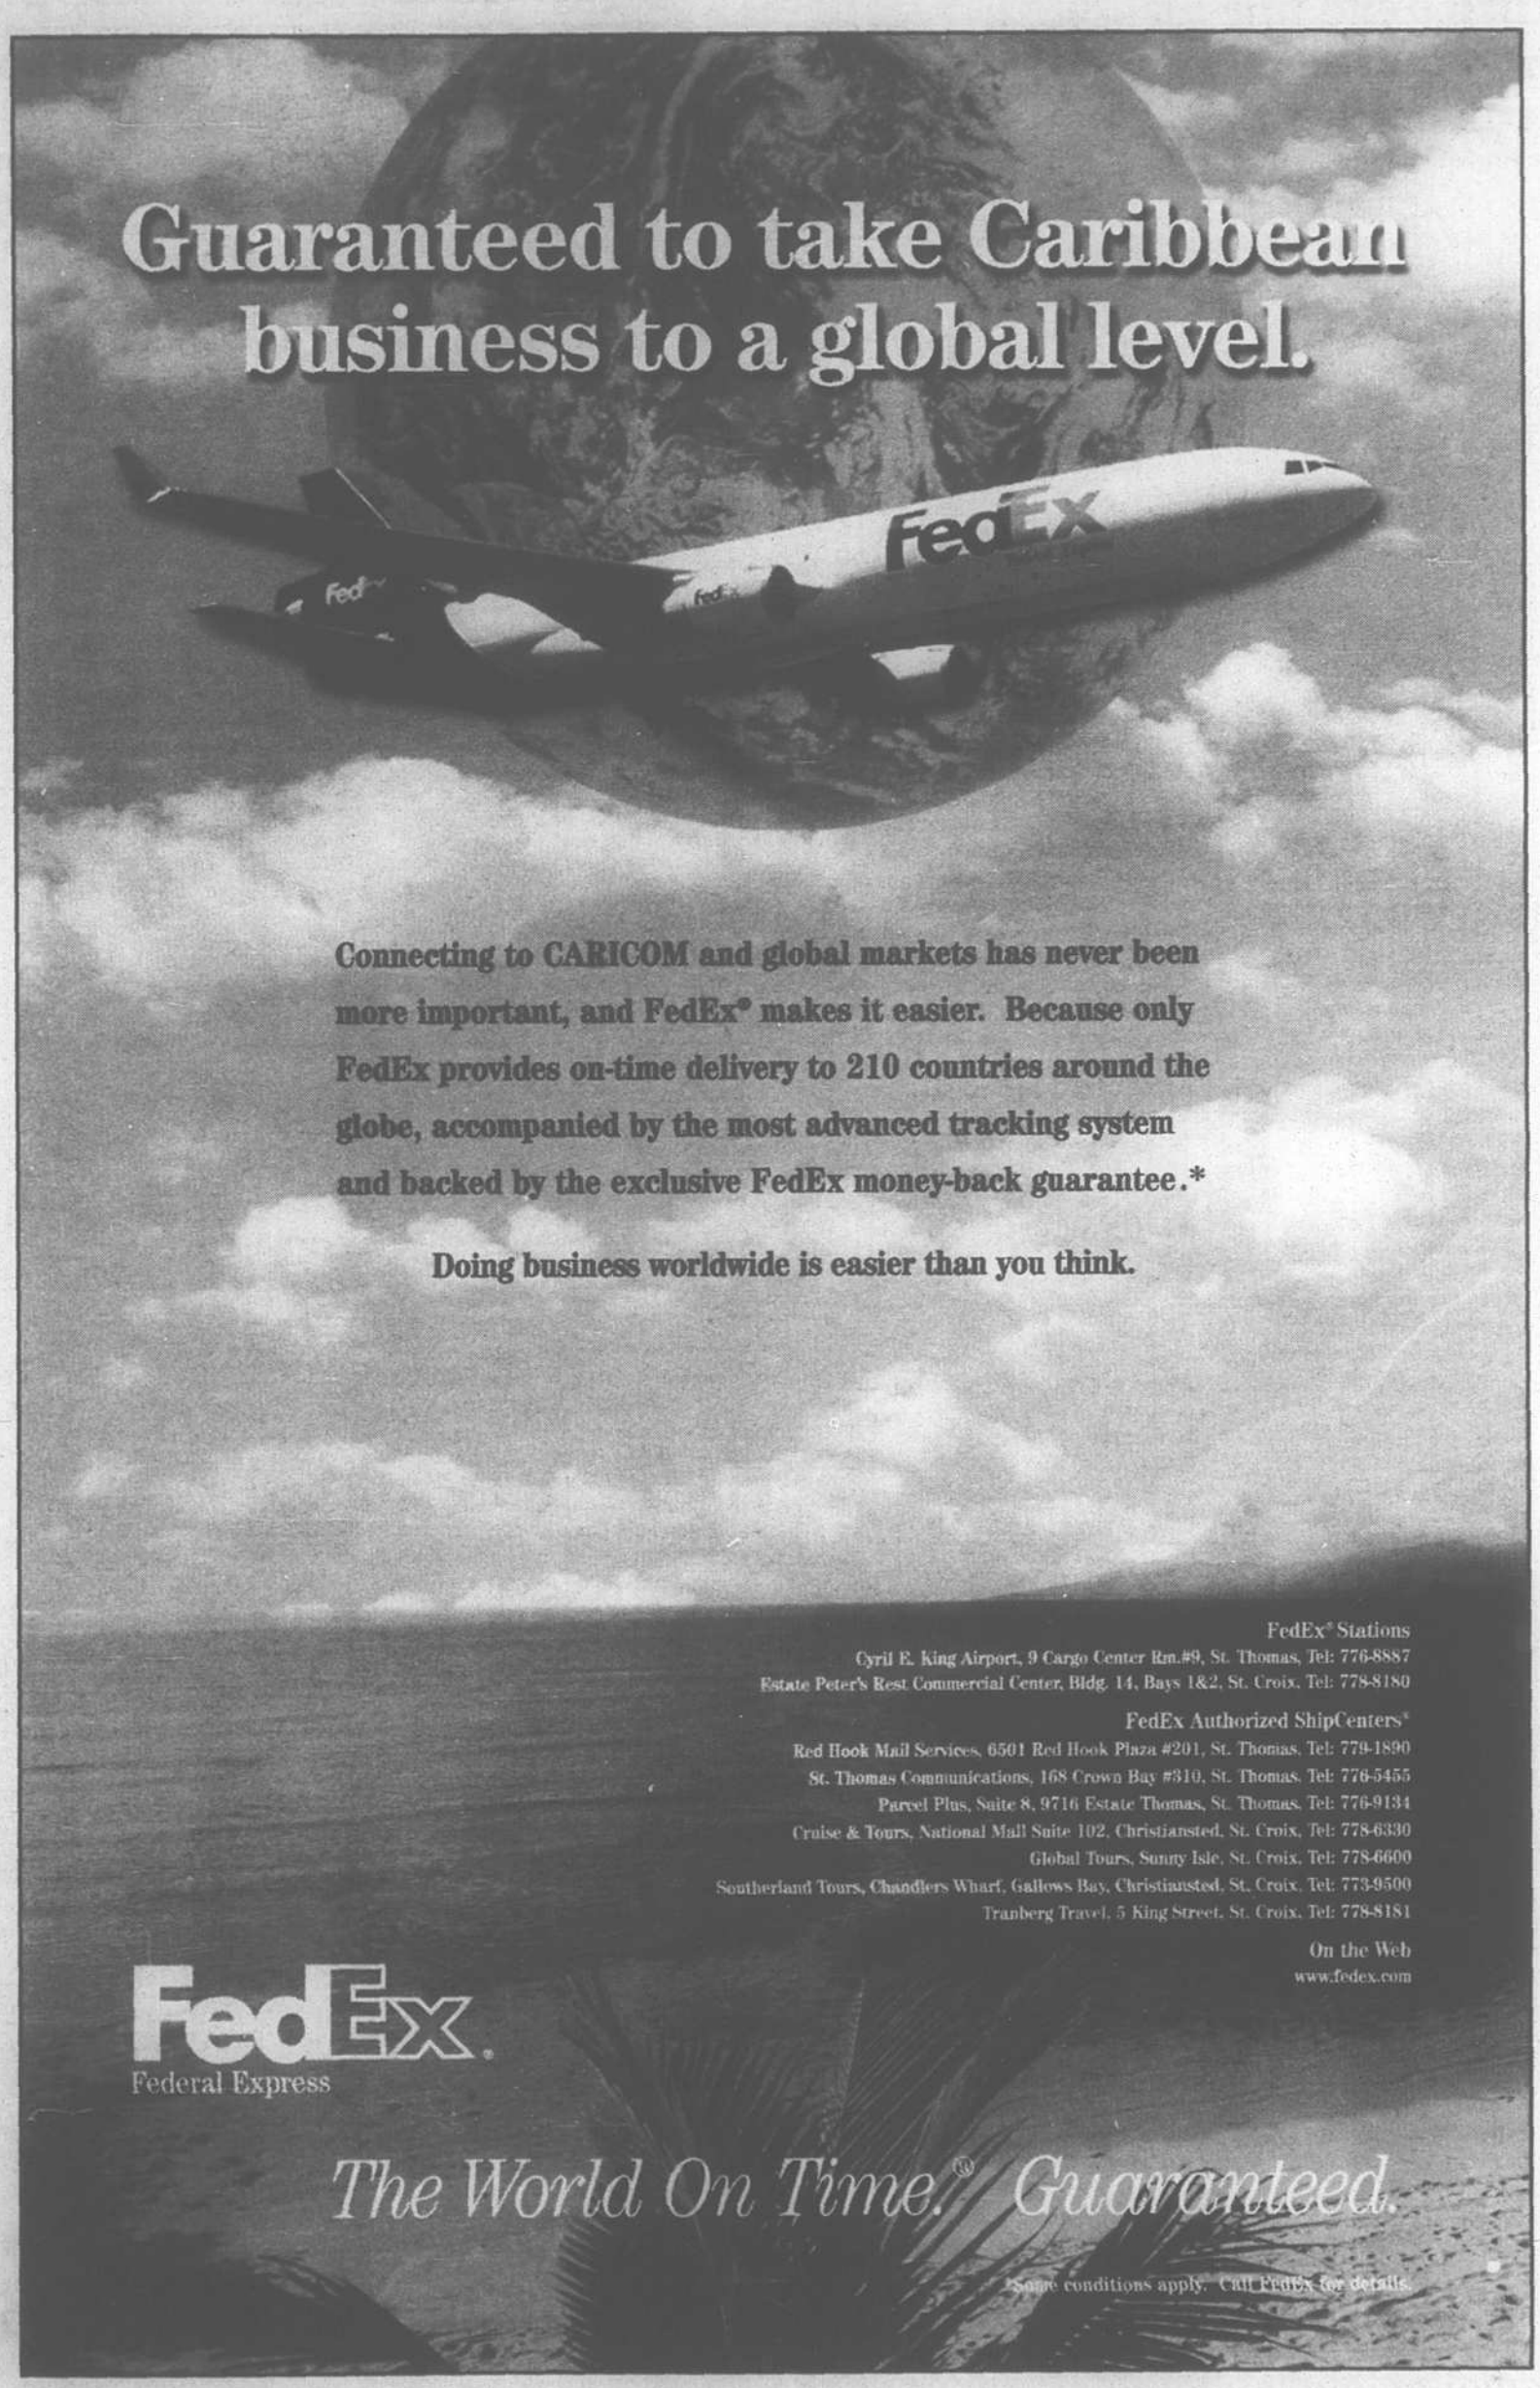

In the second set, the Chickenhawks started to get their offense together. Shimoi VanHolten provided the early spark that kept his team close, but the Barracudas were able to surge near the end of the set. By the third set the visitors' offense was on point. For that reason, fans had to look no farther than the Chickenhawks' little general, Devon Daniel.

Daniel raised his play while orchestrating his teammates, particularly on offense. Despite being one of the shortest players on his team, the Chickenhawks' floor leader stepped up the defense with consecutive blocks that gave his team confidence as well as a 10-17 lead. The Chickenhawks cruised to victory.

The fourth set was more Daniel. Daniel showed off his athleticism with a mid-game hitting clinic. The Chickenhawks captain led his team with five kills and two assists to even the match at two sets.

It was do or be done in the fifth set and the Barracudas did what was needed. Despite four net violations, the Barracudas were able to outlast the Chickenhawks. Alex Sanchez did a tremendous job setting, resulting in 13 kills for Richards, nine for Mumba Rivera, seven for Raol Caeser and five for Oswad Peterson.

The St. Thomas interscholastic leaders were led by VanHolten's 10 kills. The Chickenhawks will play the Caribs at 11:30 a.m. to start Sunday's action. In other action: the Barracudas will take on the Tigers at 1 p.m. and the Manor Eagles will play Good Hope at 2:30 p.m. The Bronze medal game starts at 4 p.m. to be followed by the Gold medal match.

NBA 1999-00: Would Jordan recognize the league?

BY CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Imagine if Michael Jordan returned to basketball, but the NBA told him he had to take an aptitude test first. Here are your questions, Mike:

—What do triangles, Los Angeles and Kobe Bryant have in common? (Hint: Ask Shaq, or call your old coach.)

—Who is America's Team? (Hint: Ask Sacramento's Jason Williams, whose apparel outsold yours last season).

—Who is Team Microsoft? (Hint: Call Scottie Pippen in Portland.)

—What is a cornrow? (Hint: Ask Allen Iverson or see Spree in New York.)

—Who is the best player? (Hint: It's not you. It rhymes with Him.)

It's doubtful Jordan would go 5-for-5 on the entrance exam for the 1999-00 season. But the player who ruled the '90s would have to admit that the NBA landscape has changed dramatically since he hung up his No. 23 jersey just nine months ago, a period that seems like an eternity.

There have been 25 trades involving 79 players since the end of last season, and all the maneuvering, disassembling and retooling has one common goal: to get teams to a championship level that's far easier to attain in what has become a wide-open NBA.

"There are a lot of tough teams, especially in the Western Conference, that have really stocked up to make a run at the title," said Tim Duncan of the defending champion San Antonio Spurs. "Everybody, they're looking at us now. They want to take us out of the top spot."

Nowhere is that more evident than in Portland, where Microsoft co-founder and Trail Blazers owner Paul Allen has added three veterans in Pippen, Steve Smith and Detlef Schrempf. As a result, Portland has become the preseason favorite a season after reaching the conference finals.

The Lakers have overhauled their system by bringing in coach Phil Jackson, who led Chicago to six championships and now will try to make Shaquille O'Neal, Kobe Bryant and Glen Rice — and who knows, maybe even Dennis Rodman — proficient in the triangle offense.

The Sacramento Kings, the highest-scoring and most exciting team to watch last season, have added Nick Anderson to a starting lineup that will appear on national television a previously unheard of 17 times — hence the moniker "America's Team."

"I think the West is stronger. It's a powerhouse right now," the Kings' Chris Webber said. "It seems like the powers have switched to the West."

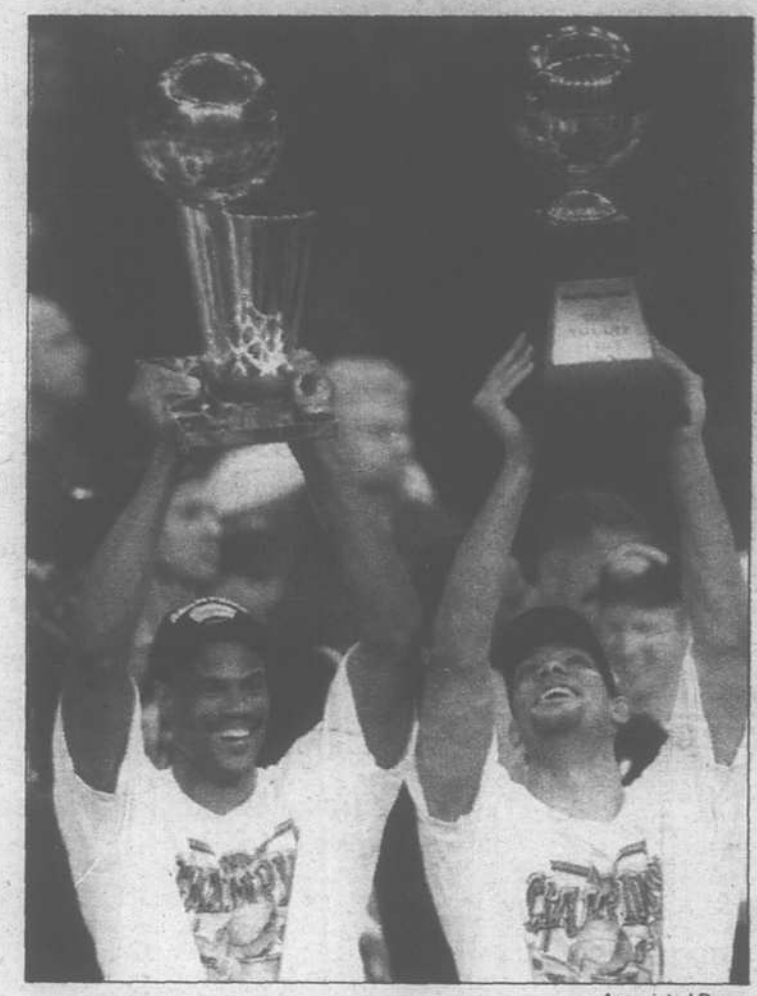

In the East, the New York Knicks proved last season how much of a crapshoot the conference has become.

The Knicks will have virtually the same team returning.

The Indiana Pacers tinkered with their team by trading one of their big men, Antonio Davis, to Toronto for teen-ager Jonathan Bender. The Miami Heat also made minimal changes to a team that has won the Atlantic Division three straight years.

It was a different story, however, for the Orlando Magic and, to a lesser degree, the Atlanta Hawks — two of the conference's most consistent winning teams for the past several years.

There are several rules changes designed to improve the flow of the game, the most noticeable of which will be a ban on forearm checking. Referees also have been told to crack down on overly physical play away from the ball.

The All-Star game in Oakland, Calif., will feature the return of the slam dunk contest, and three spots will be open on the all-NBA Olympic team that will compete at the Sydney Games next September.

One of those spots figures to go to O'Neal, who will be asked to become more of a thinker and passer in Jackson's new Lakers offense. O'Neal addressed one team problem over the summer by attending Bryant's 21st birthday party, and the two say they have put their differences aside.

"People who say that Shaq won't fit into the offense are mistaken," Jackson said. "Wilt Chamberlain thrived in this offense back in his time because it takes full advantage of a big man's skills."

Jordan thrived in it, too, but that was in a different era.

It's post-Michael time now, and this is a whole different NBA.

Tiger Woods keeps his eye on the ball as he hits out of a bunker on the second hole during the third round of the Tour Championship Saturday in Houston. Woods made bogey on the hole.

Woods takes control

HOUSTON (AP) — The flags were raised to their regular height. The gallery was more enthusiastic with cheers. Players whose spirits were lifted by the memorial service for Payne Stewart managed to share a few laughs.

On a day when normalcy tried to return in the Tour Championship, the best indication was Tiger Woods on his way to yet another victory.

Returning from a moving tribute to Stewart, Woods wasted little time moving into the lead at Champions Golf Club on Saturday by making eight birdies in just about every weather condition imaginable and taking a three-shot lead going into the final round.

"I came to an understanding, a resolve," Woods said of Friday's service in Orlando, Fla. "And by doing that, today's round was a little easier emotionally than it was on Thursday. Seeing Tracey (Stewart) speak from the heart ... that's incredible.

"If she can have that kind of strength, then we should be able to do that easily."
