R E P O R T

[To accompany H.R. 7496]

[Including cost estimate of the Congressional Budget Office]

The Committee on Natural Resources, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 7496) to direct the Secretary of the Interior to install a plaque at the peak of Ram Head in the Virgin Islands National Park on St. John, United States Virgin Islands, to commemorate the slave rebellion that began on St. John in 1733, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon without amendment and recommends that the bill do pass.

PURPOSE OF THE BILL

The purpose of H.R. 7496 is to direct the Secretary of the Interior to install a plaque at the peak of Ram Head in the Virgin Islands National Park on St. John, United States Virgin Islands, to commemorate the slave rebellion that began on St. John in 1733.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

H.R. 7496 would direct the Secretary of the Interior to install a plaque at the peak of Ram Head in the Virgin Islands National Park on St. John, U.S. Virgin Islands, to commemorate the slave rebellion that began on St. John in 1733. The plaque would contain information regarding important facts about the slave rebellion, the collective suicide that occurred during the slave rebellion in the vicinity of Ram Head, and the significance of the slave rebellion to the history of St. John, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the United States.

According to the National Park Service, “The 1733 Slave Insurrection was the first instance in which enslaved people successfully took control of a colony. It served as a spark to later slave revolts that would take place.”¹ After half a year of fighting, opposition troops defeated the uprising on St. John. As described by one archaeologist and historian, “The last remaining rebels [died by] collective suicide As a last cry for freedom, the former slaves had drowned themselves, a collective action taken by many African slaves before them, hoping for their souls to re-join their homeland, families, and ancestors in Africa.”²

H.R. 7496 would complement the current interpretive work done by the National Park Service to educate visitors about the history of St. John. The park currently offers tours that mention the tragic history of the slave rebellion, signs identifying slave plantations and their history, and information on their website, which tells the story of the 1733 slave uprising.

SUMMARY ESTIMATES OF LEGISLATION ORDERED REPORTED

The Congressional Budget Act of 1974 requires the Congressional Budget Office, to the extent practicable, to prepare estimates of the budgetary effects of legislation ordered reported by Congressional authorizing committees. In order to provide the Congress with as much information as possible, the attached table summarizes information about the estimated direct spending and revenue effects of some of the legislation that has been ordered reported by the House Committee on Natural Resources during the 117th Congress. The legislation listed in this table generally would have small effects, if any, on direct spending or revenues, CBO estimates. Where possible, the table also provides information about the legislation's estimated effects on spending subject to appropriation and on intergovernmental and private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act.
